Congressional Quarterly services are primarily for newspapers and broadcasters at standard rates based on circulation and radio time rates respectively. Services are also available at standard rates to other media such as general magazines, forums, and publications of all political parties, civic groups, educational groups, veterans organizations, trade unions and trade associations. A school and library rate provides no publication or broadcasting rights. Written or oral use, direct or indirect, is reserved for current clients who pay for such rights in their regular editions, broadcasts, newsletters, bulletins or other releases. Special permission must be obtained before CQ may be used in special supplements, hand books, etc. Congressional Quarterly sources must be indicated if lack of credit jeopardizes any part of copyrights to any of its material.

Congressional Quarterly reserves second and subsequent rights in its services. Hence clients are not entitled to use back CQ material in any way that would cause Congressional Quarterly News Features to lose its rights and values in its own material. Non-clients wishing to quote or use material from any of its services must obtain written permission from Congressional Quarterly News Features, 1156 Nineteenth Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. Policy Statement . . .

"By providing a link between the local newspaper and Capitol Hill we hope Congressional Quarterly can help to make public opinion the only effective pressure group in the country. Since many citizens other than editors are also interested in Congress, we hope that they too will find Congressional Quarterly an aid to a better understanding of their government.

"Congressional Quarterly presents the facts in as complete, concise and unbiased form as we know how. The editorial comment on the acts and votes of Congress, we leave to our subscribers." Foreword, Congressional Quarterly, Vol. 1, 1945—Henrietta and Nelson Poynter, Editors.

CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY

What Is CQ?

Special Features of CQ Almanac

What Is Congressional Quarterly?

Congressional Quarterly is the term used to designate all the services performed by Congressional Quarterly News Features, a private enterprise devoted to producing full reference data on Congress and factual analyses of the issues before Congress.

These services include: special stories and features for newspapers; a current reference document on Congress, CQ Weekly Report, indexed quarterly; and the permanent reference volume, Congressional Quarterly Almanac.

Congressional Quarterly is nonpartisan and unbiased. It is complete, concise and convenient.

Until Congressional Quarterly began publication in 1945, there was no way for an editor or an interested citizen to find out about Congress and his own Representative and Senators without great expense or the use of official documents containing millions of words.

Congressional Quarterly is the only news bureau devoting exclusive attention to the United States Congress. Reproduction and quotation rights are reserved for its editorial clients, which include daily newspapers, magazines, radio broadcasters and publications of trade associations and unions.

Congressional Quarterly's staff organizes and indexes the vast stream of material pouring from Capitol Hill, from day to day, in session and out. Every week it reports on legislation, investigations, votes, lobby activities, political developments and major administrative actions and appointments.

Special Services

CQ provides its newspaper clients with three exclusive news stories a week. Each spotlights a major trend, legislative issue or political development concerning Congress.

Congressional Quarterly keeps individual voting records of every Member of the House and Senate on all roll-call votes. Blank forms for recording the votes of Members of the 79th through 84th Congresses are available. They can be filled in from CQ material, or CQ will complete them on assignment.

Congressional Quarterly stands ready at all times to answer queries about Congress.

CQ Weekly Report

The story of Congress as it unfolds from day to day is told in CQ Weekly Report, which includes:

Bills Introduced and Acted On -- A chronological listing, within categories, of all public bills introduced, with their sponsors' names, and a brief summary of action taken by the House or Senate on public bills.

Committee Roundup -- Committee hearings and action on important bills plus testimony and reports on major investigations.

Floor Action -- The provisions of important bills passed or rejected by the House or Senate, including amendments voted on and a summary of debate.

Vote Charts -- Every roll-call vote appears on a chart giving the party breakdown on the vote and how each Member of Congress voted. Members are listed by states.

Analysis of Issues -- Background stories and fact sheets on issues before Congress, election outlooks and campaign developments.

Pressures on Congress -- A continuing story of the forces exerted on Congressmen, presenting summaries of the legislative programs of key organizations on important bills and problems. The Weekly Report also lists all lobbyist registrations, salaries and expenditures.

Political Notes -- A weekly survey of political events and personalities, campaigns and elections affecting Congress and the Presidency. Another feature, State Roundup, highlights the political picture on the state level.

Congressional Quiz -- A weekly question-and-answer feature centered on issues affecting Congress and the Presidency.

Week in Congress -- A summary of the week's events, giving the top news in capsule form. During the session, another feature, Congressional Boxscore, traces the progress of major bills.

Index -- A quarterly, cross-referenced cumulative index providing a quick means of relating past events to new action as it occurs.

CQ Almanac

At the end of the year the Weekly Report and its indexes are augmented by the Congressional Quarterly Almanac, which organizes the past year's material by subject, instead of chronologically, for permanent reference.

Basic facts on the Members of Congress, texts of the President's messages to Congress, key achievements and votes of Congress are followed by detailed stories on the major legislation and investigations of the year. Sections on major nominations, lobby activities and political developments conclude the book.

The Almanac is a condensation of acts, amendments, committee activity, debate, hearings, investigations, vital statistics on lawmakers, lobby activitity, party policies and votes. It is organized into easy-to-find forms, whether the reader wants to know the provisions of a major law, the story on a controversial investigation, or the first name of his Senator.

Special Features of CQ Almanac

Voting Records

Voting Charts -- A complete record of every Member's stand on all roll-call issues. Members' names are listed alphabetically within states (or within major cities); party designations and, for House Members, Congressional district numbers are listed; a breakdown of the vote at the top of the chart shows how Republicans and Democrats divided on each issue.

CQ Poll -- Congressional Quarterly's unique poll of Members of Congress who failed to take a stand on significant roll-call votes. Members who were absent are sent ballots asking how they would have voted. CQ Poll results are incorporated in the Almanac voting charts.

(Note: Because of responses to CQ Poll, CQ voting charts occasionally differ from voting records in the official Congressional Record. In addition, they sometimes vary for another reason: A Member may rise days or weeks after a roll call and request that the record be corrected to show that he voted another way. If there is unanimous consent, and there usually is, the change is in the text of that day's Record; but no change is made in the original tally of votes until the bound volumes appear a year later. CQ Almanac voting charts incorporate all such changes.)

Key Votes -- The year's most crucial roll calls, and how every Member voted. Key votes by Members of the 81st Congress on historic issues from 1919-1944 were assembled in CQ Almanac, Vol. V, 1949, pp. 100-116. For collected key votes from 1945-1951, see CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, 1951, pp. 722-743. For key votes since 1951, see each annual Almanac.

Lobby Roundup

Pressure Groups -- CQ covers the neglected phase of the story of Congress: organizational stands and recommendations on pending measures. A summary of how the lobbies fared during the year appears in the Lobby Roundup section. For more detailed information about lobby stands on specific issues, see committee "Testimony" accompanying each major legislative story and the "Group Stands" section at the end of many stories.

Lobby Registrations -- Lists of lobbyists who register during the session, the organizations they represent, their legislative interests, salaries, expenses, previous registrations, etc. Congressional Quarterly has listed registrants since passage of the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act, starting in CQ Almanac, Vol. III, 1947, p. 759.

Lobby Spending -- Analysis of lobby expenditures, including a listing of the top spenders, as reported under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act.

CQ Features

Politics -- Election results and analysis, reported spending by political committees and campaign contributions.

President's Boxscore -- A detailed analysis of the President's legislative program and how it fared in Congress.

Investigations -- An annual report on the scope, cost and outcome of Congressional probes, plus detailed stories on important investigations.

Membership, Committees -- Lists of current Members of Congress and Congressional committees. For each individual Member's committee assignment, see that Member's name in the Index.

Seniority -- Listing of Members according to seniority ranking, which determines each Congressman's committee assignments, chairmanships and other perquisites.

Ages, Professions -- Essential personal facts and figures, experience of each Member of Congress appear in chart form.

How a Bill is Passed -- An explanation of the complex legislative process, from the introduction of a bill to its final enactment into law.

Glossary of Congressional Terms -- Provides definitions of key parliamentary words and phrases.

Voting Yardsticks

Congressional Quarterly offers exclusive statistical analyses of roll-call voting, presented in Member charts and graphics. These analyses show: the measure of support each Member gave to the President; his support of the majority of his own party and the bipartisan majority and his voting participation record. The regular yardstick features are:

Support of President -- How frequently each Member voted "for" and "against" the President on roll-call tests of his legislative program and leadership. Analysis shows: individual, state and party scores; President's victories and defeats; and role of Democrats and Republicans in supplying winning margins.

Party Unity -- The frequency with which a Member voted in agreement with the majority of his own party on roll calls which split Republicans and Democrats along partisan lines.

Opposition to Party -- How often a Member voted in opposition to the majority of his party on a Party Unity Vote.

Bipartisan Support and Opposition -- The percentage of a Member's votes in agreement with, and opposition to, the bipartisan majority on roll calls on which majorities of both parties voted together.

Voting Participation -- Frequency with which each Member voted.

To Check A Congressman . . .

To gauge his activity, locate his name in the Index. Here are listed Congressional committees on which he served and the major legislation in which he played a significant role during the year. Page references to important investigations that he took part in also are included.

Voting Record -- For a quick survey of the Congressman's voting on the crucial issues of the year, check for his name in the charts entitled "Key Votes."

For a complete record of his voting in any comprehensive field -- such as Agriculture or Foreign Policy -- check the list of Roll-Call Votes (p. 6) that were taken in the House or Senate. Then turn to the vote chart on the page indicated.

CQ lists every record vote for every Member of Congress. Senate votes appear together in chronological order, as do House votes. To find a Congressman's complete record on roll-call votes for the year, check all the charts for the appropriate chamber.

To determine how often he supported or opposed President Eisenhower's legislative proposals, as measured by his stand on selected Eisenhower-issue roll-call votes, see the "Eisenhower Support" charts in the Individual Performances section of the volume.

In the same section, check the "Party Unity" charts. The number of times he voted with a majority of his own political party, and the number of times he opposed it, are tabulated there on a percentage basis. The "Bipartisan Support" charts indicate how often he went along with majorities of both parties on roll-call votes.

The frequency with which he took a stand on issues that came to a roll-call vote can be determined by reference to his percentages in the "Voting Participation" and "On The Record" charts. These give the percentage of times he actually voted, or otherwise announced his stand publicly, or answered the CQ Poll.

Bills Sponsored -- Check the bills he introduced. To do this, refer again to the Index. Measures he introduced will be listed by bill number under his name, together with the general field to which they pertained. For a summary of each bill's purpose, and the name of the committee to which it was referred, turn to the "Bills Introduced" section and locate, under each of the categories in which he submitted legislation, the bills he sponsored.

To discover whether Congress acted on the bills he introduced, check the "Bills Acted On" section, which lists bills that received committee or floor action.

Past Record -- Check the Congressman's past record. Key votes for each year since 1951 appear in the Almanacs for those years. Key votes of 1945-1951 are in the 1951 Almanac, pp. 722-43. The most significant roll calls for 1919-1944 are in the 1949 Almanac, pp. 100-116. Other actions by the Congressman, beginning with the 79th Congress, may be found in the 1945 Almanac and succeeding volumes.

Finally, evaluate the Congressman's activity in relation to his opportunities. For example, note his committee positions, his seniority, and the personal data appearing in the "Ages and Professions" chart.

To Check A Bill . . .

CQ Almanac offers these four main paths for checking legislation:

Bills introduced Bills acted on Public laws
Legislative section text.

In the Bills Introduced and Acted On sections, information on legislation is broken down into Congressional Quarterly's eight regular categories: Agriculture, Appropriations, Education and Welfare, Foreign Policy, Labor, Military and Veterans, Miscellaneous and Administrative, Taxes and Economic Policy.

Bills Introduced -- Every public bill and resolution introduced during the year is listed under subject categories, chronologically by bill, and then resolution, numbers.

Bills Acted On -- Every public bill and resolution which was reported from committee or acted on by House or Senate is listed under subject categories and divided into "Action Completed" and "Unfinished Business" sections.

Public Laws -- All public laws enacted during the year are listed in numerical order and described briefly.

Legislative Section Text -- The legislative history of major bills acted on during the year is presented in the following general sequence:

The bill's number, significant dates in its passage through Congress, final public law number.

Summary of the bill's primary purpose and most notable provisions.

Detailed analysis of provisions, in its final legislative stage.

Background and history of issues involved, keyed to previous Almanacs for past developments.

Relation to the President's program -- his requests, pronouncements.

Committee hearings, votes, reports. Includes testimony of interested groups, important amendments to the bill while in committee, majority and minority reports.

Floor debate pro and con, highlighting principal arguments of both sides.

All roll-call votes.

Amendments accepted and rejected.

Passage or rejection of bill in both chambers.

Conference proceedings in the case of differing House and Senate versions. Outstanding points in dispute and how they were reconciled.

Presidential comments upon enactment of the bill.

84th Congress, Second Session: Party Ratios . . . .

Democrats continued in control of Congress in 1956, as in 1955, although their ranks were thinned by deaths and resignations.

Sen. Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.) Nov. 30 became the oldest person ever to serve in Congress. On that day he beat the record of Rep. Robert L. Doughton (D N.C.), who retired from the House in 1952 at the age of 89 years, one month and 27 days. Green June 17 became the oldest person ever to serve in the Senate when he reached the age of 88 years, eight months and 15 days. The previous longevity record had been set by Sen. Justin Smith Morrill (R Vt.), who died in office in 1898.

Party Ratios

In the Senate, Democrats maintained their 49-47 vote lead in 1956. Three Democratic vacancies were filled by Democrats, leaving the party ratio unchanged.

In the House, the party breakdown when the session began was 230-203, with two Democratic vacancies. Two more vacancies -- one Democratic and one Republican -- occurred before the session ended; two Democratic seats were filled. Two Democrats and one Republican died after Congress adjourned.

A comparison of party ratios during the 83rd and 84th Congresses:

	Senate			House
	GOP	DEM	IND	GOP	DEM	IND
Jan. 3, 1953	48	47	1	221	211	1
Jan. 6, 1954	47†	48†	1	219	215	1
Jan. 5, 1955	47	48	1	203	231*	0
Aug. 2, 1955	47	49	0	203	232	0
Jan. 3, 1956	47	49	0	203	230	0
July 27, 1956	47	49	0	202*	231*	0

*One vacancy. Two vacancies.

Clifford R. Hope (R Kan.) -- Chairman, Republican Conference.

Richard M. Simpson (R Pa.) -- Vice Chairman, GOP Conference and Chairman, Republican Congressional Campaign Committee.

Richard H. Poff (R Va.) -- Secretary, GOP Conference.

Campaign Committees

Both Republicans and Democrats maintain committees in each house to assist candidates for election to Congress. Following is a brief description of these committees and their election-year membership.

Democratic National Congressional Committee -- Commonly known as the Congressional Campaign Committee, it was created in 1882 to aid in the election of Democratic Members of the House. The committee's membership consists of one person from each state and territory that has Democratic representation in the House. Each Democratic delegation selects its representative for the committee at the beginning of each Congress.

Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee -- An autonomous group formed to aid in the election of the party's candidates for the U.S. Senate. It usually consists of five to nine members. The Democratic leader of the Senate designates the chairman, who chooses his committee members. Members are appointed for two years and are customarily reappointed, but no Senator serves on the committee when he himself is up for re-election. Membership of the committee in 1956:

George A. Smathers (Fla.), chairman; Hubert H. Humphrey (Minn.), vice chairman; John J. Sparkman (Ala.), Patrick V. McNamara (Mich.), Stuart Symington (Mo.), Richard L. Neuberger (Ore.) and Henry M. Jackson (Wash.).

National Republican Congressional Committee -- Organized in 1866 to assist Republican candidates for the House of Representatives in their campaigns. Its members consist of one Representative from each state having Republican representation in the House. Members are selected at the beginning of each Congress by a conference of the entire Republican membership of the House.

. . . Party Leaders, Membership Turnover

National Republican Senatorial Committee -- Created and organized by the Senate Republican Conference Committee. It provides campaign assistance for Republican candidates for the U.S. Senate. Membership of the committee in 1956:

Andrew F. Schoeppel (Kan.), chairman; John J. Williams (Del.), Henry C. Dworshak (Idaho), Frederick G. Payne (Maine), Charles E. Potter (Mich.), Carl T. Curtis (Neb.), George W. Malone (Nev.), Irving M. Ives (N.Y.) and Frank A. Barrett (Wyo.).

Turnover In 1956

In its second year, the 84th Congress lost seven Members by death, two by resignation. Three Members had died previously, bringing the total loss to 12 -- well below the average for the preceding five Congresses. (1955 Almanac, p. 17)

Three Representatives died after adjournment of the second session. Four House vacancies were not filled.

Three new Senators and two new Representatives were chosen during the 1956 session of Congress:

Elmer J. Holland (D) of Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 24 was elected to fill the unexpired term of the late Rep. Vera D. Buchanan (D) in Pennsylvania's 30th District. Holland, a state senator and former U.S. Representative (1942-43), was sworn in Feb. 8. Committee assignment: Banking and Currency.

James C. Healey (D), Bronx attorney, Feb. 7 won a special Congressional election in New York's 22nd District. Healey, who was sworn in Feb. 20, replaced Sidney A. Fine (D). Fine resigned Jan. 2 to become a State Supreme Court judge. Healey's committee assignment: Banking and Currency.

William R. Laird III (D), W. Va. state tax commissioner, was named March 13 to fill the Senate vacancy created by the death of Harley Kilgore (D). Laird was sworn in March 15. Committee assignments: Interior and Insular Affairs, Post Office and Civil Service.

Thomas A. Wofford (D) of Greenville, S.C., April 5 was appointed to the Senate vacancy created by the April 4 resignation of Strom Thurmond. Thurmond fulfilled a 1954 campaign pledge by resigning to stand for election in the primary. He was elected as a write-in candidate in 1954. Wofford's committee assignments: Government Operations, Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Public Works.

Robert Humphreys (D), Kentucky highway commissioner, June 21 was appointed to the Senate seat left vacant by the death of Alben W. Barkley (D). He was sworn in June 25. Committee assignments: Labor and Public Welfare, Public Works.

Kathryn E. Granahan (D Pa.) was elected Nov. 6 to the seat left vacant by the death of her husband, William T. Granahan (D). Mrs. Granahan was elected both as a Member of the 85th Congress and as a Member of the dying 84th. Her election to the short term meant she would rank ahead of other freshman Members in seniority in 1957.

Three short-term Senators also were elected Nov. 6 and officially became Members of the 84th Congress -- one for the second time. Ex-Sen. W. Chapman Revercomb (R W.Va., 1943-49) was elected for the remainder of the term of the late Sen. Kilgore. Ex-Sen. Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) was elected for the remainder of his own term. Ex-Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky., 1946-49, 1953-55) was elected for the remainder of the term of the late Sen. Barkley. Revercomb's term would expire in 1958, Thurmond's and Cooper's in 1960.

Seniority

Senate rank is generally determined according to the official date of beginning of Member's service -- Jan. 3, except in the case of Members appointed or elected to fill unexpired terms, when date of appointment or certification or swearing in determines rank.

If Members are sworn in on the same day, those with prior political experience take precedence. Counted as political experience, in order of importance, are Senatorial, Gubernatorial, and House service. Information on prior experience is given below only when it affects a Member's seniority. Dates following names refer to beginning of present service.

Seniority

House rank is generally determined according to the official date of beginning of Member's service -- Jan. 3, except in the case of Members elected to fill vacancies, when date of election determines rank.

If Members enter House on the same day, those with prior House experience take precedence. Information on prior experience is given below only when it affects a Member's seniority. Dates following names refer to beginning of present service.

BASIC FACTS ON CONGRESS

Membership -- 96 Senators, two from each state; 435 Representatives, ranging from 43 from New York to one each from Delaware, Nevada, Vermont and Wyoming. While the number of Representatives has remained constant since 1913, apportionment of seats among the various states is revised every ten years, according to the national census. The last reapportionment, based on the 1950 census, affected 16 states -- nine lost seats while seven states gained new seats.

Elections -- A Senator's term runs for six years, a Representative's for two years. One-third of the Senatorial seats are up for election every two years. If a Senator dies or resigns, the governor of his state may appoint a successor to serve until an election is held for the Senate seat. A vacancy in the House can be filled only through an election.

Senators and Representatives are elected in every state except Maine on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in even years. Maine holds its Congressional elections on the first Monday after the first Tuesday in September.

Qualifications -- A Senator, when sworn into office, must be at least 30 years old, a U.S. citizen for nine years, and live in the state from which he is elected. A Representative must be at least 25, a U.S. citizen for seven years, and live in the state from which he is elected.

Under the Constitution, each chamber is the judge of the qualifications of its Members. If the election of a Senator or Representative is challenged and the issue brought to the floor of the chamber concerned before the individual is sworn in, his right to take office is determined by a majority vote of the chamber. Once a Member of Congress is sworn in, he may be expelled only by a two-thirds vote of the Members of the house in which he is serving.

Salaries -- A Senator or Representative receives an annual salary of $22,500, plus specific allowances for office help, stationery, telephones and telegrams, travel, and office rent in his home District or state, if space in a federal building is not furnished.

Officers -- The presiding officer of the Senate is the Vice President of the United States, called the President of the Senate. The House is presided over by a Speaker who is elected by his fellow Members of the House at the start of each Congress.

84th CONGRESS -- HOUSE: Ages,

As of Jan. 3, 1956.

This chart lists the Membership of the House for the 84th Congress, second session, as of January 3, 1956. Column 1 shows the age of each Representative as of Jan. 1, 1956; column 10 shows the Representative's unofficial seniority within his party based both on years served and prior political experience. (For explanation of how seniority is achieved, see p. 21.)

Check marks (√) in columns 2 through 9 indicate prior profession(s) of each Representative, and whether he is a veteran. See Chart Key (at right) for description of each numbered column. Summary shows number of persons with experience in indicated profession, with breakdown by party.

For changes following that date see page 17.

This chart lists the Membership of the House for the 84th Congress, second session, as of January 3, 1956. Column 1 shows the age of each Representative as of Jan. 1, 1956; column 10 shows the Representative's unofficial seniority within his party based both on years served and prior political experience. (For explanation of how seniority is achieved, see p. 21.)

Check marks (√) in columns 2 through 9 indicate prior profession(s) of each Representative, and whether he is a veteran. See Chart Key (at right) for description of each numbered column. Summary shows number of persons with experience in indicated profession, with breakdown by party.

84th CONGRESS -- SENATE

Ages, Professions, Veteran Status, Seniority

As of Jan. 1, 1956. For changes following that date, see p. 17.

This chart lists the Membership of the Senate for the 84th Congress, second session, as of January 1, 1956. Column 1 shows the age of each Senator as of Jan. 1, 1956; column 10 shows the Senator's unofficial seniority within his party based both on years served and prior political experience. (For explanation of how seniority is achieved, see p. 18.)

Check marks (√) in columns 2 through 9 indicate prior profession(s) of each Senator, and whether he is a veteran. See Chart Key (at right) for description of each numbered column. Summary shows number of persons with experience in indicated profession, with breakdown by party.

SENATE AND HOUSE COMMITTEES, SUBCOMMITTEES

Following is a list of members of the:
15 Senate standing committees, their subcommittees and the Senate Select Small Business Committee;
19 House standing committees, their subcommittees and the House Select Small Business Committee;
5 major joint committees and their subcommittees.

Each committee's name is listed in boldface type and is followed by a brief description of its jurisdiction. Subcommittee names are underlined.

In each column, Democrats are listed on the left, Republicans on the right. Members are listed in the order of their committee seniority.

An asterisk (*) indicates an ex officio member of a subcommittee.

JOINT COMMITTEES, SUBCOMMITTEES

Following is a list of the five major Joint Congressional Committees and their Subcommittees. Joint Committees are set up to examine specific questions, and their existence may be continued or terminated as the need exists. Membership is drawn from both chambers and both parties. When a Senator serves as chairman, the vice chairman usually is a Representative, and vice versa.

Other Joint Committees are those on the Disposition of Executive Papers, Library of Congress, Printing, Navajo-Hopi Indian Administration and Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures.

Atomic Energy

Atomic Energy Commission; development, use and control of atomic energy generally.

84th CONGRESS... 2nd SESSION PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGES

The Complete Text . . .

EISENHOWER'S STATE OF THE UNION MESSAGE

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

The opening of this new year must arouse in us all grateful thanks to a kind Providence whose protection has been ever present and whose bounty has been manifold and abundant. The State of the Union today demonstrates what can be accomplished under God by a free people; by their vision, their understanding of national problems, their initiative, their self-reliance, their capacity for work -- and by their willingness to sacrifice whenever sacrifice is needed.

In the past three years, responding to what our people want their Government to do, the Congress and the Executive have done much in building a stronger, better America. There has been broad progress in fostering the energies of our people, in providing greater opportunity for the satisfaction of their needs, and in fulfilling their demands for the strength and security of the Republic.

Our country is at peace. Our security posture commands respect. A spiritual vigor marks our national life. Our economy, approaching the $400 billion mark, is at an unparalleled level of prosperity. The national income is more widely and fairly distributed than ever before. The number of Americans at work has reached an all-time high. As a people, we are achieving ever higher standards of living -- earning more, producing more, consuming more, building more and investing more than ever before.

Virtually all sectors of our society are sharing in these good times. Our farm families, if we act wisely, imaginatively and promptly to strengthen our present farm programs, can also look forward to sharing equitably in the prosperity they have helped to create.

SECURITY STRENGTHENED

War in Korea ended two and a half years ago. The collective security system has been powerfully strengthened. Our defenses have been reinforced at sharply reduced costs. Programs to expand world trade and to harness the atom for the betterment of mankind have been carried forward. Our economy has been freed from governmental wage and price controls. Inflation has been halted; the cost of living stabilized.

Government spending has been cut by more than $10 billion. Nearly 300,000 positions have been eliminated from the Federal payroll. Taxes have been substantially reduced. A balanced budget is in prospect. Social security has been extended to 10 million more Americans and unemployment insurance to four million more. Unprecedented advances in civil rights have been made. The long-standing and deep-seated problems of agriculture have been forthrightly attacked.

This record of progress has been accomplished with a self-imposed caution against unnecessary and unwise interference in the private affairs of our people, of their communities and of the several States.

If we of the Executive and Legislative Branches, keeping this caution ever in mind, address ourselves to the business of the year before us -- and to the unfinished business of last year -- with resolution, the outlook is bright with promise.

Many measures of great national importance recommended last year to the Congress still demand immediate attention -- legislation for school and highway construction; health and immigration legislation; water resources legislation; legislation to complete the implementation of our foreign economic policy; such labor legislation as amendments of the Labor-Management Relations Act, extension of the Fair Labor Standards Act to additional groups not now covered, and occupational safety legislation; and legislation for construction of an atomic-powered exhibit vessel.

BROADEN OPPORTUNITY

Many new items of business likewise require our attention -- measures that will further promote the release of the energies of our people; that will broaden opportunity for all of them; that will advance the Republic in its leadership toward a just peace; measures, in short, that are essential to the building of an ever-stronger, ever-better America.

Every political and economic guide supports a valid confidence that wise effort will be rewarded by an even more plentiful harvest of human benefit than we now enjoy. Our resources are too many, our principles too dynamic, our purposes too worthy and the issues at stake too immense for us to entertain doubt or fear. But our responsibilities require that we approach this year's business with a sober humility.

A heedless pride in our present strength and position would blind us to the facts of the past, to the pitfalls of the future. We must walk ever in the knowledge that we are enriched by a heritage earned in the labor and sacrifice of our forebears; that, for our children's children, we are trustees of a great Republic and a time-tested political system; that we prosper as a cooperating member of the family of nations.

In this light, the Administration has continued work on its program for the Republic, begun three years ago. Because the vast spread of national and human interests is involved within it, I shall not in this Message attempt its detailed delineation. Instead, from time to time during this Session, there will be submitted to the Congress specific recommendations within specific fields. In the comprehensive survey required for their preparation, the Administration is guided by enduring objectives. The first is:

THE DISCHARGE OF OUR WORLD RESPONSIBILITY.

Our world policy and our actions are dedicated to the achievement of peace with justice for all nations.

With this purpose, we move in a wide variety of ways and through many agencies to remove the pall of fear; to strengthen the ties with our partners and to improve the cooperative cohesion of the free world; to reduce the burden of armaments, and to stimulate and inspire action among all nations for a world of justice and prosperity and peace. These national objectives are fully supported by both our political parties.

In the past year, our search for a more stable and just peace has taken varied forms. Among the most important were the two conferences at Geneva, in July and in the fall of last year. We explored the possibilities of agreement on critical issues that jeopardize the peace.

The July meeting of Heads of Government held our promise to the world of moderation in the bitterness, of word and action, which tends to generate conflict and war. All were in agreement that a nuclear war would be an intolerable disaster which must not be permitted to occur. But in October, when the Foreign Ministers met again, the results demonstrated conclusively that the Soviet leaders are not yet willing to create the indispensable conditions for a secure and lasting peace.

COLD WAR

Nevertheless, it is clear that the conflict between international communism and freedom has taken on a new complexion.

We know the Communist leaders have often practiced the tactics of retreat and zigzag. We know that Soviet and Chinese communism still poses a serious threat to the free world. And in the Middle East recent Soviet moves are hardly compatible with the reduction of international tension.

Yet Communist tactics against the free nations have shifted in emphasis from reliance on violence and the threat of violence to reliance on division, enticement and duplicity. We must be well prepared to meet the current tactics which pose a dangerous though less obvious threat. At the same time, our policy must be dynamic as well as flexible, designed primarily to forward the achievement of our own objectives rather than to meet each shift and change on the Communist front. We must act in the firm assurance that the fruits of freedom are more attractive and desirable to mankind in the pursuit of happiness than the record of Communism.

In the face of Communist military power, we must, of course, continue to maintain an effective system of collective security. This involves two things -- a system which gives clear warning that armed aggression will be met by joint action of the free nations, and deterrent military power to make that warning effective. Moreover, the awesome power of the atom must be made to serve as a guardian of the free community and of the peace.

In the last year, the free world has seen major gains for the system of collective security: the accession to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and Western European Union of the sovereign Federal German Republic; the developing cooperation under the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty; and the formation in the Middle East of the Baghdad Pact among Turkey, Iraq, Iran, Pakistan and the United Kingdom. In our own hemisphere, the inter-American system has continued to show its vitality in maintaining peace and a common approach to world problems. We now have security pacts with more than 40 other nations.

UNITED NATIONS SUPPORT

In the pursuit of our national purposes, we have been steadfast in our support of the United Nations, now entering its second decade with a wider membership and ever-increasing influence and usefulness. In the release of our 15 fliers from Communist China, an essential prelude was the world opinion mobilized by the General Assembly which condemned their imprisonment and demanded their liberation. The successful Atomic Energy Conference held in Geneva under United Nations auspices and our Atoms for Peace program have been practical steps toward the world-wide use of this new energy source. Our sponsorship of such use has benefited our relations with other countries. Active negotiations are now in progress to create an International Agency to foster peaceful uses of atomic energy.

During the past year the crucial problem of disarmament has moved to the forefront of practical political endeavor. At Geneva, I declared the readiness of the United States to exchange blueprints of the military establishments of our nation and the USSR, to be confirmed by reciprocal aerial reconnaissance. By this means, I felt mutual suspicions could be allayed and an atmosphere developed in which negotiations looking toward limitation of arms would have improved chances of success.

In the United Nations Subcommittee on Disarmament last fall, this proposal was explored and the United States also declared itself willing to include reciprocal ground inspection of key points. By the overwhelming vote of 56 to 7, the United Nations on Dec. 16 endorsed these proposals and gave them a top priority. Thereby, the issue is placed squarely before the bar of world opinion. We shall persevere in seeking a general reduction of armaments under effective inspection and control which are essential safeguards to ensure reciprocity and protect the security of all.

In the coming year much remains to be done.

While maintaining our military deterrent, we must intensify our efforts to achieve a just peace. In Asia we shall continue to give help to nations struggling to maintain their freedom against the threat of Communist coercion or subversion. In Europe, we shall endeavor to increase not only the military strength of the North Atlantic Alliance but also its political cohesion and unity of purpose. We shall give such assistance as is feasible to the recently renewed effort of Western European nations to achieve a greater measure of integration, such as in the field of peaceful uses of atomic energy.

In the Near East we shall spare no effort in seeking to promote a fair solution of the tragic dispute between the Arab States and Israel, all of whom we want as our friends. The United States is ready to do its part to assure enduring peace in that area. We hope that both sides will make the contributions necessary to achieve that purpose. In Latin America, we shall continue to cooperate vigorously in trade and other measures designed to assist economic progress in the area.

OTC MEMBERSHIP

Strong economic ties are an essential element in our free world partnership. Increasing trade and investment help all of us prosper together. Gratifying progress has been made in this direction, most recently by the three-year extension of our trade agreements legislation.

I most earnestly request that the Congress approve our membership in the Organization for Trade Cooperation which would assist the carrying out of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to which we have been a party since 1948. Our membership in the OTC will provide the most effective and expeditious means for removing discriminations and restrictions against American exports and in making our trade agreements truly reciprocal. United States membership in the Organization will evidence our continuing desire to cooperate in promoting an expanded trade among the free nations. Thus the Organization, as proposed, is admirably suited to our own interests and to those of like-minded nations in working for steady expansion of trade and closer economic cooperation. Being strictly an administrative entity, the Organization for Trade Cooperation cannot, of course, alter the control by Congress of the tariff, import and customs policies of the United States.

We need to encourage investment overseas by avoiding unfair tax duplications, and to foster foreign trade by further simplification and improvement of our customs legislation.

We must sustain and fortify our Mutual Security Program. Because the conditions of poverty and unrest in less developed areas make their people a special target of international communism, there is a need to help them achieve the economic growth and stability necessary to preserve their independence against communist threats and enticements.

In order that our friends may better achieve the greater strength that is our common goal, they need assurance of continuity in economic assistance for development projects and programs which we approve and which require a period of years for planning and completion. Accordingly, I ask Congress to grant limited authority to make longer-term commitments for assistance to such projects, to be fulfilled from appropriations to be made in future fiscal years.

STRENGTHEN ECONOMIC POLICY

These various steps will powerfully strengthen the economic foundation of our foreign policy. Together with constructive action abroad, they will maintain the present momentum toward general economic progress and vitality of the free world.

In all things, change is the inexorable law of life. In much of the world the ferment of change is working strongly; but grave injustices are still uncorrected. We must not, by any sanction of ours, help to perpetuate these wrongs. I have particularly in mind the oppressive division of the German people, the bondage of millions elsewhere, and the exclusion of Japan from United Nations membership.

We shall keep these injustices in the forefront of human consciousness and seek to maintain the pressure of world opinion to right these vast wrongs in the interest both of justice and secure peace.

Injustice thrives on ignorance. Because an understanding of the truth about America is one of our most powerful forces, I am recommending a substantial increase in budgetary support of the United States Information Agency.

The sum of our international effort should be this: the waging of peace, with as much resourcefulness, with as great a sense of dedication and urgency, as we have ever mustered in defense of our country in time of war. In this effort, our weapon is not force. Our weapons are the principles and ideas embodied in our historic traditions, applied with the same vigor that in the past made America a living promise of freedom for all mankind.

To accomplish these vital tasks, all of us should be concerned with the strength, effectiveness and morale of our State Department and our Foreign Service.

Another guide in the preparation of the Administration's program is:

THE CONSTANT IMPROVEMENT OF OUR NATIONAL SECURITY.

Because peace is the keystone of our national policy, our defense program emphasizes an effective flexible type of power calculated to deter or repulse any aggression and to preserve the peace. Short of war, we have never had military strength better adapted to our needs with improved readiness for emergency use. The maintenance of this strong military capability for the indefinite future will continue to call for a large share of our national budget. Our military programs must meet the needs of today. To build less would expose the nation to aggression. To build excessively, under the influence of fear, could defeat our purposes and impair or destroy the very freedom and economic system our military defenses are designed to protect.

We have improved the effectiveness and combat readiness of our forces by developing and making operational new weapons and by integrating the latest scientific developments, including new atomic weapons, into our military plans. We continue to push the production of the most modern military aircraft. The development of long-range missiles has been on an accelerated basis for some time. We are moving as rapidly as practicable towards nuclear-powered aircraft and ships. Combat capability, especially in terms of fire-power, has been substantially increased. We have made the adjustments in personnel permitted by the cessation of the Korean War, the buildup of our allies and the introduction of new weapons. The services are all planning realistically on a long-term basis.

To strengthen our continental defenses the United States and Canada, in the closest cooperation, have substantially augmented early warning networks. Great progress is being made in extending surveillance of the Arctic, the Atlantic and the Pacific approaches to North America.

In the last analysis our real strength lies in the calibre of the men and women in our Armed Forces, active and Reserve. Much has been done to attract and hold capable military personnel, but more needs to be done. This year, I renew my request of last year for legislation to provide proper medical care for military dependents and a more equitable survivors' benefit program. The Administration will prepare additional recommendations designed to achieve the same objectives, including career incentives for medical and dental officers and nurses, and increases in the proportion of regular officers.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Closely related to the mission of the Defense Department is the task of the Federal Civil Defense Administration. A particular point of relationship arises from the fact that the key to civil defense is the expanded continental defense program, including the distant early warning system. Our federal civil defense authorities have made progress in their program, and now comprehensive studies are being conducted jointly by the Federal Civil Defense Administration, the States and critical target cities to determine the best procedures that can be adopted in case of an atomic attack. We must strengthen Federal assistance to the States and cities in devising the most effective common defense.

We have a broad and diversified mobilization base. We have the facilities, materials, skills and knowledge rapidly to expand the production of things we need for our defense whenever they are required. But mobilization base requirements change with changing technology and strategy. We must maintain flexibility to meet new requirements. I am requesting, therefore, that the Congress once again extend the Defense Production Act.

Of great importance to our nation's security is a continuing alertness to internal subversive activity within or without our government. This Administration will not relax its efforts to deal forthrightly and vigorously in protection of this government and its citizens against subversion, at the same time fully protecting the constitutional rights of all citizens.

A third objective of the Administration is:

FISCAL INTEGRITY.

A public office is, indeed, a public trust. None of its aspects is more demanding than the proper management of the public finances. I refer now not only to the indispensable virtues of plain honesty and trustworthiness but also the the prudent, effective and conscientious use of tax money. I refer also to the attitude of mind that makes efficient and economical service to the people a watchword in our government.

Over the long term, a balanced budget is a sure index to thrifty management -- in a home, in a business or in the Federal Government. When achievement of a balanced budget is for long put off in a business or home, bankruptcy is the result. But in similar circumstances a government resorts to inflation of the money supply. This inevitably results in depreciation of the value of the money, and an increase in the cost of living. Every investment in personal security is threatened by this process of inflation, and the real values of the people's savings whether in the form of insurance, bonds, pension and retirement funds or savings accounts are thereby shriveled.

We have made long strides these past three years in bringing our Federal finances under control. The deficit for fiscal year 1953 was almost $9.5 billion. Larger deficits seemed certain -- deficits which would have depreciated the value of the dollar and pushed the cost of living still higher. But government waste and extravagance were searched out. Nonessential activities were dropped. Government expenses were carefully scrutinized. Total spending was cut by $14 billion below the amount planned by the previous Administration for the fiscal year 1954.

This made possible -- and it was appropriate in the existing circumstances of transition to a peacetime economy -- the largest tax cut in any year in our history. Almost $7.5 billion were released and every taxpayer in the country benefited. Almost two-thirds of the savings went directly to individuals. This tax cut also helped to build up the economy, to make jobs in industry and to increase the production of the many things desired to improve the scale of living for the great majority of Amercans.

BUDGET TO BALANCE

The strong expansion of the economy, coupled with a constant care for efficiency in government operations and an alert guard against waste and duplication, has brought us to a prospective balance between income and expenditure. This is being done while we continue to strengthen our military security.

I expect the budget to be in balance during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1956.

I shall propose a balanced budget for the next fiscal year ending June 30, 1957.

But the balance we are seeking cannot be accomplished without the continuing every-day effort of the Executive and Legislative Branches to keep expenditures under control. It will also be necessary to continue all of the present excise taxes without any reduction and the corporation income taxes at their present rates for another year beyond next April 1st.

It is unquestionably true that our present tax level is very burdensome and, in the interest of long term and continuous economic growth, should be reduced when we prudently can. It is essential, in the sound management of the Government's finances, that we be mindful of our enormous national debt and of the obligation we have toward future Americans to reduce that debt whenever we can appropriately do so. Under conditions of high peacetime prosperity, such as now exist, we can never justify going further into debt to give ourselves a tax cut at the expense of our children. So, in the present state of our financial affairs, I earnestly believe that a tax cut can be deemed justifiable only when it will not unbalance the budget, a budget which makes provision for some reduction, even though modest, in our national debt. In this way we can best maintain fiscal integrity.

A fourth aim of our program is:

TO FOSTER A STRONG ECONOMY.

Our competitive enterprise system depends on the energy of free human beings, limited by prudent restraints in law, using free markets to plan, organize and distribute production, and spurred by the prospect of reward for successful effort. This system has developed our resources. It has marvelously expanded our productive capacity. Against the record of all other economic systems devised through the ages, this competitive system has proved the most creative user of human skills in the development of physical resources, and the richest rewarder of human effort.

This is still true in this era when improved living standards and rising national requirements are accompanied by swift advances in technology and rapid obsolescence in machines and methods. Typical of these are the strides made in construction of plants to produce electrical energy from atomic power and of laboratories and installations for the application of this new force in industry, agriculture and the healing arts. These developments make it imperative -- to assure effective functioning of our enterprise system -- that the Federal Government concern itself with certain broad areas of our economic life. Most important of these is:

Agriculture

Our farm people are not sharing as they should in the general prosperity. They alone of all major groups have seen their incomes decline rather than rise. They are caught between two millstones -- rising production costs and declining prices. Such harm to a part of the national economy so vitally important to everyone is of great concern to us all. No other resource is so indispensable as the land that feeds and clothes us. No group is more fundamental to our national life than our farmers.

In successful prosecution of the war, the nation called for the utmost effort of its farmers. Their response was superb, their contribution unsurpassed. Farmers are not now to be blamed for the mountainous, price-depressing surpluses produced in response to wartime policies and laws that were too long continued. War markets are not the markets of peacetime. Failure to recognize that basic fact by a timely adjustment of wartime legislation brought its inevitable result in peacetime -- surpluses, lower prices and lower incomes for our farmers.

The dimensions of government responsibility are as broad and complex as the farm problem itself. We are here concerned not only with our essential continuing supplies of food and fiber, but also with a way of life. Both are indispensable to the well-being and strength of the nation. Consideration of these matters must be above and beyond politics. Our national farm policy, so vital to the welfare of farm people and all of us, must not become a field for political warfare. Too much is at stake.

Our farm people expect of us, who have responsibility for their government, understanding of their problems and the will to help solve them. Our objective must be to help bring production into balance with existing and new markets, at prices that yield farmers a return for their work in line with what other Americans get.

To reach this goal, deep-seated problems must be subjected to a stepped-up attack. There is no single easy solution. Rather, there must be a many-sided assault on the stubborn problems of surpluses, prices, costs and markets; and a steady, persistent, imaginative advance in the relationship between farmers and their government.

NEW STEPS

In a few days, by special message, I shall lay before the Congress my detailed recommendations for new steps that should be taken promptly to speed the transition in agriculture and thus assist our farmers to achieve their fair share of the national income.

Basic to this program will be a new attack on the surplus problem -- for even the best-conceived farm program cannot work under a multi-billion dollar weight of accumulated stocks.

I shall urge authorization of a soil bank program to alleviate the problem of diverted acres and an overexpanded agricultural plant. This will include an acreage reserve to reduce current and accumulated surpluses of crops in most serious difficulty, and a conservation reserve to achieve other needed adjustments in the use of agricultural resources. I shall urge measures to strengthen our surplus disposal activities.

I shall propose measures to strengthen individual commodity programs, to remove controls where possible, to reduce carryovers, and to stop further accumulations of surpluses. I shall ask the Congress to provide substantial new funds for an expanded drive on the research front, to develop new markets, new crops and new uses. The Rural Development Program to better the lot of low-income farm families deserves full Congressional support. The Great Plains Program must go forward vigorously. Advances on these and other fronts will pull down the price-depressing surpluses and raise farm income.

In this time of testing in agriculture, we should all together, regardless of party, carry forward resolutely with a sound and forward looking program on which farm people may confidently depend, now and for years to come.

I shall briefly mention four other subjects directly related to the well-being of the economy, preliminary to their fuller discussion in the Economic Report and later communications.

Resources Conservation

I wish to re-emphasize the critical importance of the wise use and conservation of our great natural resources of land, forests, minerals and water, and their long-range development consistent with our agricultural policy. Water in particular now plays an increasing role in industrial processes, in the irrigation of land, in electric power, as well as in domestic uses. At the same time, it has the potential of damage and disaster.

A comprehensive legislative program for water conservation will be submitted to the Congress during the Session. The development of our water resources cannot be accomplished overnight. The need is such that we must make faster progress and without delay. Therefore, I strongly recommend that action be taken at this Session on such wholly Federal projects as the Colorado River Storage Project and the Frying Pan-Arkansas Project; on the John Day partnership project, and other projects which provide for cooperative action between the Federal Government and non-Federal interests; and on legislation, which makes provision for Federal participation in small projects under the primary sponsorship of agencies of State and local government.

During the past year the areas of our National Parks have been expanded, and new wildlife refuges have been created. The visits of our people to the Parks have increased much more rapidly than have the facilities to care for them. The Administration will submit recommendations to provide more adequate facilities to keep abreast of the increasing interest of our people in the great outdoors.

Disaster Assistance

A modern community is a complex combination of skills, specialized buildings, machines, communications and homes. Most importantly it involves human lives. Disaster in many forms -- by flood, frost, high winds, for instance -- can destroy on a massive scale in a few hours the labor of many years.

Through the past three years, the Administration has repeatedly moved into action wherever disaster struck. The extent of State participation in relief activities, however, has been far from uniform and, in many cases, has been either inadequate or non-existent. Disaster assistance legislation requires overhauling and an experimental program of flood-damage indemnities should be undertaken. The Administration will make detailed recommendations on these subjects.

Area Redevelopment

We must help deal with the pockets of chronic unemployment that here and there mar the nation's general industrial prosperity. Economic changes in recent years have been often so rapid and far-reaching that areas committed to a single local resource or industrial activity have found themselves temporarily deprived of their markets and their livelihood.

Such conditions mean severe hardship for thousands of people as the slow process of adaptation to new circumstances goes on. This process can be speeded up. Last year I authorized a major study of the problem to find additional steps to supplement existing programs for the redevelopment of areas of chronic unemployment. Recommendations will be submitted, designed to supplement with Federal technical and loan assistance local efforts to get on with this vital job. Improving such communities must, of course, remain the primary responsibility of the people living there and of their States. But a soundly conceived Federal partnership program can be of real assistance to them in their efforts.

Highway Legislation

Legislation to provide a modern, interstate highway system is even more urgent this year than last, for 12 months have now passed in which we have fallen further behind in road construction needed for the personal safety, the general prosperity, the national security of the American people. During the year, the number of motor vehicles has increased from 58 to 61 million. During the past year over 38,000 persons lost their lives in highway accidents, while the fearful toll of injuries and property damage has gone on unabated.

In my message of February 22, 1955, I urged that measures be taken to complete the vital 40,000 mile interstate system over a period of 10 years at an estimated Federal cost of approximately $25 billion. No program was adopted.

If we are ever to solve our mounting traffic problem, the whole interstate system must be authorized as one project, to be completed approximately within the specified time. Only in this way can industry efficiently gear itself to the job ahead. Only in this way can the required planning and engineering be accomplished without the confusion and waste unavoidable in a piecemeal approach. Furthermore, as I pointed out last year, the pressing nature of this problem must not lead us to solutions outside the bounds of sound fiscal management. As in the case of other pressing problems, there must be an adequate plan of financing. To continue the drastically needed improvement in other national highway systems, I recommend the continuation of the Federal Aid Highway Program.

Aside from agriculture and the four subjects specifically mentioned, an integral part of our efforts to foster a strong and expanding free economy is keeping open the door of opportunity to new and small enterprises, checking monopoly and preserving a competitive environment. In this past year the steady improvement in the economic health of small business has reinforced the vitality of our competitive economy. We shall continue to help small business concerns to obtain access to adequate financing and to competent counsel on management, production and marketing problems.

FAIR COMPETITIVE OPPORTUNITY

Through measures already taken, opportunities for small-business participation in government procurement programs, including military procurement, are greatly improved. The effectiveness of these measures will become increasingly apparent. We shall continue to make certain that small business has a fair opportunity to compete and has an economic environment in which it may prosper.

In my message last year, I referred to the appointment of an advisory committee to appraise and report to me on the deficiencies as well as the effectiveness of existing Federal transportation policies. I have commended the fundamental purposes and objectives of the committee's report. I earnestly recommend that the Congress give prompt attention to the committee's proposals.

Essential to a prosperous economic environment for all business, small and large -- for agriculture and industry and commerce -- is efficiency in Government. To that end, exhaustive studies of the entire governmental structure were made by the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and the Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government -- the reports of these Commissions are now under intensive review and already in the process of implementation in important areas.

One specific and most vital Governmental function merits study and action by the Congress. As part of our program of promoting efficiency in Government and getting the fiscal situation in hand, the Post Office Department in the past three years has been overhauled. Nearly 1,000 new post offices have been provided. Financial practices have been modernized and transportation and operating methods are being constantly improved. A new wage and incentive plan for the half-million postal employees has been established. Never before has the postal system handled so much mail so quickly and so economically.

The Post Office Department faces two serious problems. First, much of its physical plant -- post offices and other buildings -- is obsolete and inadequate. Many new buildings and the modernization of present ones are essential if we are to have improved mail service. The second problem is the Department's fiscal plight. It now faces an annual deficit of one-half billion dollars.

Recommendations on postal facilities and on additional postal revenues will be submitted to the Congress.

THE RESPONSE TO HUMAN CONCERNS.

A fundamental belief shines forth in this Republic. We believe in the worth and dignity of the individual. We know that if we are to govern ourselves wisely -- in the tradition of America -- we must have the opportunity to develop our individual capacities to the utmost.

To fulfill the individual's aspirations in the American way of life, good education is fundamental. Good education is the outgrowth of good homes, good communities, good churches and good schools. Today our schools face pressing problems -- problems which will not yield to swift and easy solutions, or to any single action. They will yield only to a continuing, active, informed effort by the people toward achieving better schools.

This kind of effort has been spurred by the thousands of conferences held in recent months by half a million citizens and educators in all parts of the country, culminating in the White House Conference on Education. In that Conference, some 2,000 delegates, broadly representative of the nation, studied together the problems of the nation's schools.

They concluded that the people of the United States must make a greater effort through their local, State and Federal Governments to improve the education of our youth. This expression from the people must now be translated into action at all levels of government.

SCHOOL AID

So far as the Federal share of responsibility is concerned, I urge that the Congress move promptly to enact an effective program of Federal assistance to help erase the existing deficit of school classrooms. Such a program, which should be limited to a five-year period, must operate to increase rather than decrease local and State support of schools and to give the greatest help to the States and localities with the least financial resources. Federal aid should in no way jeopardize the freedom of local school systems. There will be presented to the Congress a recommended program of Federal assistance for school construction.

Such a program should be accompanied by action to increase services to the nation's schools by the Office of Education and by legislation to provide continuation of payments to school districts where Federal activities have impaired the ability of those districts to provide adequate schools.

Under the 1954 Amendments to the old-age and survivors' insurance program, protection was extended to some 10 million additional workers and benefits were increased. The system now helps protect nine out of 10 American workers and their families against loss of income in old age or on the death of the breadwinner. The system is sound. It must be kept so. In developing improvements in the system, we must give the most careful consideration to population and social trends, and to fiscal requirements. With these considerations in mind, the Administration will present its recommendations for further expansion of coverage and other steps which can be taken wisely at this time.

Other needs in the area of social welfare include increased child welfare services, extension of the program of aid to dependent children, intensified attack on juvenile delinquency and special attention to the problems of mentally retarded children. The training of more skilled workers for these fields and the quest for new knowledge through research in social welfare are essential. Similarly the problems of our aged people need our attention.

MEDICAL RESEARCH

The nation has made dramatic progress in conquering disease -- progress of profound human significance which can be greatly accelerated by an intensified effort in medical research. A well-supported, well-balanced program of research, including basic research, can open new frontiers of knowledge, prevent and relieve suffering, and prolong life. Accordingly I shall recommend a substantial increase in Federal funds for the support of such a program. As an integral part of this effort, I shall recommend a new plan to aid construction of non-Federal medical research and teaching facilities and to help provide more adequate support for the training of medical research manpower.

Finally, we must aid in cushioning the heavy and rising costs of illness and hospitalization to individuals and families. Provision should be made, by Federal reinsurance or otherwise, to foster extension of voluntary health insurance coverage to many more persons, especially older persons and those in rural areas. Plans should be evolved to improve protection against the costs of prolonged or severe illness. These measures will help reduce the dollar barrier between many Americans and the benefits of modern medical care.

The Administration health program will be submitted to the Congress in detail.

The response of government to human concerns embraces, of course, other measures of broad public interest, and of special interest to our working men and women. The need still exists for improvement of the Labor Management Relations Act. The recommendations I submitted to the Congress last year take into account not only the interests of labor and management but also the public welfare. The needed amendments should be enacted without further delay.

MINIMUM WAGE EXTENSION

We must also carry forward the job of improving the wage-hour law. Last year I requested the Congress to broaden the coverage of the minimum wage. I repeat that recommendation and I pledge the full resources of the Executive Branch to assist the Congress in finding ways to attain this goal. Moreover, as requested last year, legislation should be passed to clarify and strengthen the eight-hour laws for the benefit of workers who are subject to Federal wage standards on Federal and Federally-assisted construction and other public works.

The Administration will shortly propose legislation to assure adequate disclosure of the financial affairs of each employee pension and welfare plan and to afford substantial protection to their beneficiaries in accordance with the objectives outlined in my message of January 11, 1954. Occupational safety still demands attention, as I pointed out last year, and legislation to improve the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act is still needed. The improvement of the District of Columbia Unemployment Insurance Law and legislation to provide employees in the District with non-occupational disability insurance are no less necessary now than 12 months ago. Legislation to apply the principle of equal pay for equal work without discrimination because of sex is a matter of simple justice. I earnestly urge the Congress to move swiftly to implement these needed labor measures.

In the field of human needs, we must carry forward the housing program which is contributing so greatly to the well-being of our people and the prosperity of our economy. Home ownership is now advanced to the point where almost three of every five families in our cities, towns and suburbs own the houses they live in.

HOUSING

For the housing program, most of the legislative authority already exists. However, a firm program of public housing is essential until the private building industry has found ways to provide more adequate housing for low-income families. The Administration will propose authority to contract for 35,000 additional public housing units in each of the next two fiscal years for communities which will participate in an integrated attack on slums and blight.

To meet the needs of the growing number of older people, several amendments to the National Housing Act will be proposed to assist the private homebuilding industry as well as charitable and non-profit organizations.

With so large a number of the American people desiring to modernize and improve existing dwellings, I recommend that the Title I program for permanent improvements in the home be liberalized.

I recommend increases in the general FHA mortgage insurance authority; the extension of the FHA military housing program; an increase in the authorization for Urban Planning grants; in the special assistance authority of the Federal National Mortgage Association; and continued support of the college housing program in a way that will not discourage private capital from helping to meet the needs of our colleges.

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

The legislation I have recommended for workers in private industry should be accompanied by a parallel effort for the welfare of government employees. We have accomplished much in this field, including a contributory life insurance program; equitable pay increases and a fringe benefits program, covering many needed personnel policy changes, from improved premium pay to a meaningful incentive awards program.

Additional personnel management legislation is needed in this Session. As I stated last year, an executive pay increase is essential to efficient governmental management. Such an increase, together with needed adjustments in the pay for the top career positions, is also necessary to the equitable completion of the Federal pay program initiated last year. Other legislation will be proposed, including legislation for prepaid group health insurance for employees and their dependents and to effect major improvements in the Civil Service retirement system.

All of us share a continuing concern for those who have served this nation in the Armed Forces. The Commission on Veterans Pensions is at this time conducting a study of the entire field of veterans' benefits and will soon submit proposed improvements.

CIVIL RIGHTS

We are proud of the progress our people have made in the field of civil rights. In Executive Branch operations throughout the nation, elimination of discrimination and segregation is all but completed. Progress is also being made among contractors engaged in furnishing Government services and requirements. Every citizen now has the opportunity to fit himself for and to hold a position of responsibility in the service of his country. In the District of Columbia, through the voluntary cooperation of the people, discrimination and segregation are disappearing from hotels, theaters, restaurants and other facilities.

It is disturbing that in some localities allegations persist that Negro citizens are being deprived of their right to vote and are likewise being subjected to unwarranted economic pressures. I recommend that the substance of these charges be thoroughly examined by a Bipartisan Commission created by the Congress. It is hoped that such a Commission will be established promptly so that it may arrive at findings which can receive early consideration.

The stature of our leadership in the free world has increased through the past three years because we have made more progress than ever before in a similar period to assure our citizens equality in justice, in opportunity and in civil rights. We must expand this effort on every front. We must strive to have every person judged and measured by what he is, rather than by his color, race or religion. There will soon be recommended to the Congress a program further to advance the efforts of the Government, within the area of Federal responsibility, to accomplish these objectives.

One particular challenge confronts us. In the Hawaiian Islands, East meets West. To the Islands, Asia and Europe and the Western Hemisphere, all the continents, have contributed their peoples and their cultures to display a unique example of a community that is a successful laboratory in human brotherhood.

STATEHOOD

Statehood, supported by the repeatedly expressed desire of the Islands' people and by our traditions, would be a shining example of the American way to the entire earth. Consequently, I urgently request this Congress to grant statehood for Hawaii. Also, in harmony with the provisions I last year communicated to the Senate and House Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs, I trust that progress toward statehood for Alaska can be made in this Session.

Progress is constant toward full integration of our Indian citizens into normal community life. During the past two years the Administration has provided school facilities for thousands of Indian children previously denied this opportunity. We must continue to meet the needs of increased numbers of Indian children. Provision should also be made for the education of adult Indians whose schooling in earlier years was neglected.

In keeping with our responsibility of world leadership and in our own self interest, I again point out to the Congress the urgent need for revision of the immigration and nationality laws. Our nation has always welcomed immigrants to our shores. The wisdom of such a policy is clearly shown by the fact that America has been built by immigrants and the descendants of immigrants. That policy must be continued realistically with present day conditions in mind.

IMMIGRATION LAW CHANGES

I recommend that the number of persons admitted to this country annually be based not on the 1920 census but on the latest, the 1950 census. Provision should be made to allow for greater flexibility in the use of quotas so if one country does not use its share, the vacancies may be made available for the use of qualified individuals from other countries.

The law should be amended to permit the Secretary of State and the Attorney General to waive the requirements of fingerprinting on a reciprocal basis for persons coming to this country for temporary visits. This and other changes in the law are long overdue and should be taken care of promptly. Detailed recommendations for revision of the immigration laws will be submitted to the Congress.

I am happy to report substantial progress in the flow of immigrants under the Refugee Relief Act of 1953; however, I again request this Congress to approve without further delay the urgently needed amendments to that act which I submitted in the last Session. Because of the high prosperity in Germany and Austria, the number of emigrants from those countries will be reduced. This will make available thousands of unfilled openings which I recommend be distributed to Greece and Italy and to escapees from behind the Iron Curtain.

Once again I ask the Congress to join with me in demonstrating our belief in the right of suffrage. I renew my request that the principle of self-government be extended and the right of suffrage granted to the citizens of the District of Columbia.

To conclude: the vista before us is bright. The march of science, the expanding economy, the advance in collective security toward a just peace -- in this threefold movement our people are creating new standards by which the future of the Republic may be judged.

Progress, however, will be realized only as it is more than matched by a continuing growth in the spiritual strength of the nation. Our dedication to moral values must be complete in our dealings abroad and in our relationships among ourselves. We have single-minded devotion to the common good of America. Never must we forget that this means the well-being, the prosperity, the security of all Americans in every walk of life.

To the attainment of these objectives, I pledge full energies of the Administration as in the Session ahead it works on a program for submission to you, the Congress of the United States.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

THE WHITE HOUSE,

Text of Jan. 9 Message . . .

PRESIDENT OUTLINES 9-POINT FARM PROGRAM

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

In this Session no problem before the Congress demands more urgent attention than the paradox facing our farm families. Although agriculture is our basic industry, they find their prices and incomes depressed amid the nation's greatest prosperity. For five years, their economy has declined. Unless corrected, these economic reversals are a direct threat to the well-being of all our people.

But more than prices and incomes are involved. In America, agriculture is more than an industry; it is a way of life. Throughout our history, the family farm has given strength and vitality to our entire social order. We must keep it healthy and vigorous.

Efforts toward this goal have been unremitting. Many new foundations of permanent value to all farm families have been laid in the past three years. Two years ago a new farm law was enacted, designed to gear agricultural production incentives to potential markets, thereby giving promise to our farm people of a stable and dependable future once the wartime inheritance of surpluses is removed from the farm economy. Loan programs have been substantially improved, enabling many more farmers to acquire family-sized farms and to improve their farms and homes. The benefits of Social Security protection have been extended to farm families. The return of the Farm Credit Administration to farmer control; expansion of soil conservation assistance and rural electrification and telephone programs; increased funds for research and extension work; initiation of new programs to aid low income farm families; adoption of tax provisions of benefit to farm people; increased storage facilities; upstream soil conservation programs; greatly expanded disposal activities for surplus farm products; strengthening our Department of Agriculture representation overseas in the interest of expanded markets -- these and other advances have permanently reinforced the foundations of all agriculture.

PROMPT ACTION

Yet, beneficial though these advances are, persistent and critical farm problems require prompt Congressional action in this Session.

Remedies for these problems demand a clear understanding of their principal causes. These are:

First -- production and market distortions, the result of wartime production incentives too long continued;

Second -- current record livestock production and near-record crop harvests piled on top of previously accumulated carryovers;

Third -- rising costs and high capital requirements.

In short, we have an over-supply of commodities which drives down prices as mounting costs force up from below. Thus is generated a severe price-cost squeeze from which our farm people, with the help of government, must be relieved.

We must free the farm economy from distortions rooted in wartime needs and thus enable our people in agriculture to achieve prosperity; in so doing they will help carry the nation's prosperity to still greater heights. The Administration and the Congress must move together to achieve this goal.

The requirements are clear. New means are needed to reduce surpluses and to widen markets. Costs must be cut and production must be better balanced with prospective needs.

The Main Problem -- The Surplus

Of the many difficulties that aggravate the farm problem, mountainous surpluses overshadow everything else. Today's surpluses consist of commodities produced in a volume imperatively needed in wartime but unmarketable in peacetime at the same prices and in the same quantity.

The plain fact is that wartime production incentives were too long continued.

During the past three years, there has been no lack of effort to get rid of surplus stocks. Disposal efforts have been diligent and vigorous. Vast quantities have been moved -- much of them given away. In the past three years we have found outlets for commodities in a value of more than $4 billion -- far more than in any comparable period in recent history.

But these disposal efforts have not been able to keep pace with the problem. For each bushel-equivalent sold, one and a half have replaced it in the stockpiles. Farmers, the intended beneficiaries of the support program, today find themselves in ever-growing danger from the mounting accumulations. Were it not for the government's bulging stocks, farmers would be getting far more for their products today.

Other consequences of past farm programs have been no less damaging. Both at home and abroad, markets have been lost. Foreign farm production has been increased. American exports have declined. Foreign products have been attracted to our shores.

EFFICIENCY HAMPERED

Steadily this chain of events has lengthened. Our farmers have had to submit to drastic acreage controls that hamper efficient farm management. Even these controls have been self-defeating, because acres diverted from price-supported crops have been planted to other crops. These crops have been thrown into surplus and their prices have declined. Today, almost without regard to the livestock or crop he produces, nearly every farmer is adversely affected by our surpluses. The whole process, for instance, has contributed to the present plight of hog producers.

When three years ago this Administration assumed its responsibility in agriculture, work was begun immediately on what became the Agricultural Act of 1954. That Act was developed and passed with bipartisan support, as all our agricultural legislation should be.

The 1954 law brought realism into the use of the essential tool of price supports. It applied the principle of price flexibility to help keep commodity supplies in balance with markets. That principle is sound and essential to a well-rounded farm program. For two reasons, the 1954 law has not yet been able to make its potential contribution to solving our farm troubles. First, the law began to take hold only with the harvests of 1955; it has not yet had the opportunity to be effective. Second, the operation of the new law is smothered under surpluses amassed by the old program.

The attack on the surplus must go forward in full recognition of the fact that farm products are not actually marketed when delivered to and held by the government. A government warehouse is not a market. Even the most storable commodites cannot be added forever to government granaries, nor can they be indefinitely held. Ultimately the stockpiles must be used.

SURPLUS DISPOSAL

It is unthinkable to destroy food. Instead, we must move these stocks into domestic consumption or dispose of them abroad. Neither route under present conditions offers the results often expected. Surpluses moved domestically almost always compete directly with crops farmers are trying to sell. Moved abroad in quantities large enough to remedy present difficulties, they would shatter world prices and trade, injure our friends and undermine domestic prices as well.

To be sure, outlets for some of the surplus exist both at home and abroad. But experience has amply proved that neither the home nor foreign market can, under present conditions, readily absorb the tremendous stocks now depressing our agriculture.

Clearly new action is imperative. We must stop encouraging the production of surpluses. We must stop shifting acres from one crop to another, when such shifts result in new surpluses. Nor can crop problems be converted into millstones weighing down upon the producers of livestock.

Remedies are needed now, and it is up to the Administration and the Congress to provide them swiftly. As we seek to go forward, we must not go back to old programs that have failed utterly to protect farm families.

I recommend, therefore, the following nine-point program. I urge the Congress to pass this program with maximum speed, for delay can only aggravate and multiply the difficulties already sorely harrassing millions of our rural people.

1. The Soil Bank

Our most pressing need today is to work off our surpluses so that our basic program of 1954 can succeed in gearing production to prospective markets at fair prices. A three-pronged attack is needed.

First, future production of crops in greatest surplus must be adjusted both to the accumulated stocks and to the potential markets.

Second, producers of other crops and of livestock must be relieved of excessive production from acreage diverted from surplus crops.

Third, lands poorly suited to tillage, now producing unneeded crops and subject to excessive wind and water erosion, must be retired from cultivation.

These essential adjustments can all be hastened through a Soil Bank Program. I recommend a Soil Bank of two parts.

The first is designed to meet the immediate need to reduce the crops in greatest over-supply. It may be called the Acreage Reserve Program.

The second part is a long-range attack to achieve better land use and protect farmers and ranchers from the effects of production on acres already diverted. It may be called the Conservation Reserve Program.

A. THE ACREAGE RESERVE PROGRAM

I recommend that the Congress consider a voluntary additional reduction in the acreage of certain crops which today are in serious surplus -- wheat, cotton, corn and rice.

In considering the application of this program to each of these crops, the Congress will wish to accord special attention to their distinctive problems -- notably in the case of corn -- as set forth later in this Message.

I do not propose this program as a device to empty government warehouses so they may be filled again. There is, therefore, a basic corollary to the Acreage Reserve Program: in future years we must avoid, as a plague, farm programs that would encourage the building-up of new price-depressing surpluses.

What I here propose is essentially a deferred-production plan. As a necessary part of the voluntary acreage reduction, it is essential to protect the farmer's income. It would be grossly unfair to require farmers to bear the full burdens of this readjustment. Just as other readjustments from war were shouldered in considerable part by the nation as a whole, so should this.

In the case of wheat and cotton, for example, I look to a voluntary reduction equivalent to possibly one-fifth of the acreage otherwise permitted by allotments -- perhaps 12 million acres of wheat and three million of cotton. It should be practical to include wheat already seeded if it is incorporated with the soil, as green manure, or by other accepted practices. This would make it possible for more farmers to enter the program immediately and thereby start at once to work down the surplus.

ADMINISTRATIVE DISCRETION

Administrative discretion is needed to assure that the rates of reduction in different areas are related to the supply and demand conditions for different grades and classes. The farmer's cooperation in this temporary program must not impair his historic acreage allotments. Rights of tenant farmers must be protected. I should expect the reduction in wheat and cotton plantings to continue for some three or four years, during which time these huge crop carry-overs should decline to normal levels.

In return for their voluntary participation in the Acreage Reserve Program cooperating farmers will be allocated certificates for commodities whose value will be based on the normal yields of the acres withheld in this Reserve. I recommend that these certificates be made available to cooperating farmers through their County Agricultural Stabilization Committees at normal harvest time for each crop. The certificates will be negotiable so farmers can convert them to cash. They will be redeemable by the Commodity Credit Corporation in cash, or in kind at specified rates.

I further recommend that the legislation provide that each participating farmer contract to refrain from cropping or grazing any land he puts in the Acreage Reserve.

By so reducing crop production, commodities now in government ownership can be used to supply market needs up to a proportionate amount. Thus the bulging Commodity Credit Corporation stocks can be correspondingly worked down without depressing current market prices.

The program will operate in this way: A farmer, with an allotment of 100 acres of wheat, for example, may choose to plant only 80 acres and put the remaining 20 in the Acreage Reserve. His acreage allotment will not be affected. He will agree not to graze or harvest any crop from the 20 acres put into the Reserve.

CASHABLE CERTIFICATE

In return for this cooperation in the temporary acreage reduction program, he will receive a cashable certificate. The certificate will be equal to a percentage of the value of the crop he would have normally harvested from the 20 acres. This percentage will be set at an incentive level sufficiently high to assure success of the program.

This deferred production plan uses the surplus to reduce the surplus.

It will be financed with commodities already owned and paid for by the government. Time and shrinkage, storage and other costs are eroding away the present value of these stocks. Consequently, the real net cost to the government -- taking these and other facts into consideration -- will be substantially less than the apparent cost in payments made on certificates.

I emphasize that this program is specifically intended to provide an income to farmers while the essential adjustment in stocks is being accomplished.

There are many virtues in the plan.

- It will help remove the crushing burden of surpluses, the essential precondition for the successful operation of a sound farm program.

- It will reduce the massive and unproductive storage costs on government holdings -- costs that are running about $1 million a day.

- It will provide an element of insurance since farmers are assured income from the reserve acres even in a year of crop failure.

- It will ease apprehension among our friends abroad over our surplus disposal program.

- It will harmonize agricultural production with peacetime markets.

B. THE CONSERVATION RESERVE

The second part of the Soil Bank -- The Conservation Reserve Program -- affects both today's surpluses and tomorrow's needs of our growing population.

Under the pressures of war and the production incentives continued in postwar years, large areas have come into cultivation which wise land use and sound conservation would have reserved to forage and trees.

In greater or lesser degree this problem exists throughout the nation. Continued cropping of these lands results, on the one hand, in wastage of soil and water resources, and on the other, in production of commodities now in surplus.

Today the nation does not need these acres in harvested crops.

We cannot accurately predict our country's food needs in the years ahead, except that they will steadily increase. We do know, however, that the sound course both for today and tomorrow is wisely to safeguard our precious heritage of food-producing resources so we may hand on an enriched legacy to future generations. The Conservation Reserve Program will contribute materially to that end.

Further, production from the acres today diverted from surplus crops is now seriously affecting other segments of our agriculture. The acreage of feed grains, notably oats, barley and grain sorghums, has been increased. The end product of this diversion has been greatly enlarged supplies of and lower prices for hogs, cattle and dairy and poultry products. Producers of fruit, vegetables and other crops have been adversely affected. The proposed Conservation Reserve can also make a major contribution to solving this problem of diverted acres.

I propose that farmers be asked to contract voluntarily with the government to shift into forage, trees and water storage cultivated lands most needing conservation measures. Any farmer would be eligible to participate in this program regardless of the crop he produces or the area where his farm is located. I would hope that some 25 million acres would be brought into the Conservation Reserve.

FOREST LANDS

Forest lands under good management are a constant and a renewable resource. One-third of our forest area is in farm woodlands. From this source can come a large share of the lumber, pulpwood and other forest products to meet the growing needs of our expanding economy. The Conservation Reserve can mean productive and protective tree cover for less productive lands now used for cultivated crops.

The government itself must encourage this transfer in order to achieve the advantages to the general welfare that will follow from improved resource use. I propose, therefore, that the government pay a fair share of the costs of establishing the conservation use, up to a specified per acre maximum that will vary by regions. The government's share will be sufficiently high to encourage broad participation and thus assure the success of the program. Further, as the farmer reorganizes his farm along these soil conserving lines, I recommend that the government provide certain annual payments for a period of years related to the length of time needed to establish the new use of the land. The Congress will need to develop the basis and procedures for determining the amount of the payments. Here, as in the Acreage Reserve Program, I would not let the farmer's cooperation impair his historic acreage allotments.

The farmer, in turn, will agree that the acres put into this Conservation Reserve will be in addition to any land that he may put into the Acreage Reserve, and will represent a reduction in cropland cultivated. He will agree to carry out sound soil and water conservation on these acres, and to refrain from returning them to crop production, and from grazing them for a specified period.

I urge the Congress to approve this program with the least possible delay so that a significant part of the desired 25 million acres can come into the program in 1956.

My estimate is that if the Congress acts in time, some $350 million will be invested in the Conservation Reserve during the calendar year, 1956, and a total of about $1 billion dollars over the next three years. Sums expended under this program will be in addition to the $250 million provided for the Agricultural Conservation Program for the coming fiscal year.

In return the Conservation Reserve Program will bring these large rewards:

- It will result in improved use of soil and water resources for the benefit of this and future generations.

- It will increase our supply of much-needed farm-grown forest products.

- It will help hold rain and snow where they fall and make possible more ponds and reservoirs on the farm.

- It will reduce the undue stimulus to livestock production, and consequent low livestock prices, induced by feed-grain production on diverted acres.

- It will similarly provide protection for producers of the many small-acreage crops whose markets are threatened by even a few diverted acres.

In combination with the Acreage Reserve program for crops in surplus, the Conservation Reserve program will help during the next several years to reduce the total volume of farm production and improve the balance among different farm commodities, both of which are important to a general improvement in farm prices.

2. Surplus Disposal

Production adjustments effected by the Soil Bank are needed to halt current additions to surpluses, and to reduce stocks on hand. But additional relief must be obtained from the price-depressing influence of these huge carry-overs. In Public Law 480 the Congress has provided basic legislation for this purpose. The problem still exists, but not for lack of vigorous efforts to deal with it.

Surplus disposals have permitted substantial reductions in Commodity Credit Corporation stocks of butter, dried milk, cottonseed oil and meal, flaxseed and linseed oil and seeds. Surplus disposals by the Commodity Credit Corporation have risen from just over half a billion dollars in fiscal 1953 to more than $1.4 billion in fiscal 1954, and to more than $2.1 billion in fiscal 1955.

In the last fiscal year sales of government-owned price-supported commodities into the domestic market reached $403 million. These were made with due care for the adverse effect they might have on prices received by farmers for current sales. Domestic donations to supply food for needy persons totaled an additional $196 million. Overseas disposals, through barter and donations for constructive purposes, totaled $1.1 billion. In spite of these vigorous efforts, the Commodity Credit Corporation investment in price-supported commodities increased by about $1 billion during the fiscal year.

Because the problem continues to be so serious and stubborn, the Secretary of Agriculture is appointing an Agricultural Surplus Disposal Administrator who will report directly to the Secretary. The duties of the Administrator will relate to all activities of the Department associated with the utilization of Commodity Credit Corporation stocks and of our current abundant production.

BARTERING

Expanded opportunities will be sought to barter agricultural products, which deteriorate and are costly to store, for increased quantities of non-perishable strategic materials. Additional legislation may be needed in this field.

The bulk of price-supported commodities held by the government cannot now by law be sold into the domestic market except at prices equal to at least 105 percent of the support price plus carrying charges. This restriction has worked to the disadvantage of both farmers and the government by blocking sales that would clearly have been advantageous to both. I recommend legislation to permit, under proper safeguards, sales at not less than support levels plus carrying charges.

Present provisions of surplus disposal legislation permit export dispositions of government stocks to friendly nations only. Opportunities clearly to our interest may develop in the future to sell to countries excluded by this legislation. To enable us to realize on such opportunities I recommend repeal of Section 304 of Public Law 480.

3. Strengthening Commodity Programs

Our frontal attack on the problems of surpluses, diverted acres, unbalanced production and unwise land use is carried in major part by the Soil Bank through the Acreage Reserve and the Conservation Reserve Programs.

These proposals are wholly in keeping with the fundamental principles of sound farm policy set forth in my special agricultural message of two years ago. In keeping with these principles the Administration:

(a) Whenever possible will continue to ease or eliminate controls over farmers; and

(b) For commodities on which price supports are discretionary, will continue to support these prices at the highest levels possible without accumulating new price-depressing surpluses.

In keeping with this latter principle, I am advised by the Secretary of Agriculture that, as a direct result of operation of various parts of our present farm program, the supply and demand conditions for soybeans and flaxseed are now such as to warrant an increase in the price support levels for these crops in 1956. The higher support levels will be announced shortly.

In respect to other commodity programs I submit the following specific suggestions.

A. CORN

In recent years many farmers have chosen not to observe acreage allotments on corn. Considerably less than half of the 1955 crop was raised within acreage allotment limitations and thus eligible for price support. It is apparent that price supports alone, even at levels closely approaching the legal maximum, are an insufficient inducement for participation in a corn acreage allotment program.

I recommend therefore that the Congress give serious consideration to adapting the Acreage Reserve Program to corn. One grave difficulty must be overcome. Unlike wheat and cotton, most of the corn crop is fed on the farms where it is produced. For this reason, marketing quotas such as are used on wheat and cotton are not feasible.

Thus, broad and effective participation by corn producers in an acreage allotment program is imperative for the Acreage Reserve Program to achieve its objective of reducing the corn surplus. With broad and effective participation, in both programs, the Acreage Reserve Program for corn would:

a. reduce the carryover stocks which currently depress the market,
b. make possible a higher level of price support than would otherwise prevail for the 1956 crop, and
c. reduce the incentive to farmers to produce excessive supplies of hogs and fed cattle.

If the Congress should choose not to authorize the Acreage Reserve Program for corn, the Congress may wish to consider an alternative; to eliminate acreage allotments for corn and put price supports for corn on a discretionary basis comparable with the other feed grains. With no acreage allotments and with discretionary supports, all corn producers would be eligible for price supports at a level substantially above the market price which prevailed during the 1955 harvest.

B. WHEAT

The problems of wheat are difficult and complex. The proposed Soil Bank with its Acreage Reserve Program, will make a major contribution toward their solution. This program is particularly well-suited to wheat since this crop is grown in large acreage and is now burdened under an accumulated carry-over in excess of a full year's needs. The Conservation Reserve Program and the Great Plains Program, described later, will also help. Other changes are necessary also, both for current adjustments and for long-term balance between production and consumption.

(a) Legislation already has passed the Senate and is pending in the House of Representatives which would exempt from marketing quotas those producers who use for feed, food or seed on their own farms all the wheat they raise. Because of the failure to pass this legislation last year, the Department of Agriculture has been compelled by law to hale before the courts farmers whose only offense was to raise and feed wheat outside their quotas. Again the Administration urges prompt enactment of this legislation. Correction of this problem should be delayed no longer.

(b) Historically a significant proportion of the annual wheat crop has been used for livestock feed. The quantity fed in pre-World War II years ranged from 100 to 150 million bushels a year, about twice the quantity fed in more recent years. This reduced consumption has aggravated the surplus burden.

I recommend that the Congress give consideration to authorizing the annual sale for feeding purposes, at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, of limited quantites of Commodity Credit Corporation wheat of less desirable milling quality. The authorized sale price should reflect the feeding value of the wheat, precautions being exercised as to the effect of such sales on prices of other feed grains. There are opportunities to use more wheat for feed in feed-deficit areas distant from the Corn Belt.

(c) I recommend legislation to expand the non-commercial wheat area beyond the 12 States now so designated. This action would eliminate acreage and marketing controls for many farmers who characteristically feed on their own farms most of the wheat they raise, and who contribute little to commercial supplies or surplus stocks.

(d) I recommend extension for one year of legislation which exempts durum wheat from acreage and marketing controls. This type of wheat is in short supply and production should not be restricted.

We are participating in negotiations for possible renewal of the International Wheat Agreement, which will terminate July 1, 1956, unless it is renewed.

C. COTTON

As in the case of wheat, the Acreage Reserve Program is especially well-suited to cotton. This crop as well is burdened by an accumulated carry over in excess of a full year's requirements. Other legislative changes for cotton, in addition to the Soil Bank Program, that require consideration are these:

(a) For all crops except cotton, price support legislation requires that parity prices shall be computed on the basis of the average grade and quality of the crop. For cotton a special provision of law designates middling 7/8 in. cotton as the standard grade for parity calculations and price support. Currently less than 5 percent of cotton production is of this grade or lower.

I urge an amendment to provide for cotton, as for other crops, that the average grade and quality of the crop be utilized for parity-price computations. This recommendation is, in general terms, in keeping with the intent of legislation already pending before the Senate.

(b) The shortcomings of acreage allotments as a means of controlling production on cotton are evident. In 1955, on an acreage allotment calculated to yield 10 million bales of cotton, nearly 15 million were harvested. Rapidly advancing technology is resulting in production far outrunning expectations based on acreage alone. This is especially true when prices are supported at wartime production incentive levels.

When production controls must be applied as a result of supply and market conditions, it is imperative to have controls that are effective. As surpluses are reduced through the proposed Acreage Reserve Program of the Soil Bank and through other means, new accumulations of surplus must definitely be avoided.

For these reasons the Congress should consider replacing acreage allotments on cotton with quantity allotments beginning with the crop of 1957. The Congress could well consider similar action for other crops under marketing quotas.

D. RICE

Under the law, accumulated supplies of rice have required a 40 percent reduction in acreage for 1956 compared with 1954, and a decline in the support level to 75 percent of parity.

Rice production in this country is the most efficient in the world. However, our rice is rapidly being priced out of world markets and is being diverted into government warehouses and even into the feed markets.

There are two alternative courses of action to which the Congress should give consideration:

1. Inclusion of rice in the Acreage Reserve Program. This will require continuation of production controls and marketing quotas.

2. Elimination of existing production and marketing controls on rice. Prices could then be supported on a discretionary basis at levels which would permit rice producers to improve their competitive market position.

If the Congress considers the latter course to serve the long-term best interest of rice producers, it may wish to consider use of the Acreage Reserve Program to make the transition.

E. PEANUTS

The peanut price-stabilization program has experienced serious difficulties stemming in part from a fixed national minimum peanut acreage. With improving technology this minimum acreage will normally produce more peanuts than the market will absorb at the support price. Consequently, I recommend elimination of provisions for the minimum national acreage allotment.

F. SUGAR

The legislation to renew the Sugar Act of 1948, as amended, should promptly be completed. The Congress is aware of the need to give producers, as well as foreign suppliers and the entire sugar industry, as much advance notice as possible in planning their operations.

G. SPECIAL SCHOOL MILK PROGRAM

The Special School Milk Program provided for in the Agricultural Act of 1954 has met with gratifying success. Approximately nine million children had the health benefits of this program last year, including children in some 7,000 schools in which milk was not previously served. Consumption was increased by over 450 million half pints of milk. This is a good example of constructive use of a surplus product to meet a present need. We thus contribute to better health habits and at the same time promote an enlarged market for the future. Several thousand additional schools are participating in the program in the current school year.

I have been advised that, in some States, Milk Program funds are nearing depletion. We must see to it that the program is carried forward intact through this fiscal year.

I recommend that the program be extended for two years beyond June 30, 1956, with authorization to use Commodity Credit Corporation funds increased from $50 million a year to $75 million.

H. LIVESTOCK

For livestock producers, many parts of the program I have already discussed have special significance.

Establishment of the Soil Bank will alleviate the undue stimulus to livestock production and the resulting downward pressure on livestock prices which arise from using for feed-grain production much of the acreage already diverted from wheat and cotton. Restrictions against grazing the Soil Bank acres will safeguard the interests of beef producers and dairymen.

Periodically livestock markets become glutted and prices disrupted. In such periods, where assistance will be constructive, timely and vigorous government purchase and diversion programs are essential to bolster prices and help producers adjust to market demands. Such programs have been undertaken by this Administration. The pork purchase program now in progress will shortly be stepped up to supply new and expanded outlets now being developed. Sales promotion and the development of better merchandizing methods cooperatively with the livestock trade are part of this effort to meet the impact of heavy marketing.

Special programs of an emergency nature will be provided to help livestock producers as needed. For example, emergency credit and low-cost feed in the event of drought will be available whenever disaster strikes.

Increased research on nutrition, disease control, better breeding, more profitable use of by-products and improved marketing will help lower production costs and facilitate the smooth flow of livestock products into consumption.

4. Dollar Limit on Price Supports

The average size of farms in American agriculture, as measured by capital or by acres, has rapidly increased. To the degree that this trend is associated with the development of more economic and more efficient farm units it is in the interest of farm families and of the nation. To the degree, however, that it has resulted in the removal of risk for large farm businesses by reason of price supports, it is much less wholesome and constitutes a threat to the traditional family farm.

Under the price support machinery as it has been functioning, price support loans of tremendous size have occasionally occurred. It is not sound government policy to underwrite at public expense such formidable competition with family operated farms, which are the bulwark of our agriculture.

I ask the Congress to consider placing a dollar limit on the size of price support loans to any one individual or farming unit. The limit should be sufficiently high to give full protection to efficiently operated family farms.

5. Rural Development Program

In my message of Jan. 11, 1954, I pointed out that the chief beneficiaries of our farm programs have been the two million larger, more productive farm units. Production on nearly three million other farms is so limited that the families thereon benefit only in small degree from the types of programs that heretofore have dominated our activities.

On April 26,1955, I transmitted to the Congress recommendations of the Secretary of Agriculture for attacking the problems of low income farm families. The Congress has met only in part these recommendations for legislation and appropriations. Despite the resultant handicaps, the interest in this program has been so great that pilot work is already under way in well over 30 counties widely spread throughout the United States. There is activity now in more than one-half of the States.

Four Departments of the Federal Government -- Commerce, Labor, Health, Education and Welfare and Agriculture -- are actively at work on this program with State and local leadership to aid low income farm families.

Not only the welfare of these families but also of the people as a whole require that this program go forward. Once again, therefore, I urge the Congress to enact the full program recommended in my message of April 26, 1955.

6. The Great Plains Program

Between the prairies of the Central West and the Rocky Mountains is a vast area embracing all or part of 10 States, in which erratic climate, wind and water erosion, and special problems of land use constitute a continuing hazard. For more than a year intensive new studies of conditions and problems peculiar to this Great Plains region have been in progress. The work has been carried on cooperatively between the leadership of the 10 States involved, the Department of Agriculture and the Great Plains Council, which includes technical people from the States of the region. This study will help to define the respective responsibilities of individuals and local, State and Federal agencies.

The proposed Soil Bank, with its Acreage Reserve Program to reduce promptly production of crops in surplus and with its Conservation Reserve Program to take less productive lands out of crops, will meet in part some of the conditions especially serious in the Great Plains. Other desirable modifications of existing legislation include:

1. Provision for long-time cost-sharing commitments under the Agricultural Conservation Program, and

2. Relaxation of planting requirements to maintain base acreage for wheat allotments.

Shortly I will transmit to the Congress a report containing certain recommendations for providing a more stable agriculture in this important region.

7. Research

Scientific research has been the means of fundamentally important developments both in agriculture and industry. It has resulted in improved quality, new and better techniques, new products, new markets, new high levels of material well-being for our people and new horizons for our future. Most individual farmers are not in a position to carry on scientific investigations. Government has special responsibility in this area -- and particularly is this the case since the benefits of research related to agriculture are widely shared by all the people.

Not only can research provide for the material needs of future generations, but it also can contribute in many ways to the fuller utilization of our present abundance.

We must look for new uses of agricultural products that can contribute to human welfare, such as livestock by-products for medicinal purposes or such as coarse fibers for construction materials already have contributed.

We must find new markets, as we have for tallow in industry or as have followed upon the development of frozen and powdered juice concentrates.

We must find new crops offering such new opportunities and benefits as are exemplified by soybeans and sorghums.

We must further improve our marketing mechanism, as already has been done through refrigeration and new processing techniques, so that the benefits of our abundance may be still more widely distributed. Marketing margins have continued to increase, even while farm prices have been declining. Thus the farmer's share of the retail food dollar has shrunk appreciably. Retail prices have changed little, thereby impeding desired increases in consumption. We must find ways to lower costs of food distribution. Research is an effective way to help attain that important goal. The Secretary of Agriculture is actively engaged in an expanded inquiry directed toward reducing the costs of distribution.

Our basic scientific knowledge from which all practical applications of science are made is vitally important and must be expanded. This knowledge is essential also to continue the attack on the ravages of plant and animal pests and diseases. We cannot use or reap benefits from what we do not know. A major frontier of agriculture lies in our laboratories and experimental fields.

In the budget message, I will request the maximum increase in agricultural research funds that can be effectively used next year with the technical manpower and facilities available. This will be an increase of one-fourth, to a total of $103 million.

8. Credit

In making the transition from war to peace, and similarly in making the investment adjustments associated with a dynamic agriculture, farmers are experiencing increased need for credit. This is especially true for young men, particularly veterans, who have started farming in recent years.

Private financial institutions, individuals and government agencies are furnishing credit for agriculture. Administrative, budgetary and legislative changes now being developed in government all point toward assuring adequate and sympathetic coverage of agricultural credit requirements, which cannot be met by private financial institutions.

Loans made by the Farmers Home Administration have increased gradually during the past four years from $212 million to well over $300 million, and can increase further as the new provisions for insured loans become more widely used.

The Farm Credit Administration has been reorganized to give farmers a greater voice in its operation. Further legislation will be proposed to combine the Production Credit Corporations and the Federal Intermediate Credit Banks. Federal Land Bank loans made by the Farm Credit Administration have increased from $237 million four years ago to more than $400 million last year.

The Administration is determined to see to it that an adequate supply of credit remains readily available to our farmers at all times.

9. Gasoline Tax

One of the farmer's operating costs is the Federal tax on gasoline. About one-half of the gasoline bought by farmers is used on the farm. I recommend that legislation be passed to relieve the farmer of the Federal tax on purchases of gasoline so used.

- - - - - -

Historically agricultural policy in this country has sought to foster family-sized owner-operated farms. This has been a sound and wise policy -- not only in the development of an efficient agriculture which has become the envy of the world, but also in fostering a sturdy, resourceful, self-reliant citizenry.

Farm organization and farming operations are undergoing profound change as science and technology rapidly alter the structure of agriculture. Great care must be exercised that these changes do not result in huge corporation farms on the one hand or in unrewarding subsistence units on the other. The time-proven commercial family farm must continue as the basic social and economic unit of agriculture. Accordingly farm policy must encourage such farms, sufficiently large and productive to provide satisfactions in farm living equal to those enjoyed by other Americans.

Insofar as the problems of agriculture can best be solved by government action, government should accept the responsibility.

The proper role of government, however, is that of partner with the farmer -- never his master. By every possible means we must develop and promote that partnership -- to the end that agriculture may continue to be a sound, enduring foundation for our economy and that farm living may be a profitable and satisfying experience.

MEETS URGENT NEEDS

Assisted by experienced farm people both in and out of government, I have been earnestly studying this problem for many months. I believe that the nine-point program set forth in this message, building on our present program, meets the urgent needs of our farmers today and does so in a way consistent with our basic traditions. It offers no nostrums or panaceas. Our farm folk expect better of us than to deal in that kind of specious practice.

Farmers expect programs that are forward-looking, economically sound and fair.

This program offers a workable approach to reducing the surpluses, bringing production and markets into balance at fair prices, and so raising the income and advancing the security of our farm families.

Should this program be enacted, its degree of success will be dependent upon the degree of farmer participation and upon a common determination to work together in ridding ourselves of burdensome surpluses. With such a spirit, this program will speed the transition to a stable, prosperous and free peacetime agriculture with a bright future.

Again I urge upon the Congress the need for swift legislative action on these recommendations, in the interest of our farm people, in the interest of every American citizen.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

THE WHITE HOUSE,

January 9, 1956.

CONGRESSIONAL REACTION

Comments on the President's farm message by Congressional leaders:

• Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- "The President's message has many meritorious proposals but...(they are) designed primarily to remove agricultural surpluses. They would do very little to meet the cost-price squeeze which is pressing so cruelly on family-sized farms.... The Administration has borrowed liberally from Democratic programs but pride of authorship will not prevent a Democratic Congress from giving sober consideration to his suggestions."

• Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) -- Said the President had made "constructive" suggestions. He said he hoped the Senate would give "prompt and favorable consideration" to them.

• House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) -- Said he was "glad that this Administration has finally found out that there is a farm problem...and that to the farmer it's a very distressing situation." He said he assumed the Senate would give first consideration to the President's recommendations in connection with its study of the House-passed bill (HR 12) to restore fixed 90-percent price supports on basic commodities.

• House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R Mass.) -- "The President's message to improve the lot of our farmers is one of the most far-reaching and beneficial agricultural programs ever issued by a Chief Executive.... The recommendations... strike at the root of bad planning which has led to declining incomes and mounting surpluses.... The President has wisely submitted income incentives and other steps which will bring farm earnings up to the level enjoyed by other hard working segments of our population.... The President's...message provides a prosperity platform on which our farm economy can be developed to the point where it will move ahead in step with business and industry."

• Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D La.), Agriculture and Forestry Committee Chairman -- "The message contains nothing new.... The President has placed much emphasis on the soil bank proposal. He would evidently make participation in the soil bank voluntary.... I believe the soil bank would be more effective if price support benefits were conditioned upon farmers complying with its acreage reserve features.

"I would favor offering greater incentives to the production of quality commodities.... Price supports on readily salable commodities should be flexed upward from 90 percent of parity... (while) support levels (on poor-quality products) should be flexed downward...to say, a minimum of 50 percent."

• Sen. George D. Aiken (Vt.), ranking Republican on the Agriculture and Forestry Committee -- "The President's recommendations, if agreed to by the Congress, cannot help but return to the farmer a more equitable share of the nation's unprecedented prosperity.... I join with the Chairman of the...Committee in hoping that we may have a satisfactory bill on the President's desk by Feb. 15 or at least an early date."

• Rep. Clifford R. Hope (Kan.), ranking Republican on the House Agriculture Committee -- "The President's message reflects his sincere, serious and sympathetic concern with the problems confronting the farmers of this country.... The most important part of the message is that which deals with the great and difficult problem of agricultural surpluses.... I believe the President's suggestions along this line are practical.... It goes without saying that to be effective this year legislation must be enacted at an early date.... I am sorry there is nothing in the message which holds out any hope of increased farm income for 1956 when farmers need it so badly."

• House Agriculture Committee Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- Said his Committee would consider "every part and parcel" of the President's program. "My purpose is and has been to keep partisan politics out of agricultural considerations."

Text of Jan. 12 Message . . .

PRESIDENT PROPOSES FIVE-YEAR SCHOOL PROGRAM

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

For several years now, our educational system has been the object of intensified appraisal.

Signs of heartening progress have come to light. Among these are: classroom construction at a higher rate than ever before; teachers' salaries increased in many communities; the number of small, uneconomical school districts reduced; substantially more young people preparing for the teaching profession; private gifts to higher education at new heights; support of education at all levels greater than ever before.

Encouraging as these advances are, they are not enough to meet our expanding educational needs. Action on a broader scale and at a more rapid rate is clearly imperative.

We still do not have enough good classrooms for our children. There is insufficient emphasis on both short-range and long-term research into the core of educational problems. We need examination and study, from a broad view-point, of the increasing needs of higher education. These lacks are magnified by an ever-increasing stream of student enrollment and the increasing complexity of modern society.

The White House Conference on Education

Two years ago, the Congress approved my recommendation of a program to direct nation-wide attention and action to our educational problems and opportunities. As a consequence, more than 4,000 State and local conferences were held throughout 1955. The White House Conference on Education, the first such Conference in our history, was held last November. The work of the conferences has aroused the Nation. The final report of the White House Conference Committee should receive wide and serious attention.

Benefits already are apparent. About half a million people across the Nation, representing all segments of life, came to grips with the problems of education. The status of American education -- where it is; the future of American education -- where it should and can go -- have been illuminated as perhaps never before. Most important of all, there has been a reawakening of broad public interest in our schools. The conferences helped to erase the corroding notion that schools were the other person's responsibility.

In our society no firmer foundation for action can be laid than common understanding of a problem; no more potent force can be devised for assailing a problem than the common will to do the job. For the improvement of our educational system, the people themselves have laid the foundation in understanding and willingness.

The Need for Federal Aid in Meeting the Classroom Shortage

The responsibility for public education rests with the States and the local communities. Federal action which infringes upon this principle is alien to our system. But our history has demonstrated that the Federal Government, in the interest of the whole people, can and should help with certain problems of nation-wide scope and concern when States and communities -- acting independently -- cannot solve the full problem or solve it rapidly enough.

Clearly, this is the kind of situation we face today in considering the school classroom shortage. In the war and postwar periods, school construction was drastically curtailed by shortages of materials. And then schools were filled to overflowing by the largest, most rapid enrollment increase in history. Today, hundreds of thousands of children study under overcrowded conditions, in half-day or doubled-up school sessions, or in makeshift buildings not designed as schools. Further, many classrooms in use today are obsolete, inadequate -- and each year more rooms become so. School enrollments will continue to increase rapidly over the years ahead -- and this will require still more classrooms.

Against this backdrop of needs, States and communities are substantially increasing their classroom construction. But many communities simply do not have available locally the resources needed to cope both with the legacy of shortages from past years and with future needs. Unless these communities get help, they simply cannot provide enough good schools. The best estimates indicate that, on a nation-wide basis, the current rate of construction only a little more than meets each year's new enrollment and replacement needs. This rate barely dents the large accumulation of needs from past years.

The rate of classroom construction must be further increased, as The White House Conference on Education asked, by a greater combined effort of local and State governments. And the Conference concluded that Federal assistance also is necessary. The facts support this conclusion.

The Administration's Proposals

A year ago, I proposed a Federal program designed to aid the States and communities in overcoming the classroom shortage. The Congress has not yet enacted legislation. In the light of a full year of further experience and study, in the light of Congressional hearings and the White House Conference on Education, I now submit a revised and broadened program to meet our pressing classroom needs. I propose:

- A program of Federal grants amounting to $1,250,000,000, at a rate of $250,000,000 annually for five years, matched with State funds, to supplement local construction efforts in the neediest school districts.

- A program to authorize $750 million over five years for Federal purchase of local school construction bonds when school districts cannot sell them in private markets at reasonable interest rates.

- A five-year program of advances to help provide reserves for bonds issued by State school financing agencies. These bonds would finance local construction of schools to be rented and eventually owned by the local school systems.

- A five-year, $20 million program of matching grants to States for planning to help communities and States overcome obstacles to their financing of school construction.

If speedily and fully utilized, this Federal program -- added to the increased basic efforts of States and communities -- should overcome the Nation's critical classroom shortage within five years. Once this shortage is overcome, the Federal grant program can and must terminate. The States and localities should then go forward, without Federal funds, to meet their current and future needs. Present construction levels indicate their ability to do this.

I am confident the Federal Government with this program can help construct schools without in any way weakening the American tradition that control of education must be kept close to the local communities. Any legislation enacted should embody this principle.

Essential Principles in Federal Grants

I strongly urge the Congress, in providing grants for school construction, to follow certain principles, which are indispensable if Federal aid is to serve the cause of American education most effectively.

The first broad principle is that Federal grants must not reduce the incentive for State and local efforts -- but rather should stimulate an increase in such efforts. If Federal funds are used merely to replace funds which otherwise would or could be provided at State and local levels, there is no net gain of schools for our children. I propose, therefore, that Federal grants be matched by State appropriations. Because many of the State legislatures will not have a session this year, I recommend, in order to speed the program at the outset, that during the first year of the five year period the matching of Federal funds may be by either the States or by local school districts. The requirement for State matching will result in a larger total program of school construction, and will assure active participation of the States in improving laws relating to financing of school construction, as well as sound administration of the program.

Furthermore, I propose a formula to reduce the proportion of Federal funds for those few States which are noticeably lagging, behind their ability, to support their public schools. This feature should act as an incentive for the lagging States to increase their effort.

Another fundamental principle is that Federal funds, under this type of program, should be distributed according to relative need. We must recognize that some States have more financial resources than others. We must recognize that a weakness in education anywhere is a weakness in the Nation as a whole. Federal appropriations will most quickly accomplish the most good if a relatively larger share of Federal funds is distributed where local and State resources are least adequate to meet classroom needs.

I propose that this principle be fulfilled in three ways. First, in distributing Federal funds, larger amounts per school-age child should be allotted to States with lower income per child. Second, in fixing matching requirements, States with lower income should not be required to put up as large a proportion of funds as higher income States. For the Nation as a whole, the total of State matching funds would approximately equal the total Federal funds. Third, as the States distribute these funds, the highest priority should be given to school districts with the least economic ability to meet their needs.

Credit Support for School Construction

Some school districts find difficulty in marketing bonds to finance needed school construction. To meet this situation, I again recommend that the Congress authorize Federal purchase of local school construction bonds unmarketable except at excessive interest rates.

Some school districts, however, are unable to raise capital funds needed for school construction because of bonding limits. To encourage school construction in these districts, as well as in districts where construction would be speeded by the lease-purchase method, I propose again that Congress authorize advances to the States as a reserve for bonds of State school financing agencies.

Several States have made marked progress in building schools through State agencies which issue long-term bonds to finance school construction in the districts. The school district leases the new building. Revenue from rents is used by the agencies to retire their bonds. After the bonds have been paid, title to the school is transferred to the local district. The program of Federal support is aimed at helping more States start such school financing agencies, and thus at helping local districts overcome barriers to building more schools.

The credit support for bonds of communities and State agencies, taken together with the planning grants, should help the States and communities continue their present annual rate of substantial increase in school construction over the next five years. The partnership program of Federal grants, matched by the States, should complete the task of building the classrooms that are critically needed.

Aid to Federally Affected Areas

In considering the school construction problem, there is a special, related area which should have the attention of the Congress at this time. The Congress has for some years recognized the responsibility of the Federal Government to aid communities where Federal activities result in excessive burdens on the local school system. Authority to provide Federal funds for school construction in Federally affected school districts will expire next June and should be extended.

Educational Research

Basic to all endeavors in improving education is a vigorous and farsighted program of educational research. This has been a sorely neglected field.

Such a program should be comprehensive in its approach, planned on a broad scale and executed thoroughly. In this way, educational research can, among other things, point the way to advances in making life more meaningful to more people and in the more efficient use of manpower and funds for education.

To increase the effectiveness of education, national leadership could well be directed to research in such areas as: ways of educating more people to their fullest capacity; staffing and housing the Nation's schools and colleges; educating the retarded child to help him lead a more normal life, and educating the child of special abilities so that he may utilize these abilities more fully; the relationship of schools to juvenile delinquency; educational effects of population mobility; educational needs of low income families. These studies would be conducted through the Office of Education in cooperation with the Nation's colleges, universities and State departments of education, thus encouraging and strengthening existing research efforts.

It is imperative that we now give renewed attention and support to this arm of education -- to the end that the country may have a sound, factual basis for identifying and analyzing problems and finding solutions. For these research purposes, and also to expand and improve other services, I urge the Congress to provide a major increase in funds for the Office of Education.

Education Beyond High School

Our vision would be limited if we failed at this time to give special thought to education beyond the high school. Certain problems exist now in this field, and already we can foresee other needs and problems shaping up in the future.

Shortages now exist in medicine, teaching, nursing, science, engineering and in other fields of knowledge which require education beyond the level of the secondary school. Changing times and conditions create new opportunities and challenges. There are new possibilities for older persons -- properly trained -- to lead more productive and rewarding lives. The tide of increasing school enrollment will soon reach higher educational institutions. Within 10 years, we may expect three students in our colleges and universities for every two who are there now.

Higher education is and must remain the responsibility of the States, localities and private groups and institutions. But to lay before us all the problems of education beyond high school, and to encourage active and systematic attack on them, I shall appoint a distinguished group of educators and citizens to develop this year, through studies and conferences, proposals in this educational field. Through the leadership and counsel of this group, beneficial results can be expected to flow to education and to the Nation in the years ahead.

Teaching

In all our efforts for education -- in providing adequate schools, research and study -- we must never lose sight of the very heart of education: good teaching itself.

Good teachers do not just happen. They are the product of the highest personal motivation, encouraged and helped in their work by adequate salaries and the respect, support, goodwill of their neighbors. The quality of American teaching has never been better. But the rewards for too many teachers are not commensurate with their work and their role in American life.

It is my earnest hope that, along with progress in other aspects of education, the States and communities will give increasing attention to this taproot of all education -- good teachers, and hence good teaching.

Conclusion

These several proposals are designed, not only to correct current problems, but to build for the future. For today's decisions will influence tomorrow's education -- and, hence, the welfare of the Nation.

The actions here proposed, I believe, constitute a sound and realistic approach to those educational problems on which the Federal Government should now act. They have a primary reliance on the private initiative which wells from the free spirit of a free people.

With this program, we can lay the basis for better education in America in the years ahead. In this way we keep faith with our children.

President's Budget

GREATER TAX RECEIPTS, SPENDING FORECAST FOR FISCAL '57

A surplus in the federal Treasury highlighted the budget for fiscal 1957 that President Eisenhower sent to Congress Jan. 16. The estimated surplus for fiscal 1956, ending June 30, 1956, was $200 million. In fiscal 1957 the Administration hoped the surplus would grow to $400 million.

Summary of the fiscal 1957 budget estimates:

- New obligational authority -- $66.3 billion, the highest since fiscal 1953's $80.3 billion.
- Expenditures -- $65.9 billion, highest since fiscal 1954's $67.8 billion.
- Receipts -- $66.3 billion, the highest ever.
- Surplus -- $400 million, the first since fiscal 1951's $3.5 billion surplus.

The margin by which the fiscal 1956 and 1957 budgets were expected to balance was "slim," Mr. Eisenhower said, and could be upset by what Congress did or failed to do, and by a drop in tax payments to the Treasury.

Possible pitfalls:

Mail Rates -- Budget estimates included a $350 million increase in mail rates, a request rebuffed by Congress every year since 1953.

Highways -- The budget included $897.5 million for roads authorized under the 1954 Highway Act but omitted any provision for speeded-up federal development of the Interstate Highway System, a major legislative goal of Mr. Eisenhower. Congress in 1955 rejected both the Administration's bond program for roads and a Democratic bill for higher taxes on highway items. In his Budget Message, the President gave no details but said he was "confident that the expanded program can be soundly financed so as not to create budget deficits."

Taxes -- Estimates of budget receipts were based on continuing high prosperity, no cut in income taxes, and extension of existing corporate and excise tax rates.

Budget Terms

APPROPRIATIONS -- Authority to spend money from the federal Treasury. In most cases, an appropriation confers authority both to incur new obligations and to pay for them. In other cases, an appropriation is granted to pay off a previously authorized commitment. This is called "liquidation of prior contract authorization."

NEW OBLIGATIONAL AUTHORITY -- Authority to make new money commitments. This category includes all appropriations except those to liquidate previously authorized contracts; all new contract authorizations which will be paid off by future appropriations; new authorizations to make expenditures from borrowed money; and most re-appropriations to continue available unused portions of past-year appropriations which would otherwise expire.

EXPENDITURES -- All federal cash spending from new and carry-over funds. Expenditures do not include either obligations (such as contracts or orders) for which the actual cash outlay will be made in some future year, or payments from trust funds.

RECEIPTS -- Federal income from taxes, customs and other revenues. In the regular budget (as distinguished from the "cash" budget), receipts under trust fund programs are not included.

SURPLUS OR DEFICIT -- The difference in a given year between spending and income. When expenditures exceed receipts, the result is a deficit.

UNEXPENDED BALANCE — The unspent (but largely obligated) portions of past-year appropriations which are carried over and are currently available for expenditures.

Tax Outlook

Treasury estimates of personal income, corporate profits and tax payments:

	1955 Calendar Year	1956 Calendar Year
Personal income	$302.5	$312.5
Corporate profits	43.0	43.0

	Fiscal 1956	Fiscal 1957
	(in billions)
Personal income taxes	$33.6	$35.1
Corporation income taxes	20.3	20.3

Explaining why personal income was expected to rise while corporate profits levelled off, Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey said 1955 was a year of unprecedented prosperity in which profits rose $9 billion above 1954's $34 billion figure. "Adjustments" in business activity and greater price competition could be expected in 1956, he said. The country might benefit from a "relatively profitless prosperity," he added.

The expected rise in personal income, Humphrey said, was projected on an expanded work force in 1956 and wage increases.

DEBT REDUCTIONS

Defending the Administration's preference for a "modest" reduction in the national debt rather than tax cuts that would unbalance the budget, Humphrey said that if a "significant surplus" of $2.5 or $3 billion should develop, a tax cut would be considered. He said there were no "hidden" items in the budget that the Administration hoped would produce such a surplus.

So long as the government must spend 64 percent of its budget for protection of the nation, no substantial reduction of the national debt could be anticipated, Humphrey added.

Under the heading, "Protection, including Collective Security," the budget for fiscal 1957 proposed:

Military Budget

Additional emphasis on guided missiles and reserve forces helped push the proposed Defense Department military spending budget for fiscal 1957 up to $35.5 billion, an increase of $1 billion over fiscal 1956.

The requested amount for guided missiles capable of blasting distant countries or obliterating attacking planes was $1.2 billion, compared with $917 million appropriated for them in fiscal 1956, $569 million in fiscal 1955 and $504 million in fiscal 1954.

Defense Department spokesmen termed the guided missile request the largest increase in terms of "significant dollars." They said missile production "is coming along better."

The Department's previously expressed determination to build a 2.9 million-man Ready Reserve force by 1960 was reflected in the fiscal 1957 request for $1 billion for reserve components, a $224 million increase over the fiscal 1956 figure.

DECREASE FOR AIRCRAFT

The most noteworthy decrease among new requests was for aircraft. Despite conversion to costly jets, the fiscal 1957 request was $6.7 billion compared with $6.8 billion appropriated for fiscal 1956 and $8 billion in fiscal 1955. Development of guided missiles and jet conversion with fiscal 1956 money figured heavily in the reduction, according to Defense Department spokesmen.

The biggest reduction percentage-wise was for weapons, where $51 million was asked for fiscal 1957 compared with $100 million appropriated in fiscal 1956. Combat vehicles, artillery, ammunition and production equipment budget requests also were under the previous year's appropriations.

Comparing recent military budget figures with fiscal 1954's $40.3 billion revealed that amounts had leveled off near the $35 billion mark.

Farm Program

The President estimated net spending for the government's farm program in fiscal 1957 at $3.4 billion -- $12 million less than estimated fiscal 1956 spending and more than $1 billion below fiscal 1955's costs.

His soil bank proposal would cost $400 million in fiscal 1957, the President estimated. But the net cost of price support programs was expected to drop $485 million.

A comparison of gross and net expenditures for price support, supply and purchase programs:

	Gross Expenditures	Net Expenditures

School Aid

Only part of the cost of the President's proposed school aid program was reflected in the fiscal 1957 budget. If enacted, the program would authorize over $405 million a year.

In his budget, the President proposed new obligational authority of $375.5 million for school construction aid in fiscal 1957. He estimated expenditures at $150 million. Aid to schools in federally affected areas would come to an additional $142 million.

Health Program

Mr. Eisenhower recommended "substantially" increased budgetary emphasis on the "expansion of medical research, greater support for basic scientific research and training, enlargement of protective and preventive services in the fields of health and welfare, improvement of our labor and manpower services, and construction of hospitals and other necessary health and research facilities."

Noting that Congress had failed to approve his proposal for federal reinsurance of private health insurance plans, the President said:

"The Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare is working on plans whereby private insurance organizations generally may pool risks to cover abnormal losses possible under broader health plans, and, if necessary, appropriate legislation will be recommended. Should this approach not be successful, a federal reinsurance service should receive renewed consideration."

For "promotion of public health" in fiscal 1957, he requested $520 million in new obligational authority and estimated spending at $441 million, compared to an estimated $381 million in fiscal 1956 and $276 million in fiscal 1955.

Public Works

President Eisenhower said net budget expenditures for natural resources in fiscal 1957 would remain at the $1 billion level.

While spending for flood control and reclamation projects was estimated to increase by a net $23 million, Tennessee Valley Authority spending was expected to drop $57 million.

Although three new steam-electric units would be authorized for TVA, they would be financed largely through the sale of revenue bonds if Congress approved, the President said. He estimated TVA would repay $75 million to the Treasury in fiscal 1957 and have net receipts of $27 million.

Other Appropriations

Other major monetary proposals in the budget:

- Atomic Energy -- A $230 million increase in total spending; a decrease in capital expenditures.
- Stockpiling, Defense Production -- A nearly 50 percent cut in net expenditures; no new obligational authority.
- Mutual Security -- New obligational authority of $3 billion for military and direct forces aid, $1.9 billion for economic aid, with no reduction in the current $4.5 billion backlog of unexpended balances for military aid. "About one-half of the fiscal year 1957 program will be concentrated in Korea, Pakistan, Taiwan and Turkey."
- Foreign Information and Exchange Activities -- A $48 million increase for the U.S. Information Agency and a $2 million boost for the State Department's international exchange program.
- Veterans' Benefits -- $4.9 billion for veterans' programs. By the year 2000, under existing law, compensation and pension payments "may be twice their present yearly total of nearly $3 billion" and most payments will be for "non-service-connected infirmities associated with advancing age." Congress and the public should consider carefully the relationship of veterans' non-medical programs to the existing civil benefits provided veterans and others.

• Aviation -- $40 million in new obligational authority for improved air navigation and traffic control facilities, a $50 million increase for total spending by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, a decrease to $34 million in subsidies to commercial airlines. "I shall shortly initiate a comprehensive study of the nation's long-range needs for aviation facilities," both civil and military.

• Shipping -- Funds both for the hull of an atomic exhibit ship and for "a nuclear-powered merchant ship, to be built over a longer period, incorporating experience gained from the peace ship and from later research and development." New obligational authority of $165 million for atomic and conventional ships.

• Regulatory Agencies -- Increased funds "to strengthen every major regulatory program," particularly those involving antitrust legislation and trading in securities.

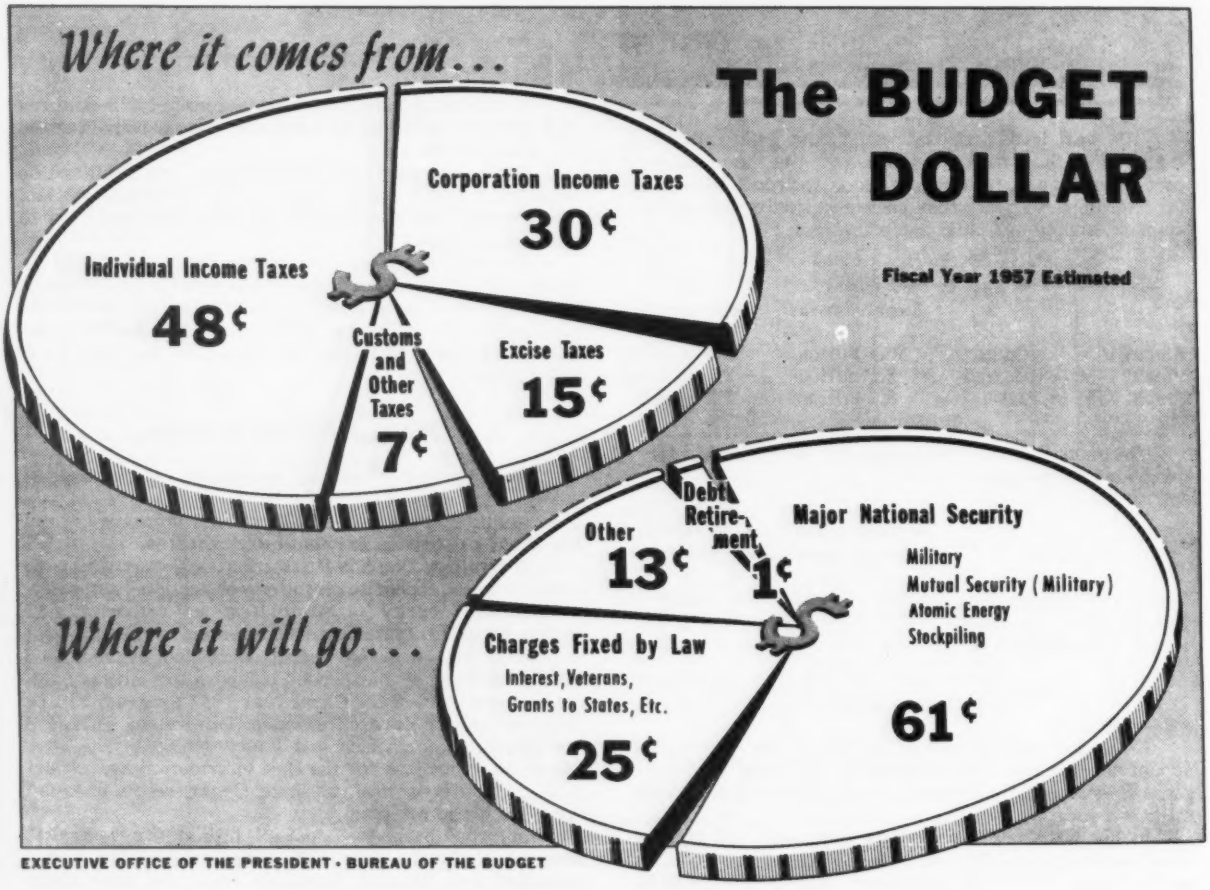
• General Government -- A $146 million increase, largely for improved buildings and a higher payment to the civil service retirement fund; 25,000 more personnel in civilian agencies but 6,000 fewer civilians in military agencies.

• Public Debt -- $7 billion for interest payments on the public debt, a $200 million increase due to the rising cost of credit.

Legislative Requests

Following are requests to Congress in the Budget for legislative action. Requests for appropriations are excluded.

*Indicates requests submitted in previous years, in essentially the same form, but not granted by Congress:



AGRICULTURE

Take no action to restore high rigid price supports for farm commodities.

Provide $450 million in new obligational authority for the soil bank plan and accompanying proposals.

*Amend the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act to permit the Farmers' Home Administration to make loans to part-time and low-income farmers, and provide an additional Farmers' Home Administration loan authorization of $15 million to permit broader coverage in the financing of small farms.

Permit refunds to farmers of federal taxes on gasoline used in their farm operations.

HEALTH

*Authorize federal insurance of private loans for the construction or modernization of health facilities. Authorize a contingent liability of $200 million outstanding at any one time, plus an additional $150 million at the discretion of the President.

Authorize a temporary program of federal construction grants for medical and dental research and teaching facilities.

*Enact legislation to alleviate shortages of practical and professional nurses, to assist in training more personnel and to encourage better nurse utilization.

*Extend and improve the grant formulas for assistance to states in carrying out public health activities.

*Authorize increased federal child welfare services.

*Enact legislation to stimulate improvement of programs for the mentally ill.

Enact legislation to alleviate the shortage of special teachers and improve educational opportunities for mentally retarded children.

*Authorize separate federal matching of state and local expenditures for medical care of public assistance recipients in the four federally aided categories (aged, blind, disabled and children); set federal share at 50 percent, up to a maximum derived by multiplying $6 a month by the number of adults on public assistance rolls, and $3 a month by the number of minors on the rolls.

Authorize periodic surveys of sickness and disability in the United States.

Extend the Poliomyelitis Vaccination Assistance Act.

EDUCATION

Authorize $250 million annually for a five-year program of grants to states for school buildings in financially needy districts.

*Authorize $750 million over a five-year period for federal purchase of bonds of school districts with "marginal" credit.

*Authorize federal advances to provide needed reserve funds for state school financing agencies.

*Authorize $5 million annually for five years to provide assistance to states for the administration of state programs designed to increase efficient public school construction.

Extend for two years authority for federal aid for school construction in areas affected by federal activities.

HOUSING

*Authorize contracts for 35,000 new public housing units a year for two years, and restore provisions of the 1954 Housing Act limiting new public housing to communities with workable slum clearance or prevention programs.

Amend public housing law to provide limited preference to elderly low-income families and permit admission of elderly single persons.

Enact legislation to encourage construction of private units for rental or sale to elderly persons.

Increase the Federal Housing Administration's mortgage insurance authority.

Make permanent, and broaden, FHA authority to insure home improvement loans.

Increase from $5 million to $10 million, authorization for matching grants to state, metropolitan and regional planning agencies for urban planning assistance.

Revise existing urban renewal and community facilities legislation to permit aid in industrial redevelopment of chronic labor surplus areas.

Increase, by $100 million, borrowing authorization for college housing loans, and allow interest rates "adequate to cover costs to the government."

*Permit authority for farm housing loans under title V of the 1949 Housing Act to expire June 30, 1956.

OTHER

Cover under Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, groups excluded under existing law.

Enact legislation to make the interest paid to the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance trust fund reflect more closely the long-term character of investments by the fund.

*Authorize federal aid to states for strengthening their services for prevention and treatment of juvenile delinquency.

Extend temporarily, until June 30, 1959, the existing formula for determining the federal share of public assistance payments.

*Fix at 50 percent, the federal share of supplementary old-age assistance payments to beneficiaries of OASI who are added to the assistance rolls after fiscal 1957.

Authorize research and demonstration projects in the social security field.

*Enact legislation to promote wider appreciation of the arts and give national recognition for distinguished civilian contributions to the advancement of the arts and the welfare of mankind.

FOREIGN POLICY

Provide $4.9 billion in new obligational authority for mutual security programs in fiscal 1957.

Amend the Mutual Security Act to provide "limited authority" to make longer-term commitments for economic assistance for projects which require a period of years for planning and completion.

*Approve U.S. membership in the Organization for Trade Cooperation.

Extend the Export Control Act.

Authorize on a continuing basis, U.S. participation in international trade fairs and cultural presentations.

LABOR

*Extend the minimum wage law to protect additional workers.

*Raise benefits and provide more funds for rehabilitation under the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act.

*Enact a new program providing technical aid and limited financial assistance to the states for promoting occupational safety.

MILITARY AND VETERANS

*Improve military and veterans' survivor benefits.

*Relate military service survivor benefits to Old-Age and Survivors Insurance benefits.

*Provide reasonable rentals for servicemen occupying substandard government quarters.

Extend authority for Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance of military housing units.

*Provide "uniform" medical care for dependents of servicemen.

MISCELLANEOUS AND ADMINISTRATIVE

*Increase postal rates.

*Authorize appropriations from the general funds of the Treasury to pay the Post Office Department for transportation of mail, such as educational or religious matter, being carried free or at greatly reduced rates.

*Provide that federal employing agencies bear the cost of accident compensation benefits paid their employees.

Authorize a $2 million increase in the federal payment to the District of Columbia.

*Establish in the District of Columbia, a system of benefits for workers temporarily disabled from non-occupational causes.

Transfer Freedmen's Hospital (D.C.) to Howard University and provide for construction of a new teaching hospital.

Authorize funds for construction and improvement of fire houses, hospitals, institutions and recreational facilities in the District of Columbia.

Authorize the provision of minimum essential sanitation facilities for the U.S. Indian population and Alaskan natives.

Transfer to the territorial government of Alaska, responsibility for care of the mentally ill, providing temporary federal aid for building and operating treatment centers.

Increase the existing dollar limitations for public assistance grants to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Authorize the (Panama) Canal Zone government to make expenditures to replace schools and other civic improvements being transferred to the Republic of Panama under terms of a 1955 treaty.

TAXES AND ECONOMIC POLICY

RESOURCES, PUBLIC WORKS

*Authorize as a "single integrated program," completion of a 40,000-mile interstate highway system over a period of "approximately" ten years, with the federal government assuming "principal responsibility" for financing the program.

Help rebuild federal-aid highways damaged in 1955 floods by providing a $10 million increase in the fiscal 1956 authorization for grants to states.

An "Iffy" Business

To illustrate the difficulties in projecting a firm federal budget, CQ compared the Administration's estimates of the fiscal 1956 budget as made public on three occasions:

		Estimated
	Jan. 1955	Aug. 1955	Jan. 1956
		(in billions)
Spending	$62.4	$63.8	$64.3
Receipts	60.0	62.1	64.5
Deficit (-) or Surplus (+)	-2.4	-1.7	+0.2

Authorize federal construction of:

*Fryingpan-Arkansas project (Colo.)

Ventura project (Calif.)

Wapinitia project, Juniper division (Ore.)

Washoe project (Nev. - Calif.)

Authorize development, on a "partnership" basis, of:

*Green Peter-White Bridge Reservoir (Ore.)

John Day Reservoir (Ore.)

Bruces Eddy Reservoir (Idaho)

*Enact "partnership" legislation to permit local interests to install power facilities at the Cougar multiple-purpose project in Oregon.

Authorize the Bureau of Reclamation to assist local organizations by means of loans and grants for small reclamation projects.

*Authorize a survey to determine whether hydroelectric power can be economically developed from the tides at Passamaquoddy Bay (Maine).

Authorize sale of revenue bonds to finance additional steam-power facilities of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Authorize deepening and improvement of the Great Lakes connecting channels.

OTHER

Continue for one year, excise and corporation income taxes at existing rates.

Extend for one year the temporary increase in the statutory debt limit.

*Enact legislation to reduce the frequency of information returns submitted by employers withholding income and social security taxes.

Authorize new construction for improvement of Atomic Energy Commission production plants and research and development facilities.

*Authorize construction of a nuclear-powered ship using an atomic propulsion plant "already developed."

Extend the Defense Production Act for two years.

Amend the Small Business Act to increase the authority for disaster loans.

Authorize, on an experimental basis, a joint federal-state flood indemnity and reinsurance program.

Authorize federal loans and grants, in cooperation with the states, to assist communities suffering from "substantial and persistent" unemployment.

Increase patent fees to make Patent Office more nearly self-supporting.

Economic Report

HIGH BUT 'TAMER' PROSPERITY PREDICTED FOR 1956

The President's Economic Report, sent to Congress Jan. 24, predicted "high levels of production, employment and income will be broadly sustained during the coming year," though expansion will be "tamer."

Some of the figures Mr. Eisenhower reported:

- Gross National Product (the value of all goods and services produced) -- Rose in December, 1955, to the highest annual rate ever, $397 billion.

- Employment -- Stood at 64.6 million at the end of 1955, a record annual rate.

- Income -- Reached an annual rate of $318 billion. "Profits are satisfactory in most industries. Both investment and consumer spending are going forward at a good pace."

- Credit -- Consumer credit outstanding at the end of 1955 reached $36.2 billion, a $6.1 billion increase since the end of 1954. Of the increase, $5.3 billion was in installment buying, over two-thirds of it for automobiles. Home mortgage debt increased by $13.4 billion between 1954 and 1955.

Ideal Attained

The "great economic achievement" of 1955, the President said, was attaining the ideals of "full employment, rising incomes and a stable dollar." He gave as one reason for stable consumer and wholesale prices, "the opposite movements of industrial and farm prices in wholesale markets." The "most pressing problem" before Congress, he said, "is the continued decline of agricultural incomes."

Noting that some groups did not share 1955's general prosperity, Mr. Eisenhower said: "The government can do a great deal to help people who have been left behind in the onrush of progress by undertaking special programs for raising their productivity." He again said he hoped Congress would adopt:

- Farm measures recommended in his Jan. 9 message. (See p. 52)

- New measures to help the elderly, handicapped and sick.

- An Area Assistance Program for communities with chronic unemployment.

- Indemnities for flood victims.

Fiscal Policy

President Eisenhower repeated that "an early reduction of taxes cannot now be justified," said payment on the public debt "would signify with unmistakable clarity that our democracy is capable of self-discipline."

He said the government's "early recognition of a need for monetary and fiscal caution, and the gradual but persistent application of a policy of restraint during the greater part of 1955, contributed in no small degree to the achievement and maintenance of prosperity without price inflation."

He indicated some concern, however, at the spurt in installment buying, said "it would be desirable to increase the influence that the federal government can exercise on consumer credit." Noting that stand-by authority to regulate consumer credit was withdrawn in 1952, he said: "Experience...suggests that the authority to set, if and as circumstances may require, minimum down payments and maximum maturities on installment credit for the purchase of consumer durables would be a useful adjunct to other stabilizing measures."

He said it was a "good time" for Congress and the executive branch to consider whether or not such stand-by authority was needed.

Legislative Requests

Many of the legislative recommendations in the Economic Report had been made earlier in the State of the Union, farm, school and budget messages. (See pp. 45, 52, 59, 62)

In the Economic Report, however, the President outlined more fully his plan to aid areas with heavy unemployment. He proposed establishing in the Commerce Department an Area Assistance Administration (provided with a $50 million revolving loan fund) which would:

"Provide technical assistance to communities or larger areas, either directly or through grants, for studying their resources and preparing practical plans for industrial development." Aid would not be limited to areas with chronic unemployment.

"Extend capital improvement loans for projects that promise to improve a community's long-run economic outlook but for which financing cannot be obtained on reasonable terms from private sources." Loans would be made jointly with state or local agencies, the federal loan would be limited to about one-quarter the cost of the project, and the state or local share should be at least 15 percent. To qualify, communities must have had an 8 percent unemployment rate for most of the preceding 24 months.

In addition, the President proposed amendments to housing laws to:

Give priority to unemployment areas in financing public facilities.

Make urban renewal benefits available for industrial redevelopment in business sections.

Antitrust Measures

Six revisions of antitrust laws were proposed:

Require firms of "significant size" engaged in interstate commerce to give advance notice and data to antitrust agencies before instituting mergers.

Apply federal regulation to all bank mergers.

Require federal approval of holding company acquisition of banks.

Specify that the federal government has authority to act in mergers when either party is engaged in interstate commerce.

Make Federal Trade Commission cease-and-desist orders final, unless appealed to the courts.

Authorize the Attorney General, when considering civil proceedings, to compel the production of documents without recourse to a grand jury.

Other legislative proposals not advanced in earlier 1956 messages were:

Education and Welfare

Extend for two years the federal-state hospital construction program.

Increase the maximum size and maturity of home repair and modernization loans eligible for Federal Housing Administration insurance.

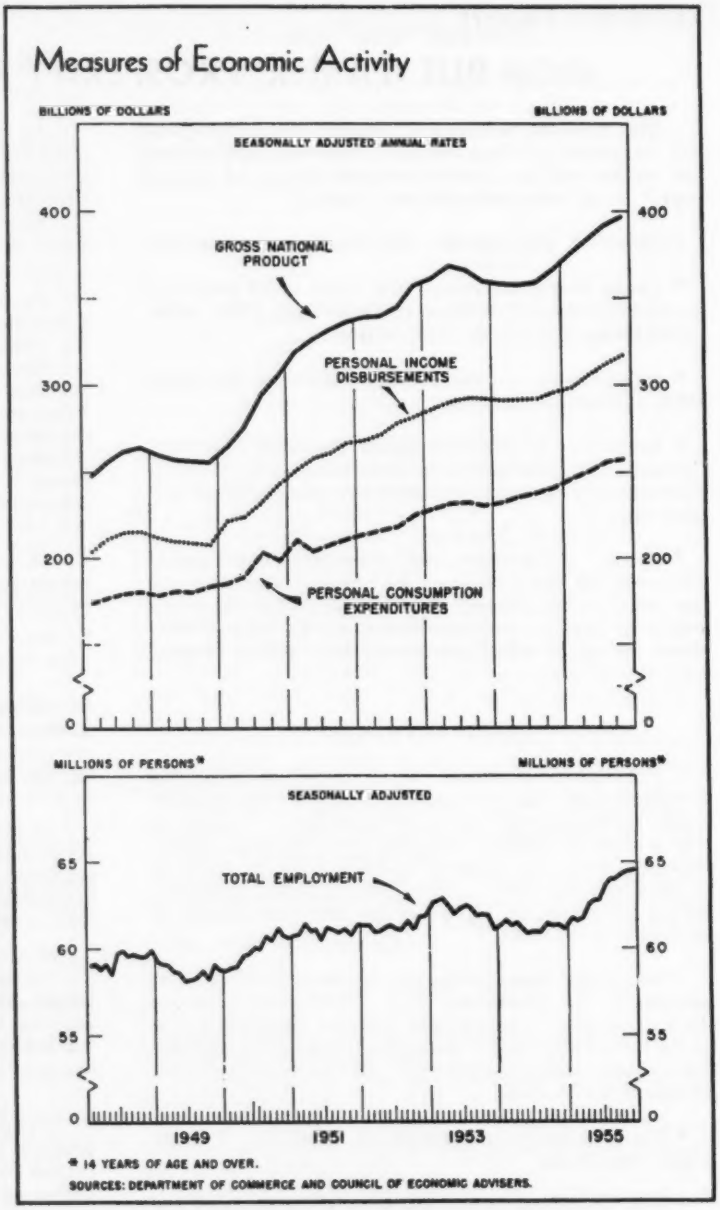
Increase, and place on a more permanent basis, FHA's mortgage insurance authorization.

Authorize "exceptionally favorable terms" for federally insured mortgages for persons displaced by urban renewal and other public projects.

Permit older persons buying houses with federally insured mortgages to have third parties -- individuals or organizations -- guarantee interest and amortization payments.

Authorize the Federal National Mortgage Association to vary within wider limits its stock purchase requirement.

Taxes and Economic Policy



Extend the Export-Import Bank's lending authority beyond 1958.

Authorize federal reinsurance for private carriers offering flood insurance.

Authorize federal-state indemnities for flood losses on real property, business inventories and household effects, with insured individuals paying part of the system's cost.

Permit regulated investment companies with the bulk of their assets in tax-exempt securities to pass through to their shareholders the tax-exempt status of the income from such securities.

Consider authorizing federal insurance of share accounts in credit unions.

The President made these requests to state governments:

Expand vocational rehabilitation programs.

Give preference to older persons in admission to public housing projects.

Strengthen workmen's compensation and unemployment insurance laws.

Consider providing non-occupational disability insurance for workers.

Review debt limits that restrict borrowing for necessary public works.

Institute programs to attract well-trained persons to the teaching field.

PRESIDENT CALLS FOR 'FURTHER' HEALTH STEPS

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

The nation in recent years has made notable advances in the unending struggle against disease and disability. Human suffering has been relieved, the span of man's years has been extended. But in the light of the human and economic toll still taken by disease, in the light of the great opportunities open before us, the nation still has not summoned the resources it properly and usefully could summon to the cause of better health.

Therefore, as a nation, we must now take further steps to improve the health of the people. This further effort, funds for which have been included in the Budget submitted to the Congress, should be a characteristically American partnership -- a partnership in which private and governmental enterprise are joined to advance the national welfare. The important role of the federal government is to provide assistance without interference in personal, local or state responsibilities.

Such action should be taken in several general areas, through:

- A substantial increase in federal funds for medical research.
- A new program of grants for construction of medical research and training facilities.
- Further steps to help alleviate health personnel shortages.
- Measures which will help our people meet the costs of medical care.
- Action to strengthen certain other basic health services throughout the nation.

Medical Research

Progress in medicine is dependent upon research. Intensive studies by thousands of scientists have been responsible for important advances in recent years against such major afflictions as rheumatic fever, epilepsy, high blood pressure, poliomyelitis and blindness.

The development of antibiotics has had a major share in bringing about dramatic reductions during the past 10 years in the death toll from many other diseases -- for example, tuberculosis 75 percent, appendicitis 69 percent, acute rheumatic fever 66 percent.

The widespread use of the Salk poliomyelitis vaccine within the past year alone has proved highly effective in reducing the threat of paralytic poliomyelitis to many of our children.

Yet much remains unknown. Despite progress in the control of cancer, its cause remains a dark mystery. Little is known about the diseases of the nervous system. Much remains to be discovered about heart disease and mental illness.

In order to facilitate the expansion of medical research, I have, therefore, proposed in the Budget submitted to the Congress an appropriation to the Public Health Service for the National Institutes of Health of $126,525,000 -- an increase of 28 percent over the total funds appropriated for the present fiscal year.

This program is designed to give major emphasis -- through an increased share of funds -- to basic research. For basic research -- in the biological and medical sciences -- underlies all medical progress. Through increased emphasis on these fundamental studies, we bring into better balance the total medical research effort.

The appropriation I have recommended would provide a substantial increase in funds in various categories of research. The program would provide funds as follows: for cancer $32,437,000; heart disease $22,106,000; mental illness $21,749,000; arthritis and metabolic diseases $13,345,000; neurology and blindness $12,196,000; infectious and parasitic diseases $9,799,000; dental disorders $2,971,000; and $11,922,000 for the general research programs of the National Institutes of Health.

The increased funds recommended would be expended in part at the laboratories of the National Institutes of Health. But by far the major share of the increased funds would be for research grants to medical schools, hospitals and private laboratories. Funds for these research grants would be increased by 47 percent over this year's appropriation.

The increase of $7 million recommended for research grants by the National Science Foundation would provide for additional research in the biological and medical sciences.

These programs would permit a broader and more intensive scientific effort to develop the fundamental knowledge necessary to a better understanding of illness and to apply that knowledge more rapidly to relieve human suffering.

Medical Research and Teaching

The bulk of medical research is conducted in laboratories of universities, hospitals and other institutions outside the federal government. These institutions also provide the intellectual environment for training the scientists upon whom successful research depends. And they provide the training ground for medical practitioners.

Physical facilities of medical research and teaching institutions are inadequate to meet the human needs of the nation. As we strive to achieve better health for the people, we must help to provide the needed laboratories and teaching facilities.

I, therefore, recommend that Congress enact legislation authorizing $250 million for a five-year program to assist in construction of research and teaching facilities for schools of medicine, osteopathy, public health, and dentistry and other research institutions. These institutions would be required to supply at least equal amounts in matching funds.

Health Personnel

The rate at which physicians are being graduated from the nation's medical schools is barely keeping pace with the increase in population. There are serious shortages in such specialized fields as psychiatry, pediatrics, and in physical medicine and rehabilitation. Relative to population, the number of dentists and nurses is diminishing. The aging of our population and the increase in the incidence of chronic disease, the anticipated continued growth of voluntary health insurance plans, and the general expansion of our economy -- all will tend to increase the demand for health services.

The increase in funds which I have requested for the National Institutes of Health and the National Science Foundation will permit a major increase in trainees and research fellows. The program of construction grants for medical research and teaching facilities also offers the opportunity for medical, dental and other professional schools to expand their student capacity and provide for the training of more physicians, scientists, dentists and other health workers.

As additional federal aid in meeting the problem of existing personnel shortages in the health field, I recommend to the Congress, as was proposed in my Health Message of last year, enactment of legislation to provide for (a) a five-year program of grants for training practical nurses, (b) traineeships for graduate nurses and (c) authority to establish traineeships in other public health specialties.

Cost of Medical Care

Since World War II the costs of medical care have been increasingly met through voluntary health insurance. More than 100 million persons are now enrolled in prepayment health insurance plans of some type. But health insurance coverage is still not available to many who need it, and the character and amount of insurance protection in important respects remains inadequate.

Health insurance protection must be made more available to older persons and those living in rural areas, to the self-employed and those working in small organizations who cannot be reached through ordinary group enrollment methods. There is particular need for much broader coverage against the cost of long term or other especially expensive illness, which can be a financial catastrophe for many families.

The need for more and better health insurance coverage can best be met by building on what many of our people have already provided for themselves -- the voluntary health prepayment plans. Much can be done to encourage more rapid expansion and improvement of such plans.

Last year and the year before I urged enactment of a proposal for federal reinsurance to encourage increased protection against the cost of medical care through voluntary prepayment plans. Since the legislation was introduced, private insurance organizations have developed new types of policies and prepayment plans and have extended coverage to groups formerly unprotected. There are now indications that the organizations writing health prepayment plans might progress more rapidly by joining together -- sharing or pooling their risks -- to offer broader benefits and expanded coverage on reasonable terms in fields of special needs. The Administration is considering legislative proposals which would permit such pooling. But, if practical and useful methods cannot be developed along these lines, then I will again urge enactment of the proposal made last year.

Illness and disability are among the principal problems of public assistance recipients, and are major causes of dependency. Therefore, I again recommend that the Congress authorize a separate program through which the federal government would match funds expended by the states and localities for medical care for the indigent aged, the blind, the permanently and totally disabled and dependent children.

Additionally, I renew my previous recommendations for (a) providing federal employees with the benefits of group health insurance, and (b) the improvement of medical care for the dependents of servicemen.

Strengthening Basic Services

Expansion of medical research, financial assistance for construction of research and teaching facilities, measures to increase research and health manpower and steps to help meet the costs of medical care are essential to national progress toward better health. It is equally essential that other public health services be strengthened and improved.

I present the following further proposals for consideration by the Congress:

• Sickness Surveys. Information on the nature and extent of sickness and disability is neither accurate nor up-to-date. The last comprehensive survey of illness in the nation was made 20 years ago. Since then American medicine has experienced the most rapid and dramatic changes in its history. Improved statistical data are essential as a guide for research and for the effective planning and operation of health programs.

I urge the Congress, therefore, to authorize the Public Health Service to secure periodically needed information on the incidence, duration and effects of illness and disability in the nation.

• Expansion of Medical Care Facilities. The federal-state program of aid in the construction of hospitals and other medical care facilities was broadened in 1954 to give greater emphasis to the construction of chronic disease hospitals, nursing homes, diagnostic and treatment centers and rehabilitation facilities.

I recommend the extension for two more years of this program, which otherwise would terminate in 1957. I have also proposed in my Budget Message a $19 million increase in funds to expand construction of these needed facilities.

I again urge the enactment of the proposal I made last year for federal insurance of mortgage loans made by private lending institutions for the construction of hospitals, clinics, nursing homes and other types of private medical care facilities. This proposal follows the pattern developed in successful government guaranty programs in other fields.

• Indian Health Program. As an important step toward improving health conditions among our Indian population, I recommend legislation which will authorize the Public Health Service to construct and maintain urgently needed sanitary facilities for our Indian population. For the total Indian health program, I propose a substantial increase in the funds of the Public Health Service.

• Mental Illness. Mental illness is one of our most serious national problems. Last year I recommended authorization of a new program of mental health project grants. The purpose of this program was to seek ways of improving the quality of care in mental institutions, of improving the administration of these institutions, and, most importantly, of reducing the length of stay in these institutions. I again urge that the Congress authorize this program.

• Water and Air Pollution. Problems of water pollution control grow more pressing with population growth and with industrial development and expansion. The present Water Pollution Control Act expires on June 30 of this year. I again recommend that the authority in this Act be strengthened and placed on a permanent basis. This would enable the Public Health Service to help the states and industry to deal effectively with the problems of pollution control.

I have also recommended a substantial increase in funds to broaden the research attack on problems of air pollution by non-federal institutions and by the Public Health Service and other government agencies. This will also permit a step-up in technical assistance to states for the control of pollution.

• Poliomyelitis Vaccination Assistance Act. Last year Congress approved an appropriation of federal funds to assist the states in providing free poliomyelitis vaccine for many of our children and expectant mothers. This program expires Feb. 15. I have recommended an extension to June 30, 1957, and an appropriation of $30 million to complete this program.

• Increased Support for Food and Drug Administration. Last year a committee of distinguished citizens made a thoughtful study and presented numerous recommendations for strengthening and improving the Food and Drug Administration in its important work of protecting the American consumer. I have recommended a significant increase in funds for the Food and Drug Administration to provide for an initial expansion of its inspection and related technical staff.

• Public Health Aspects of Civil Defense. The skills and resources of the Public Health Service and the Food and Drug Administration will be of great value to the nation in dealing with any civil defense emergency that may arise. The Federal Civil Defense Administration has delegated vital responsibilities to these agencies, and I have included funds in the Budget to strengthen research on the public health aspects of civil defense.

• Vocational Rehabilitation. The Congress in 1954 authorized an expansion of the federal contribution to the federal-state program of restoring handicapped men and women to more productive lives. I have recommended the funds needed to continue expansion of this program.

• Veterans Medical Program. The medical care of our veterans remains a growing responsibility, and in the next fiscal year the hospitals of the Veterans Administration will have an average daily load of 111,500 patients. I have included in the Budget a request for $53 million for construction and improvements at Veterans Administration facilities, about one-half of which is for replacement of old hospitals.

Conclusion

The Congress has enacted enlightened and progressive legislation during recent years which represents substantial gains in the unending war against disease and disability.

I now urge the Congress to give continued support to the quest for better health. The proposals I have submitted call for a proper distribution of responsibility among the many groups which make up the health services of the nation -- health professions, educational institutions, foundations, industry and all levels of government.

The role of the federal government in this great effort is that of a partner. The federal government should support the efforts of the states and communities and private agencies. It should encourage the individual initiative and industry inherent in our free society. The specific measures which I have placed before you are conceived in terms of these basic American principles; they provide promise for a renewed and reinvigorated attack on our health problems.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

THE WHITE HOUSE,

Text of Feb. 8 Message . . .

EISENHOWER ASKS CHANGES IN IMMIGRATION LAW

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

Throughout our history immigration to this land has contributed greatly to the strength and character of our Republic. Over the years we have provided for such immigration because it has been to our own national interest that we do so. It is no less to our national interest that we do so under laws that operate equitably.

The Secretary of State, the Attorney General and the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization have made a thorough study of the operation of our present immigration laws, and have advised me concerning the changes and additions which they consider necessary in the national interest. I have carefully reviewed their findings and concur in their conclusions. The recommendations now made are based on those findings and conclusions.

This Message takes up four separate and distinct subject matters respecting our immigration policies: (1) the quota system and the use of national origins, (2) the private-relief-bill system of handling hardship cases, (3) unnecessary restrictions and administrative provisions of our immigration laws and (4) judicial review in deportation. Each such subject matter is treated separately because the problems in each are wholly distinct from the others. Accordingly, the recommendations as to each subject matter will, I hope, be considered separately and each on its own merit.

I. The Quota System

The Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 was developed essentially as a codification of many separate, and sometimes overlapping and inconsistent, immigration and nationality laws. It was thought inappropriate, in connection with that legislation, to revise our basic immigration policies. Moreover, at that time 1950 census information was incomplete.

The time has now come to consider those policies. Experience in the post-war world demonstrates that the present national-origins method of admitting aliens needs to be re-examined, and a new system adopted which will admit aliens within allowable numbers according to new guidelines and standards.

The Congress has traditionally formulated our basic immigration policies, and will doubtless wish to make its decision as to what new system should be established only after its own study and investigation of all possible choices. There are many factors that must be taken into consideration. Among these are: the needs of this country for persons having specialized skills or cultural accomplishments; close family relationships; the populations and immigration policies of countries sending immigrants to this country; their past immigration and trade relationships with this country; and their assistance to the joint defense of the friendly free nations of the world.

Pending the completion by the Congress of such study and investigation, it is essential that we take interim measures to alleviate as much as possible inequities in the present quota system. Accordingly, I recommend the immediate enactment of the following proposals.

• First, the present quota system sets a maximum annual authorization of 154,657 quota immigrants. This figure is derived from a formula based upon the 1920 population. I recommend that total population as shown by the 1950 census be used as the base for determining the over-all ceiling. I believe that economic growth over the past 30 years and present economic conditions justify an increase of approximately 65,000 in quota numbers. I recommend that Congress provide for such an increase by fixing the over-all ceiling in terms of a percentage of total population as shown by the 1950 census. The new ceiling recommended would be approximately 220,000 quota numbers annually.

In order to eliminate some of the inequity resulting from the fact that several countries have large quotas which they do not use while others have small quotas which are usually oversubscribed, I recommend that the additional quota numbers -- i.e., those over and above the 154,657 numbers now provided for -- be distributed among countries in proportion to their actual immigration to this country since the establishment of the quota system in 1924.

This method of allocation will help to alleviate the problem of oversubscribed quotas. At the same time no country will have a lesser number of quota numbers allocated to it than at present.

SPECIAL SKILLS

• Second, I recommend that the Congress set aside from the increased annual quota 5,000 numbers to be available for admission of aliens without regard to nationality or national origin. Use of these numbers would enable us to meet some of the needs of this country which develop from time to time for persons with special skills and cultural or technical qualifications.

The existing immigration law recognizes somewhat similar criteria for quota immigrants by giving a preference to those whose services are determined by the Attorney General to be needed urgently in the United States because of the high education, technical training, specialized experience or exceptional ability... and to be substantially beneficial prospectively to the national economy, cultural interests or welfare of the United States. Our needs and requirements should be determined on the basis of consultation among the various departments and agencies of the government, and also with the advice and testimony of private organizations.

This special pool has further value as an experimental plan departing entirely from our present system of distributing quotas on a basis of nationality or place of birth. It also would enable us to give greater assistance to persons abroad who have undergone suffering and hardship resisting Communist aggression, who would make beneficial contributions to this country, and who will not have the benefit of the Refugee Relief Act after that Act's termination.

UNUSED QUOTAS

• Third, quota numbers that are unused by countries to which they are allocated should be made available for use elsewhere. Under our present law quota numbers which are unused by any particular country in the year in which they are available become void and may not be used by any other country.

I recommend enactment of legislation that will permit the utilization of unused quota numbers in the succeeding year. This should be done by pooling the unused quota numbers in each of the following areas: Europe, Africa, Asia and the Pacific Ocean area. These pooled quota numbers would then be distributed during a 12-month period on a first come, first served basis among eligible applicants of the area, without regard to country of birth within the area. These quotas should be limited to aliens who qualify for preference status under existing law -- persons having special skills or close relatives in the United States.

There is a further inequity in the quota system by virtue of the so-called mortgage on quotas resulting from the issuance of visas under the Displaced Persons Act and other special acts. The law provides that visas issued under these acts are chargeable against quotas authorized under the Immigration Act. The result is that the quotas of many countries are mortgaged far into the future. For example, 50 percent of the quota for Greece is mortgaged until the year 2017; for Lithuania, until 2090; for Latvia, until 2274. The total number so mortgaged for the year 1955 amounted to about 8,000, and over the total span of years the aggregate could be as much as 328,000. I recommend the elimination of this unfairness. This is consistent with the action of the Congress in enacting the Refugee Relief Act of 1953. Congress did not then impose additional mortgages on quotas but provided special non-quota visas for eligible refugees.

II. Private Bills

For some time I have considered that undue and largely useless burdens are placed upon the Congress and the President by the avalanche in recent years of private bills for the relief of aliens. The number of these bills is strikingly high in comparison with the number of public enactments. In the first session of the 84th Congress private immigration enactments alone accounted for 413 of 880 enactments, public and private; 3,059 such bills were introduced. During the 83rd Congress, private immigration enactments accounted for 753 of 1,788 enactments, both public and private; 4,797 such bills were introduced. At the beginning of the present session, there were 2,159 private immigration measures pending.

The Congress, in the performance of its constitutional duties, must consider the worthiness of each private immigration bill introduced. The President, in the performance of his constitutional duties, must consider the worthiness of each bill enacted. The nation's interest would surely be better served if the bulk of these private immigration claims were handled through suitable administrative machinery and if the Congress and the executive could thus give their full attention to more urgent national problems.

Under the private-bill system of handling individual immigration cases, many persons fail to obtain the very relief which others have received, because Congress has not had the time to take up and act on the bills introduced for their benefit. Indeed there are many whose plight has not even come to the attention of the Congress.

For these reasons it is my belief that action is called for to provide the necessary administrative authority to take care of such cases. I hope that such action will be taken without delay so that it may be of help this year. The enactment of such authority, in my opinion, would substantially eliminate the need for private legislative redress in this area. I suggest that there should be vested in the Attorney General limited discretionary powers to grant relief with respect to admission and deportation of aliens. Such discretion should be limited to aliens with close relatives in this country, to veterans and to functionaries of religious organizations, regardless of the technical statutory ground on which the alien is inadmissible or subject to deportation. These classes of cases embrace the great bulk of the hardship cases which appeal to our sense of fairness. However, no relief ought to be accorded aliens whose presence here would be dangerous to the safety and security of the United States. An appropriate charge against the applicable quota would be made in each case where relief is granted.

It should further be provided by the Congress that there shall be a ceiling on the number of cases in which such discretionary authority may be exercised.

III. Restrictions, Hardships

Experience under the existing immigration law has established that there are a number of changes, aside from the quota provisions, which should be made in the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952. Some provisions create unnecessary restrictions upon travel to the United States, while others inflict great hardships upon the aliens affected. Consequently, I make the following recommendations:

Under the present law, every alien applying for a visa must be fingerprinted; and every alien admitted without a visa and remaining in the United States for 30 days or longer, even if here temporarily, must be fingerprinted. Although in our minds no stigma is attached to fingerprinting, it is not a requirement of travel in other countries. We should be the first to remove travel obstacles which hamper the free exchange of ideas, cultures and commerce. Further, experience over the last three years has shown that this requirement does not significantly contribute to our national safety and security. The law should be amended to permit the Secretary of State and the Attorney General to waive the requirement of fingerprinting, on a reciprocal basis, for aliens coming here for temporary periods.

TRANSIENTS

We must recognize the tremendous increase in air and surface travel in recent years. Aliens traveling from one country to another often find it necessary to pass through the United States without any intention to remain in or even visit this country. A South American flying to or returning from Europe, for example, will often pass through the United States. He should not be required to meet all of the standards for admission, coupled with inspection and examination, that normally apply. These requirements result in unnecessary hardships to the traveler, expense to the carrier and loss of good will, without proportionate benefit to the United States. The law should be amended accordingly.

The present statute contains a restrictive requirement which makes it necessary for immigration authorities to inspect and apply all grounds of exclusion to aliens seeking admission to the mainland of the United States from Alaska and Hawaii. This requirement results in expense to the government and causes delays and inconvenience in travel. It must be remembered that, by definition in the law, these territories are part of the United States, and aliens who have entered or are present in them are subject to all the provisions of the Act. If the alien was deportable before he came to the mainland, he remains deportable. I recommend the elimination from the law of this unnecessary restriction upon travel.

The immigration laws presently require aliens to specify race and ethnic classification in visa applications. These provisions are unnecessary and should be repealed.

IRON CURTAIN ESCAPEES

A large group of refugees in this country obtained visas by the use of false identities in order to escape forcible repatriation behind the Iron Curtain; the number may run into the thousands. Under existing law such falsification is a mandatory ground for deportation. The law should be amended to give relief to these unfortunate people.

The inequitable provisions relating to Asian spouses and adopted children should be repealed.

The Immigration Act grants special naturalization benefits to veterans of our Armed Forces who have completed at least three years' honorable service and who can submit proof of admission for permanent residence. Many have been unable to submit this proof. I recommend that proof of admission be not required in such cases.

The present statute is unnecessarily restrictive as to aliens who marry United States citizens. It forbids adjustment to permanent residence if the alien has been in the United States less than one year before the marriage. This disrupts the family and is expensive for the alien who must go abroad to obtain a nonquota visa, without proportionate benefit to the United States. I recommend that the requirement of one year's presence in the United States before marriage be repealed.

The above covers the principal changes which I recommend as a minimum toward amelioration of the immigration laws. Others will be suggested by the Attorney General.

IV. Judicial Review

Just as the Nation's interests call for a larger degree of flexibility in the laws for regulating the flow of other peoples to our shores, there is at the same time a significant need to strengthen the laws established for the wholesome purpose of ridding the country of the relatively few aliens who have demonstrated their unfitness to remain in our midst. Some of these persons have been found to be criminals of the lowest character, trafficking in murder, narcotics and subversion. Constitutional due process wisely confers upon any alien, whatever the charge, the right to challenge in the courts the government's finding of deportability. However, no alien who has once had his day in court, with full rights of appeal to the higher courts, should be permitted to block his removal and cause unnecessary expense to the government by further judicial appeals the only purpose of which is delay. I am concerned by the growing frequency of such cases involving as they often do the depraved and confirmed criminal. Accordingly, I have asked the Attorney General to submit to the Congress a legislative proposal that will remedy this abuse of legal process.

- - - - - - - - - - -

I believe that these changes in our immigration and nationality laws, together with the amendments to the Refugee Relief Act which I have heretofore recommended to the Congress, not only will advance our own self-interest, but also will serve as living demonstrations that we recognize our responsibilities of world leadership. I urge their careful consideration by the Congress.

Text of March 19 Message

PRESIDENT SEEKS $4.9 BILLION FOREIGN AID PROGRAM

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

For almost a decade the United States has moved, year by year, with growing success, to help fortify the economies and military strength of nations of the free world. Over the years this effort has changed in size and character in keeping with changing world affairs. Today it remains as indispensable to the security of every American citizen and to the building of an enduring peace as on the day it began nine years ago.

Today this great nation, at the peak of its peacetime military and economic strength, must not hesitate or retreat in this vital undertaking. Nor can we subordinate this program to local concerns or collateral issues, on the unsound premise that steady progress through this program for nine years makes it no longer necessary.

We cannot now falter in our quest for peace.

The need for a mutual security program is urgent because there are still nations that are eager to strive with us for peace and freedom but, without our help, lack the means of doing so.

The need is urgent because there are still forces hostile to freedom that compel the free world to maintain adequate and coordinated military power to deter aggression.

The need is urgent because there are still peoples who aspire to sustain their freedom but confront economic obstacles that are beyond their capabilities of surmounting alone.

These facts are as fundamental to our own security and well-being as the maintenance of our own armed forces.

Our goal is clear -- an enduring peace with justice. To achieve it will continue to require effort, skill, patience and sacrifice. Toward it we must and will strive constantly by every means available to us.

SECURE FREEDOM

We must continue to work with other countries to insure that each free nation remains free, secure from external aggression and subversion, and able to develop a society marked by human welfare, individual liberty and a rising standard of living. We must continue to maintain our economic and military strength at home. We must continue to stimulate expansion of trade and investment in the free world. We must continue helping to build the productive capacities of free nations through public loans and guarantees of private investment. We must continue to provide technical knowledge and essential materials to speed the advance of other nations in peaceful uses of the atom. We must continue our cultural and educational exchanges to expand mutual knowledge and understanding. We must continue and intensify our information programs so that the peoples of the world may know our peaceful purposes and our love of human liberty. And through our mutual security programs we must continue helping to create in the free world conditions in which freedom can survive and develop, and free nations can maintain the defensive strength necessary to deter aggression.

Peace with justice remains the sole objective of our mutual security programs. We have no other interest to advance. We have no desire or intent to subjugate or subvert other peoples -- no purpose to change their chosen political, economic or cultural patterns -- no wish to make any of them our satellites. We seek only to further the cause of freedom and independence and to develop the military strength necessary to protect and defend it, in the interest of peace.

To help a free country to maintain forces necessary for the protection of its freedom and independence but beyond those which it can alone support may mean foregoing some domestic expenditure. To help a less developed nation in its initial steps toward an economy that can sustain freedom and independence and provide opportunity for higher living standards may mean postponement of desirable projects here in this country. We must continue willing to make these sacrifices, for the benefits we gain in the interests of peace are well worth the price. The mutual security program is a demand of the highest priority upon our resources.

Because our people and the peoples of other nations in the free world have been willing to make the necessary sacrifices, the past mutual security programs have achieved a real measure of success. By combined effort the free world has advanced toward stability and toward economic strength. It has achieved the power and the will to resist aggression. Collective security arrangements have brought into existence free world defense forces and facilities far greater than those which we, by our unaided efforts, could have raised and maintained from our own resources without a crushing burden of taxation on our people. In their economic aspects, our programs have made significant advances toward the solution of many problems of the free world. Without this assistance many other nations, beyond doubt, if existing at all, would exist today only in the grip of chaos. Moreover, we ourselves are more secure, more prosperous, better fitted to go forward in the common enterprise of freedom than ever before.

SOVIET POLICY CHANGE

Significant testimony to the success of our mutual security programs appears in the new turns and developments of Soviet policy. Aggression through force appears to have been put aside, at least temporarily, and the Communists are now making trade approaches to many nations of the free world.

The Soviet maneuver, which is still developing, includes offers of bilateral trade arrangements which may involve provision of arms and capital goods as well as technical assistance. Had we any reason to believe that the Soviet leaders had abandoned their sinister objectives, and now shared our own high purpose of helping other nations to develop freedom and independence, we would welcome the new Soviet program, for it appears to have aspects of normal trade expansion and business competition. Its danger for us and for other free nations, however, lies in the traditional Soviet objectives and in the entanglements to which acceptance of their offers may lead.

Even while we welcome respite from the Soviet policy of threat and violence, we must take careful stock of what still remains of it. The vast Soviet military establishment has not been scrapped. On the contrary, the Soviets and their Communist allies are increasing the strength and effectiveness of their armed forces and are providing them with equipment of the most modern design. The threat implicit in this huge aggregation of military power still casts an ominous shadow over the world. There is nothing here to warrant a slackening of our efforts to strengthen the common defense of the free world.

In its new departures in foreign policy, we see that the Soviet Union continues in its familiar pattern of ceaseless probing for opportunities to exploit political and economic weaknesses. We cannot view otherwise the arms traffic in areas where tensions are high and the peace is in danger. We cannot view otherwise the extension of credits hand in hand with exploitation of ancient animosities and new hatreds in a world already overburdened with them.

FUNDAMENTAL OBJECTIVE REMAINS

We must therefore assume that Soviet expansionism has merely taken on a somewhat different guise and that its fundamental objective is still to disrupt and in the end to dominate the free nations. With Soviet leaders openly proclaiming their world aim, it would be folly for us and our friends to relax our collective efforts toward stability and security.

Needless to say, we do not intend to permit specific Soviet moves to control our activities. Our Mutual Security Program, conceived in the common interests of the free nations, must go ahead affirmatively along tested lines to meet the common need. Where changes now give promise of making the program more responsive to the need and more effective, I am recommending changes.

The authorizations and appropriations I am recommending for fiscal year 1957 are designed to carry forward the program toward the goal we seek.

I recommend that the Congress authorize appropriations of $4,672,475,000 in accordance with the schedule attached. In a separate letter to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, I am requesting the appropriation of $4,859,975,000 for the same fiscal year to cover these recommended authorizations together with authorizations granted but not fully used in prior years. Certain aspects of this program require special attention.

Continuity and Flexibility

We should be able to assure the nations of the free world that we will continue to participate in particular non-military projects and enterprises which will take a number of years to complete. Such assurance from us will help these nations to mobilize their own funds for projects which will contribute to an important degree to their economic strength, to enlist public and private loans and investment and to plan ahead intelligently. It will be difficult for these nations to organize such projects unless Mutual Security Program support can be relied on for more than a single year.

I request authority of the Congress to make commitments up to 10 years in length to assist less developed countries in long term projects important to their development. Funds to fulfill such commitments would come from appropriations for non-military mutual security, and would not exceed an aggregate of $100 million in any year.

The Mutual Security Program, in a world in which events move with great rapidity, requires that flexible authority exist for the use of funds made available by the Congress. Section 401 of the Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, provides such flexibility with respect to the funds appropriated, or transferred, for use pursuant to that section. It provides a valuable means of meeting numerous unforeseeable requirements for assistance without the necessity for postponing or reducing other urgently needed programs.

A year ago the Congress appropriated a Special Presidential Fund of $100 million to be used under Section 401. For fiscal year 1957, I request the authorization of an appropriation of a further $100 million for this Special Fund. I also ask that the authority of the President to transfer other mutual security funds for use under the provisions of Section 401 be increased. With respect to at least $100 million in this Special Fund, I urge that the maximum degree of flexibility be authorized for its expenditure whenever the President determines that the use of sums in this manner is important to the security of the United States.

The Middle East and Africa are areas in which it is especially important to build new strength friendly to us. There is need for an adequate fund which can be used to assist in meeting special economic problems that may arise in those regions. The United States must be in a position to act promptly to help the governments in this area in their efforts to find solutions for economic and social problems. I therefore recommend creation of a special fund of $100 million to be available for use in any part of the Middle East or Africa for non-military Mutual Security programs which will advance the cause of free world security and economic strength.

In 1955, the President's Fund for Asian Economic Development was established. The sum of $100 million was then appropriated for it and authorization was given for the appropriation of a further $100 million. It is now desirable that the whole of the funds authorized be made available, and I shall request the appropriation of the remaining $100 million.

Advanced Weapons System

I recommend that about $530 million be made available to enable the Department of Defense to begin a program of aiding our allies in developing an even more effective defense based on an improved and better coordinated early warning and communications system and utilizing advanced weapons systems, including missiles, now being procured for our troops.

These advanced weapons, which are purely defensive in character, pose no threat to any nation which does not initiate aggression. They are designed to give warning of, and repel, such aggression -- and by their potential effectiveness to deter it.

The sum of $195 million has been included initially for NATO countries in the fiscal year 1957 program. The eventual distribution of the balance of the advanced weapons included in the 1957 program will be made on the basis of later judgment as to their most effective employment world-wide.

Our defense methods cannot be static in view of the constant growth of the military potential of the Communists. We and our allies must keep our defenses adequate to meet new methods of attack. Because of the rapidity of scientific advances, it is likely that the content of this advanced weapons program will be modified from time to time.

Europe

The program for the NATO countries of Europe (excluding Greece and Turkey) is primarily one of military assistance. This includes the advanced weapons I have mentioned. Although our allies have made great progress in building up their defense forces, military grant assistance is still necessary in most countries to assist them in maintaining equipment and replacing materiel lost by attrition. No economic assistance is proposed for any European country in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. A small amount of technical exchange assistance is proposed.

Continued economic support is required for Berlin, and military and economic support for Spain and Yugoslavia.

Middle East, Africa and Asia

In Asia and the Middle East, serious risk of aggression still exists. The program recommends aggregate military assistance of approximately $1,640 million for countries in these regions which must maintain substantial forces in the field to resist possible attacks. The military assistance which we propose will support the objectives of various mutual defense pacts, including SEATO, to which the United States is a party.

In these areas, the problems of building security are economic as well as military. Many of the nations in the area do not now have the resources required for a minimum rate of economic growth. They are striving to create the standards of living under which their economies can develop. This is a long-term process, in which their own efforts will play the major part, but in which our help can be crucial.

The program, accordingly, proposes economic help to those of our allies whose own resources cannot support their essential defense effort. This help is designed, as in former years, in part to assist projects of a non-military character which further defense activities, in part to help build internal resources and economic stability, and in part to contribute to the recipient's programs of economic development.

Provision is also made for economic assistance to nations in the Middle East, Africa and Asia which receive no military assistance, where such economic assistance will contribute to their economic strength and thus to their ability to retain their independence. This program is of the utmost importance to the security of the free world.

The program for fiscal year 1957 also provides for continuing our technical cooperation and assistance in less developed countries.

Latin America

We propose to strengthen further the friendly relationships which exist with our sister republics to the south. I recommend that we continue to encourage by technical assistance the programs, initiated by Latin American nations, to make better use of their own resources. We should also continue our participation in the technical assistance activities of the Organization of American States.

In special circumstances, when loans from the Export-Import Bank and the World Bank are not available to countries facing critical situations, the Mutual Security Program has assisted in meeting temporary economic problems, as in the case of two countries where it is proposed that such assistance be continued in the next fiscal year.

Military assistance in Latin America should be continued where needed in order to provide standardized equipment, maintenance of equipment already furnished and training in the use of such equipment.

United Nations and Other Special Programs

The United States should continue its support of the United Nations Expanded Technical Assistance Program, the United Nations Children's Fund, and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency which provides relief and rehabilitation of the Arab Refugees from Palestine.

Provision is also made for continuing our support of the program of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the work of the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration. Authorizations for continuing our own government's program for care and resettlement of escapees from Communism, and our program of paying the ocean freight costs of shipment both of relief supplies donated to our voluntary relief agencies and of surplus agricultural commodities, are also recommended.

Size of the Program

The request for military assistance authorization in fiscal year 1957 is substantially larger than the requests and appropriations for this purpose for the past two years. The lower level of appropriations for fiscal years 1955 and 1956 will, by the end of the current fiscal year, have brought about reduction in unexpended balances over the two-year period by approximately $2.5 to $3 billion. Now, however, in order to maintain the flow of military assistance in 1958 and 1959 an increase in the appropriation for fiscal year 1957 is required.

A substantial period of "lead" time is required to translate appropriated funds into actual payment for, and deliveries of, nearly all items of military equipment. This year, for the first time, more than $500 million are included in the military assistance program for advanced weapons. These weapons, because of their complexity, have even longer lead times.

On the economic side of the program, appropriations for the last two years have been approximately at the same rate as expenditures. The amounts requested this year for economic assistance are larger principally because of the new fund proposed for the Middle East and Africa and because of heavier emphasis on programs in Asia.

Other Aspects of the Program

The Mutual Security Program for fiscal year 1957 proposes continued procurement within the United States of surplus agricultural commodities for use abroad. In addition, large amounts of such commodities are moving abroad under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act for the mutual benefit of this and other countries. This latter effort has been considered in the development of the 1957 Mutual Security Program requirements, and every effort is being made to coordinate the two programs.

In the request for appropriations to carry out the fiscal year 1957 program, I am urging that Congress permit greater flexibility in the obligation of appropriations, in order that there may be more thorough planning of expenditures and more time allowed for necessary negotiation of contracts with suppliers and of arrangements with other nations.

Conclusion

The Mutual Security Program is vitally important to our people. Its cost is not disproportionate to our nation's resources and to our national income. That cost is a low price to pay for the security and vastly greater chances for world peace which the program provides.

The Mutual Security Program is an indispensable part of our national effort to meet affirmatively the challenge of all the forces which threaten the independence of the free world and to overcome the conditions which make peace insecure and progress difficult.

Total - Title IV	$ 259,275,000	$ 401,775,000

a/ Title and section references are, with one exception, to the Mutual Security Act of 1954 as it would be cumulatively amended by the proposed Mutual Security Act of 1956. The exception is the section reference for "Foreign Reactor Projects," which is to the proposed Mutual Security Act of 1956.

b/ 1957 authorization not being requested as Sec. 104 of the Mutual Security Act of 1954 authorized the appropriation of $321 million in installments prior to June 30, 1958. In FY 1955 $100 million was appropriated. An additional $122 million was appropriated in FY 1956 leaving an unappropriated authorization of $99 million. The 1957 appropriation request will leave an unappropriated authorization balance of $24 million.

c/ For FY 1957 Direct Forces Support has been consolidated with "Military Assistance".

d/ Continuing authorization provided under Sec. 405(a) of the Mutual Security Act of 1954.

STATISTICS OF 83rd, 84th CONGRESSES

The second session of the 84th Congress enacted more legislation than any other session of Congress during the Eisenhower Administration. The President, during 1956, signed 638 measures into public law. He vetoed 23 bills. By comparison, 339 public laws were enacted during 1952, the last year of the Truman Administration.

In most respects Congress followed the pattern of previous sessions in 1956. Following are selected Congressional statistics for recent years.

Days in Session

	1956	1955	1954	1953
Convened	Jan. 3	Jan. 5	Jan. 4	Jan. 3
Adjourned	July 27	Aug. 2	Aug. 20*	Aug. 3
Days worked: Senate	119	105	169	125
Days worked: House	118	112	123	117

*House adjourned sine die Aug. 20; Senate met again for McCarthy censure session.

Party Lineup

The Republicans had a narrow majority in both chambers of Congress during the first two years of the Eisenhower Administration, but lost control to the Democrats in the mid-term elections of 1954. Party lineups as of adjournment of the 83rd and 84th Congresses:

	84th	83rd
Senate Democrats	49	46
Senate Republicans	47	49
Senate Independents	0*	1
House Democrats	231	215
House Republicans	202	219
House Independents	0	1
House vacancies	2	0

*Sen. Wayne Morse (Ore.), elected in 1950 as a Republican, sat as an Independent in the 83rd Congress. He became a Democrat Feb. 17, 1955.

The vacant seats were held, before their deaths in 1956, by one Republican (Ill.) and one Democrat (Pa.).

WHAT THE 84th CONGRESS DID IN 1955-56

Listed below are major legislative enactments of the 84th Congress during first and second sessions. Unless noted, final action took place in 1956.

Agriculture

• FARM PROGRAM: Congress passed a revised farm bill (HR 10875) setting up an acreage reserve or "soil bank" program to compensate producers for reducing their 1956-59 crops of basic commodities below their allotments or base acreages. Total compensation for participation in the program was limited to $750 million for any one year's crops, with lesser limits for individual basic commodities. The bill also established a separate conservation reserve program, and limited total compensation to $450 million in any one calendar year. (See p. 375)

Earlier, the House sustained (202-211) President Eisenhower's veto of a Democratic-sponsored farm measure (HR 12) which provided for a return to rigid 90 percent price supports and use of a dual parity formula.

• FARM CREDIT REORGANIZATION: At the President's request, Congress passed a bill (HR 10285) to merge the production credit corporations with the federal intermediate credit banks, and to provide for the gradual retirement of government capital from both institutions. The measure carried out objectives of the Farm Credit Act of 1953, which called for ultimate private ownership and management of all institutions operating under the Farm Credit Administration. A similar measure (HR 5168) applying to cooperative banks was passed in 1955. (1955 Almanac, p. 182; this volume p. 597)

• COMMODITY CREDIT FUNDS: S 2604, passed in 1955, raised from $10 billion to $12 billion the limit on the borrowing power of the Commodity Credit Corporation for the farm price support program (1955 Almanac, p. 184). S 3820, passed in 1956, increased the limit to $14.5 billion. (See p. 599)

• SURPLUS DISPOSAL: S 3903 increased from $1.5 billion to $3 billion the limit on sales of farm surpluses for foreign currencies requiring appropriations by Congress to the Commodity Credit Corp. (See p. 489)

• SUGAR QUOTAS: HR 7030 revised and extended through Dec. 31, 1960, the Sugar Act of 1948. Domestic producers, formerly denied any share of allotments in excess of fixed quotas, were granted 55 percent of all U.S. consumption in excess of 8,350,000 tons annually. The foreign share of this excess was cut from 100 percent to 45 percent, of which almost 30 percent was allotted to Cuba. (See p. 493)

Appropriations

	Requested	Granted
Fiscal '56	$54,219,606,036	$52,199,015,915
Supplemental '55	981,176,193	925,805,300
TOTAL	$55,200,782,229	$53,124,821,215

SECOND SESSION -- 1956

Fiscal '57	$60,298,336,809	$59,655,057,628
Supplemental '56	942,641,728	918,109,962
TOTAL	$61,240,978,537	$60,573,167,590

BOTH SESSIONS -- 1955-56

Grand total, direct appropriations, 84th Congress	$116,441,760,766	$113,697,988,805

Above appropriation totals do not include permanent indefinite appropriations, which do not require legislation. These amounted to an estimated $7.6 billion for fiscal '56, and $7.8 billion for fiscal '57.

Education & Welfare

• SOCIAL SECURITY: HR 7225 established a new program of Old Age and Survivors' Insurance benefits for totally and permanently disabled workers beginning at age 50, and set up a separate trust fund from which disability payments would be made. The measure also reduced from 65 to 62 the age at which women are eligible for OASI benefits. (See p. 392)

• HOUSING: Controversy over public housing delayed enactment of omnibus housing acts in both sessions until the eve of adjournment. In 1955, Congress approved a compromise figure of 45,000 public housing units for one year. (1955 Almanac, p. 253) The 1956 law liberalized mortgage terms for elderly persons and for urban renewal projects. The final bill carried the President's request for 35,000 units of public housing for two years. (See page 511)

• HEALTH MEASURES: S 849 provided $90 million in grants to build medical research facilities in non-profit institutions over a three-year period; S 3958 extended for two years the Hill-Burton Act hospital construction program, and authorized grants for training nurses and public health specialists; and S 3076 authorized continuing Public Health Service surveys of sickness and disability. (See p. 440)

• POLIO VACCINE: In 1955, Congress provided $34.5 million to purchase and distribute free polio vaccine. (1955 Almanac, P. 259) In 1956, S 2990 authorized continuation of the program until June 30, 1957.

• WATER POLLUTION: S 890 extended the Water Pollution Control Act and authorized $500 million to be spent in matching funds to help communities build sewage disposal plants, with a limit of $50 million per year. (See p. 570)

• SPECIAL SCHOOL AID: HR 11695 extended until June 30, 1958, two 81st Congress laws providing federal aid to school districts overburdened by federal activities, and authorized a total of $378 million for the two-year period. (See p. 601)

Foreign Policy

• DEFENSE OF FORMOSA: At the President's request, Congress in 1955 adopted a resolution (H J Res 159) authorizing him to use U.S. armed forces in defense of Formosa and the nearby Pescadores Islands and "related positions and territories." (1955 Almanac, p. 277)

• RECIPROCAL TRADE: Also in 1955, Congress passed HR 1, extending through June 30, 1958, the President's authority to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements, to reduce tariff rates by 5 percent annually for three years, and to limit imports of products entering in such volume as to "threaten to impair the national security." (1955 Almanac, p. 289)

• INTERNATIONAL FINANCE CORPORATION: In 1955, Congress authorized U.S. participation in the proposed IFC, to have $100 million in capital of which the U.S. would put up $35 million. (1955 Almanac, p. 288)

• MUTUAL SECURITY: In 1955, Congress authorized $3.3 billion, but appropriated only $2.7 billion for foreign aid in fiscal 1956. (1955 Almanac, p. 301) In 1956, Congress authorized $3.9 billion, about $700 million less than requested. Final appropriation of $3.8 billion was a compromise between $3.4 billion approved by the House and $4.1 billion passed by the Senate. Earlier the Senate authorized a special Senate committee to conduct a $300,000 study of foreign aid, to be completed Jan. 31, 1957. (See p. 418, 427, 641)

Labor

• MINIMUM WAGE: S 2168, passed in 1955, raised the minimum wage from 75 cents to $1 an hour, or 10 cents more than the President asked. (1955 Almanac, p. 321)

Military & Veterans

• DRAFT LAW: HR 3005, passed in 1955, extended until July 1, 1959, the Selective Service Act of 1948, and until July 1, 1957, the authority to draft doctors. (1955 Almanac, p. 329)

• ARMED FORCES PAY: HR 4720, passed in 1955, provided pay increases ranging from 6 percent to 25 percent for career officers and enlisted men, and other benefits recommended by the President. (1955 Almanac, p. 331)

• MILITARY RESERVES: HR 7000, passed in 1955, provided for a Ready Reserve with maximum strength of 2.9 million men, established active and reserve service obligations of up to 11 years for men between 17 and 35, and authorized a new six-month training program for up to 250,000 men between 17 and 18½. (1955 Almanac, p. 334)

• MILITARY CONSTRUCTION: Congress passed HR 12270, authorizing $2.1 billion in military construction, after the President vetoed an earier version requiring Senate and House Armed Services Committees to approve certain acts of the Secretary of Defense. (See page 567)

Miscellaneous & Administrative

• CONGRESSIONAL, JUDICIAL PAY: HR 3828, passed in 1955, increased annual salaries of Congressmen from $15,000 to $22,500; Associate Supreme Court Justices from $25,000 to $35,000; and district court judges from $15,000 to $22,500. (1955 Almanac, p. 357)

• POSTAL PAY RAISE: S 2061, passed in 1955, provided pay increases amounting to $200 million a year to postal workers. Earlier, Senate failed to override President's veto of another pay raise bill granting a 7 percent raise to all postal workers. (1955 Almanac, p. 360)

• FEDERAL PAY RAISE: S 67, passed in 1955, raised the pay of all but top government classified employees by 7.5 percent, at a cost of $325 million a year. (1955 Almanac, p. 364)

• SECURITY COMMISSION: H J Res 157, passed in 1955, set up a bipartisan Commission on Government Security, to investigate federal employee security programs (1955 Almanac, p. 383) In 1956, Congress adopted S J Res 182, extending until June 30, 1957, the deadline for the Commission's final report. (See p. 579)

Taxes & Economic Policy

• CORPORATE, EXCISE TAXES: HR 4259, passed in 1955, extended existing corporate and certain excise tax rates, scheduled to drop on April 1, 1955, until April 1, 1956. Efforts to provide an individual income tax credit in the same bill were defeated. (1955 Almanac, p. 419) In 1956, Congress again extended corporate and excise rates until April 1, 1957, without change in individual tax rates. (See p. 510)

• HIGHWAYS: HR 10660 authorized a huge road-building program -- more than $30 billion in federal-state funds for 13 years, and provided for new taxes on gasoline and other highway user items to yield an estimated $14.8 billion over a 16-year period. (See p. 398)

• CUSTOMS SIMPLIFICATION: HR 6040 simplified procedures for determining the value of imports subject to ad valorem duty, by providing a single-value system based only on export value. (See p. 507)

• NATURAL GAS: President Eisenhower vetoed a bill (HR 6645) to exempt independent producers of natural gas from federal utility rate control, after Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) revealed he had been offered a $2,500 campaign contribution by oil interests. No attempt was made to override the President's veto. (See p. 469)

• UPPER COLORADO: S 500 provided for a $760 million Upper Colorado River irrigation and reclamation project, to include dams, reservoirs, power plants and transmission facilities. (See p. 408)

• FLOOD INSURANCE: S 3732 authorized a $7.5 billion federal flood insurance and loan program. (See page 451)

• ATOMIC MERCHANT SHIP: HR 6243 authorized construction of an atomic-powered merchant ship, at an estimated cost of $37 million. (See p. 555)

• DEFENSE PRODUCTION ACT: HR 9852 extended the Defense Production Act of 1950, to June 30, 1958, and authority to purchase strategic materials until June 30, 1965. The bill directed the promotion of geographical dispersion of industry. (See p. 519)

WHAT THE 84th CONGRESS DIDN'T DO

Listed below are major measures on which Congress failed to take final action during 1955-56 sessions.

• SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION AID: The House rejected a Democratic-backed measure (HR 7535) to provide $1.6 billion in grants over a four-year period. Earlier the House adopted a controversial amendment to bar aid to states with segregated schools, and rejected a move to substitute an Administration bill that provided that aid be distributed to the states according to need. The Senate took no action. (See p. 411)

• HEALTH REINSURANCE: Congress failed to act on the President's 1955 request for a "reasonable capital fund" to reinsure private health insurance plans.

• IMMIGRATION AND REFUGEES: Congress failed to approve the President's requests for extensive changes in the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act of 1950 and the Refugee Relief Act of 1953. (See p. 479)

• ORGANIZATION FOR TRADE COOPERATION: Membership in OTC, the organization proposed to administer the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, was approved by the House Ways and Means Committee, but no further action was taken in House or Senate. (See p. 485)

• BRICKER AMENDMENT: The Senate Judiciary Committee reported a revised version of the so-called Bricker Amendment to limit the Presidential treaty power. No further action occurred. (See p. 483)

• TAFT-HARTLEY AMENDMENTS: Congress took no action on amendments, proposed by the President and others, to the Taft-Hartley Labor-Management Relations Act.

• VETERANS' BENEFITS: The House passed a bill (HR 7886) to increase rates and liberalize payments of non-service connected pensions, but the measure died in the Senate. (See p. 527)

• CIVIL RIGHTS: A civil rights measure (HR 627) requested by President Eisenhower passed the House, 279-126, but died in the Senate Judiciary Committee. (See p. 458)

• HIGHER POSTAGE RATES: HR 11380, providing postage rate increases to net $430 million a year, was passed by the House, 217-166. The measure died in the Senate. (See p. 464)

• HAWAII-ALASKA STATEHOOD: In 1955, the House voted, 218-170, to recommit a bill (HR 2535) to grant statehood to Hawaii and Alaska. (1955 Almanac, p. 372) No further action was taken in 1955 or 1956.

• CAMPAIGN SPENDING: In 1955, the Senate Rules Committee reported S 636, a bill to repeal the Federal Corrupt Practices Act and to establish tight campaign spending limits. (1955 Almanac, p. 375) In 1956, Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) and Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) co-sponsored a revised bill, S 3308, but no further action was taken. (See p. 444)

• ELECTORAL REFORM: The Senate voted to recommit S J Res 31, a proposed constitutional amendment to reform the method of electing the President. No further action was taken. (See p. 448)

• HELLS CANYON DAM: The Senate defeated a bill (S 1333) to authorize construction, operation and maintenance of a single high federal dam at Hells Canyon on the Snake River between Idaho and Oregon. (1955 Almanac, p. 449; this volume, p. 499)

• NIAGARA POWER: The Senate passed a bill (S 1823) to give New York State authority to construct and operate a power project at Niagara Falls, designed to generate 10 billion kilowatt hours of electricity a year and cost an estimated $440 million. The proposal died in the House Rules Committee. (See p. 500)

• AREA REDEVELOPMENT: Bills (S 2663 and HR 8555) providing federal aid to so-called distressed areas suffering chronic unemployment were reported in both chambers. The Senate passed S 2663, but no further action was taken. (See p. 517)

• ATOMIC REACTORS: A Democratic-sponsored measure (S 4146) directing the Atomic Energy Commission to spend $400 million to build a variety of large-scale atomic power demonstration reactors passed the Senate, 49-40. However, the proposal was defeated in the House, 203-191. (See p. 542)

• REORGANIZATION PLANS: President Eisenhower submitted no reorganization plans to Congress in 1955 and only two in 1956 -- proposing to set up additional assistant secretaries for research in the military departments, and to separate the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Congress refused to approve either of the two plans. (See p. 584)

• SEDITION LAWS: Following a Supreme Court decision invalidating Pennsylvania's sedition law, on grounds that the federal government had pre-emptive rights in this field, the Senate Judiciary Committee reported a bill (S 3617) to restore the validity of state sedition laws, but no further action was taken. (See p. 586)

• SECURITY RISKS: Following another Supreme Court decision denying the government's power to fire, under the terms of the employee security program, an employee in a non-sensitive job, Senate and House committees considered bills to affirm the government's authority to fire any employee on security grounds. No further action was taken. (See p. 579)

• POLL TAX: A Senate Committee held hearings on a proposed constitutional amendment (S J Res 29) to ban the poll tax, but no action was taken in either 1955 or 1956.

20 KEY VOTES TESTED 1956 LEADING ISSUES

In the 1956 election campaign the voting record of the 84th Congress played an important role in selection of the new Congress. To place the 1956 session's activities in perspective, Congressional Quarterly chose 20 roll calls -- the year's Key Votes -- that were most significant.

Senate Key Votes

Here, in the order in which they occurred, are the 10 Senate roll calls selected by Congressional Quarterly as the Key Votes of 1956. The numbers correspond to those in the accompanying voting chart. In all instances, "yea" votes are cited first.

1. NATURAL GAS (HR 6645) -- The Senate Feb. 6 passed, 53-38, a bill to amend the Natural Gas Act to exempt producers and gatherers of natural gas from federal regulation. The purpose of the bill was to nullify a 1954 Supreme Court decision which in effect ruled that independent producers who sold natural gas to pipeline companies were subject to federal regulation under the Natural Gas Act of 1938. Final consideration of the bill almost was overshadowed by a Feb. 3 announcement of Francis Case (R S.D.) that he had rejected a $2,500 campaign contribution from a lawyer interested in passage of the bill. The President vetoed the bill for what he said were "arrogant" activities surrounding its passage. Mr. Eisenhower said he supported the "objectives" of the bill. Party division: Democrats, 22-24; Republicans, 31-14.

2. FARM PRICE SUPPORTS (S 3183) -- In 1955, the House passed a bill to restore "fixed" price supports at 90 percent of parity; the Senate did not act. Early in 1956 the Senate considered an omnibus farm bill which provided for a return to rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity, a $1.1 billion soil bank and a two-price system for rice. President Eisenhower Jan. 16 said "we should resist...efforts to have the government restore high rigid price supports." Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) offered an amendment to delete provisions calling for 90 percent of parity price supports, thus retaining flexible supports. The Anderson amendment was agreed to March 8 by a vote of 54-41. Party division: Democrats, 13-35; Republicans, 41-6. The provision later was returned to the bill, subsequently vetoed by President Eisenhower.

3. PUBLIC HOUSING (S 3855) -- A Senate bill to amend and extend housing laws, eliminate and prevent slums and conserve and develop urban communities also called for construction of 135,000 public housing units a year for four years. John W. Bricker (R Ohio) introduced an Administration-backed amendment to limit public housing to 35,000 units for each of the next two years. The Senate May 24 voted 38-41 to reject the amendment. Party division: Democrats, 7-34; Republicans, 31-7.

4. HIGHWAY WAGE RATES (HR 10660) -- The Senate May 29 agreed to an amendment offered by Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) to the Highway Act to give the Secretary of Labor the right to fix minimum wages on interstate highway system construction. The vote was 42-37. The Senate first agreed to an amendment to permit state agencies to determine wages, but the Chavez amendment finally was carried in the bill. Party division: Democrats 27-12; Republicans, 15-25.

5. AIR FORCE FUNDS (HR 10986) -- The bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal 1957 for the Department of Defense was debated five days. The Senate disagreed with President Eisenhower's judgment of airpower needs by adopting a series of Democratic-backed Appropriations Committee amendments to boost Air Force funds to $16.6 billion -- $912,625,000 more than the President requested. The largest item in the stepped-up Air Force budget was an increase of $800 million to raise production of heavy bombers. The Senate June 26 accepted the Committee amendment 48-40. Party division: Democrats, 43-3; Republicans, 5-37. HR 10986 passed June 26 by unanimous vote.

6. ATOMIC REACTORS (S 4146) -- A bill to establish a federal program to speed up the civilian atomic power demonstration program was passed by the Senate July 12 by a 49-40 roll-call vote. The bill, opposed by the Administration, authorized the Atomic Energy Commission to build demonstration reactors to show the practical value of facilities for the generation of electric energy in industrial or commercial quantities. Party division: Democrats, 46-0; Republicans, 3-40. A companion bill (HR 12061) was killed in the House July 24 when the House voted 203-191 to recommit the bill to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee.

7. SOCIAL SECURITY (HR 7225) -- The Senate July 17 rejected Finance Committee action on the social security bill by adding to the bill provisions deleted by the Committee. Walter F. George (D Ga.) offered an Administration-opposed amendment to pay permanently and totally disabled workers social security benefits at age 50, instead of 65; to set up a separate trust fund for disability payment and to increase social security taxes by one-half percent. The amendment passed by a roll-call vote of 47-45. Party division: Democrats, 41-7; Republicans, 6-38.

8. HELLS CANYON DAM (S 1333) -- A major victory was scored for the Eisenhower Administration when the Senate July 19 rejected by a 41-51 roll-call vote a bill to authorize construction of a single high federal dam at Hells Canyon. The Administration supported action by the Federal Power Commission, authorizing the Idaho Power Co. to construct three private dams in the area. Democrats criticized "pressures" from the White House to defeat the bill. Party division: Democrats, 39-8; Republicans, 2-43.

9. AID TO YUGOSLAVIA (HR 12130) -- Attempts to bar future military aid to Yugoslavia were successful during consideration of the Mutual Security Appropriation bill. The Senate July 24 voted 50-42 for a revised amendment submitted by Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) to bar the use of funds for military equipment for Yugoslavia, except to maintain and replace spare parts of equipment already furnished. This was in opposition to a request from President Eisenhower that use of the funds be at his discretion. The amendment did not affect economic aid to Yugoslavia. Party division: Democrats, 24-23; Republicans, 26-19.

10. FOREIGN AID FUNDS (HR 12130) -- The Senate July 24 beat down a series of attempts to reduce total foreign aid funds and passed by a roll-call vote of 60-30 the Mutual Security Appropriation for fiscal 1957. The final bill carried new funds of $4,110,920,000, which was about $800 million less than President Eisenhower originally requested. Party division: Democrats, 30-15; Republicans, 30-15.

House Key Votes

Here, in the order in which they occurred, are the 10 House roll calls selected by Congressional Quarterly as the Key Votes of 1956. The numbers correspond to those in the accompanying voting charts. In all instances, "yea" votes are cited first.

1. COLORADO RIVER PROJECT (HR 3383) -- President Eisenhower long had urged Congress to approve the $760 million Colorado River irrigation and reclamation project. The House March 1 voted 256-136 to authorize its construction. After passage, the text of HR 3383 was substituted for S 500, a similar bill passed by the Senate in 1955. The proposed Echo Park Dam, which would have flooded Dinosaur National Park, was eliminated by the House measure. Party division: Democrats, 136-63; Republicans, 120-73.

2. PRICE SUPPORTS (HR 12) -- In a conference report on HR 12, the omnibus farm bill, provisions were made for a return to rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity (opposed by President Eisenhower), dual parity, a soil bank, mandatory supports for feed grains and domestic parity plans for wheat and rice. House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R Mass.) moved to recommit the conference report with instructions to substitute maximum 82.5 percent supports and to delete dual parity provisions, mandatory feed supports and domestic parity plans. The House April 11 voted 181-238 against recommitting the conference report. Party division: Democrats, 14-211; Republicans, 167-27. The conference report then was adopted. Mr. Eisenhower vetoed the bill.

3. HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION (HR 10660) -- Agreement was reached in 1956 on federal highway legislation after President Eisenhower withdrew his proposal to finance construction through bonds. The House April 27 voted, 388-19, to provide for a $30.9 billion 13-year highway construction program. The bill also raised taxes on such highway user items as gasoline and tires over a 16-year period to finance the project. Party division: Democrats, 200-15; Republicans, 188-4.

4. VETERANS PENSIONS (HR 7886) -- The House Veterans Affairs Committee June 8 reported HR 7886, with amendments that made it a catch-all bill of all veterans legislation under Committee consideration. All provisions of the bill were deleted on the floor except increases in pension rates for non-service connected pensions and presumed total disability for World War I veterans at age 65. The American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars strongly supported this legislation. William H. Ayres (R Ohio) offered a motion to recommit the bill. The recommital was defeated June 27 by a 110-305 roll-call vote after it initially was agreed to on a 159-107 standing vote. Party division: Democrats, 39-182; Republicans, 71-123.

5. POWELL AMENDMENT TO SCHOOL AID BILL (HR 7535) -- Adam C. Powell Jr. (D N.Y.) offered an amendment to the school aid bill to bar federal funds to states not complying with the decision of the Supreme Court regarding racially segregated schools. The House July 5 agreed to the Powell Amendment, 225-192. Party division: Democrats, 77-146; Republicans, 148-46. Later that day the House rejected the amended school aid bill.

6. SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION AID (HR 7535) -- The federal aid to education bill would have authorized $1.6 billion over four years for grants to states for school construction on a dollar-matching basis. Under the bill as amended no federal control over school personnel or curriculums would be exercised and no funds would be made available to states that did not comply with the Supreme Court decision on school segregation. The House July 5 failed, 194-224, to pass the bill. Party division: Democrats, 119-105; Republicans, 75-119.

7. POSTAL RATES (HR 11380) -- President Eisenhower in his State of the Union Message Jan. 5 urged action to improve the Post Office's financial position by raising postal rates. The House July 6 voted 217-166 to raise postage rates and decrease the Department's deficit by about $430 million a year. Under the proposed increase, first class mail would bring in about $259 million extra; air mail about $16 million; second and third class mail about $122 million. The measure survived several recommittal motions and crippling amendments. Party division: Democrats, 39-162; Republicans, 178-4.

8. FOREIGN AID FUNDS (HR 12130) -- In spite of a plea from President Eisenhower that cuts in foreign aid "would definitely injure our efforts to help lead the world to peace" the House July 11 passed, 284-120, a foreign aid appropriations bill providing $1.4 billion less than the Administration requested. The amount appropriated was $3,425,120,000, about $500 million less than Congress authorized July 9. Minority Leader Martin July 9 said it was leadership strategy not to attempt to raise the amount in the House but to fight for the increase in the Senate. Party division: Democrats, 160-50; Republicans, 124-70. The House July 26 adopted, by voice vote, a conference report appropriating $3,-766,570,000 for the foreign aid program

9. CIVIL RIGHTS (HR 627) -- Demands for civil rights legislation in 1956 were particularly strong. The House Judiciary Committee revised HR 627 to include provisions of a civil rights program sent to Congress April 9 by Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. A "Civil Rights Manifesto" was signed by 83 southern Representatives urging the defeat of HR 627. The House July 23 passed the bill, 279-126. The bill provided for a six-member bipartisan Commission on Civil Rights in the executive branch of the government, an additional Assistant Attorney General in charge of a Civil Rights Division in the Department of Justice and strengthened procedures for legal action in federal courts against rights violations. Party division: Democrats, 111-102; Republicans, 168-24.

10. ATOMIC REACTORS (HR 12061) -- The bill to speed up the civilian atomic power demonstrations program with federal funds was killed by the House after it agreed to a number of limiting amendments. The House July 24 voted 203-191 to recommit the bill to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee. Party division: Democrats, 27-174; Republicans, 176-17.

Senate Key Votes on Natural Gas, Farm Price Supports, Public Housing, Highway Wage Rates, Air Force Funds

1. Natural Gas (HR 6645). Passage of bill to amend Natural Gas Act to exempt independent producers of natural gas from federal utility-rate control. Passed 53-38, Feb. 6.

2. Farm Price Supports (S 3183). Agricultural Act of 1956. Anderson (D N.M.) amendment to delete provision calling for rigid 90 percent of parity price supports. Agreed to 54-41, March 8.

3. Public Housing (S 3855). Housing Act Amendments of 1956. Bricker (R Ohio) amendment to provide 35,000 units of public housing for each of next two years instead of 135,000 a year for next four years. Rejected 38-41, May 24.

4. Highway Wage Rates (HR 10660). Highway Construction Act. Chavez (D N.M.) amendment to provide that locally prevailing wage rate, as determined by Secretary of Labor, be paid in interstate highway system construction. Adopted 42-37, May 29.

5. Air Force Funds (HR 10986). Defense Appropriations. Committee amendment increasing by $800 million funds for aircraft and related procurement. Adopted 48-40, June 26.

House Votes on Colorado River, Price Supports, Highways, Vets' Pensions, Powell Amendment

1. Colorado River Project (HR 3383). Passage of a bill to authorize construction of the Colorado River storage project. Passed 256-136, March 1.

2. Price Supports (HR 12). Agricultural Act of 1956. Martin (R Mass.) motion to recommit the conference report with instructions to substitute 82.5 percent maximum supports and to delete dual parity provisions, mandatory supports for feed grains and domestic parity plans for wheat and rice. Rejected 181-238. April 11.

3. Highway Construction (HR 10660). Passage of a bill to amend and supplement Federal-Aid Road Act by authorizing $30.9 billion 13-year highway construction program; amend Internal Revenue Code to provide additional revenue for highways. Passed 388-19, April 27.

4. Veterans Pensions (HR 7886). To increase the rates and liberalize the basis for payment of non-service-connected World War I compensation for veterans. Ayres (R Ohio) motion to recommit. Rejected 110-305, June 27.

5. Powell Amendment to School Aid Bill (HR 7535). Powell (D N.Y.) amendment providing that no federal funds shall be allotted or transferred to any state that fails to comply with the decisions of the Supreme Court. Adopted 225-192, July 5.

EISENHOWER BOXSCORE -- EISENHOWER SUPPORT

Although Eisenhower Support and Eisenhower Boxscore are related studies, they are completely separate and the percentage scores and figures cannot be correlated in any way. These are the basic differences between the two CQ studies:

EISENHOWER BOXSCORE is concerned solely with the outcome -- either approval or rejection -- of Congressional action on each Presidential legislative request for the current year. The outcome of each request may have been determined by a series of voice votes, a series of roll calls, or a combination of both. The manner of voting, or the number of votes taken on each item, is irrelevant, as the boxscore aims only at showing the net result of these actions -- approval or rejection.

EISENHOWER SUPPORT is concerned solely with roll-call votes during the current year on issues on which the President has publicly taken a position at some time during his term of office. Because it is concerned only with roll calls, Ike support does not cover in any way the dozens of requests in the boxscore which were approved or rejected by voice vote, or in some other unrecorded way.

Conversely, the boxscore does not include all issues on which Ike Support votes were taken. Although the requests listed in the boxscore provide the basic data for determining the President's position on roll-call votes, in some cases his position has been established -- either in statements made in previous years or in press conference remarks -- even though he has not made a specific legislative request to Congress in the current year. For example, one of the 1956 Ike-support votes was House vote number 24 -- deletion of the "veto power" clause from the defense appropriations bill. This was considered an Eisenhower issue because the President had sharply criticized an identical provision when he signed the 1955 defense appropriations bill. It was not listed as a legislative request in the 1956 boxscore because the President had not mentioned it in any of his 1956 messages to Congress.

Presidential nominations are not included in the boxscore list of legislative requests (there are thousands each year). However, roll-call votes on his nominations (of which there are only a few) are included in the selection of Eisenhower-support issues.

CQ Fact Sheet — On Eisenhower's Boxscore

PRESIDENT GETS 103 OF 225 REQUESTS

As in the first three years of President Eisenhower's Administration, Congressional Quarterly analyzed every Presidential message and public statement issued during the 1956 session of the 84th Congress. All told, the President made 225 legislative requests. Congress granted 103 of them, for a second-session batting average of .457. CQ's Boxscore pinpoints the fate of the President's program.

As Congress adjourned and headed for the respective national conventions, rival Democratic and Republican claims underscored the political importance attached by both parties to the handling of the Republican President's program by the Democratic-led 84th Congress. CQ's analysis of the Eisenhower legislative program at the end of the 1956 session showed:

- 103 Presidential requests approved by Congress.
- 38 finally rejected.
- 25 passed by either House or Senate or both.
- 36 received action by House or Senate committees.
- 23 received no action.

Congress speeded work on pending legislation in its final weeks. The President's Boxscore reflected this increased activity. On March 28, Congress had approved only 7.5 percent of the President's program, on June 20 only 15.6 percent had been approved. All requests left pending at adjournment July 27 automatically died with the 84th Congress, barring the call of a special session before January, 1957.

Four Year Record

Prior to 1954, CQ grouped Presidential requests into relatively broad categories, so Boxscores for the three most recent years are only roughly comparable with those for earlier years. CQ's tabulations for the four years of the Eisenhower Administration show:

	Proposals Submitted	Approved By Congress	% Score
1955	207	96	46.3
1953	44	32	72.7

These figures show that Mr. Eisenhower's program fared better in the hands of the Republican-led 83rd Congress, in 1953 and 1954, than in the hands of the Democratic-controlled 84th Congress. But Mr. Eisenhower's 57.3 percent average for four years was considerably higher than President Truman's six-year batting average of 43 percent.

According to CQ's records, President Truman submitted a total of 464 legislative proposals to Congress during the six years from 1947 through 1952. Of these, Congress approved 199 or 42.9 percent. Best year for Mr. Truman was 1947, when the Republican-led 80th Congress granted 47.7 percent of his requests. Thereafter his score dropped each year, to a low of 34.9 percent in 1952. (For scores by years, 1955 Almanac, p. 58)

Victories and Defeats

Details of the President's legislative program and what happened to it in Congress appear on the following pages. The Boxscore shows, in chart form, how far each of the President's 225 requests in 1956 advanced on Capitol Hill. Following the Boxscore is a more detailed list of Presidential requests, keyed to show in which message or statement the request first appeared. The Ground Rules describe the standards used by CQ in drawing up the Boxscore.

Following is a breakdown of the President's requests by category, together with the number approved.

LEGISLATIVE REQUESTS

Following is a list of President Eisenhower's 1956 legislative requests to Congress. A symbol in parentheses following each request indicates the message in which it was made. A key to the symbols is given in the box on this page. Treaty requests are followed by the date treaty was sent to the Senate.

Agriculture

SOIL BANK

1. Authorize an acreage reserve program under which growers of wheat, cotton, corn and rice would voluntarily reduce planted acreage below allotments in return for certificates convertible into cash or specified quantities of the commodities from Commodity Credit Corp. stocks. (B)
2. Authorize a conservation reserve program providing annual federal payments to any farmer, regardless of crop or location, who voluntarily contracts to withdraw some cropland from current production and put it into soil-conserving uses for a specified period. (Federal payments would cover part of the initial cost of establishing the new use of the land.) (B)
3. Authorize up to 50 percent of the total soil bank payment to be paid a farmer when the contract is signed. (M)
4. Provide that each participating farmer contract to refrain from cropping or grazing any land put into the acreage or conservation reserve. (B)

COMMODITY PROGRAMS

1. Take no action to restore high rigid price supports for farm commodities. (D)
2. Place a dollar limit on the size of price support loans to any one individual or farming unit. (B)
3. Expand the non-commercial wheat area beyond the 12 states designated in existing law. (B)
4. Exempt from marketing quotas producers who use all the wheat they raise for feed, food or seed on their own farms. (B)
5. Extend for one year legislation exempting durum wheat from acreage and marketing controls. (B)
6. Authorize the annual sale for feeding purposes, at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, of limited quantities of Commodity Credit Corp. wheat of less desirable milling quality. (B)
7. Amend the price support law to require that parity prices for cotton be computed on the basis of the average grade and quality of the crop. (B)

13. Specify liability for persons in atomic energy program; provide federal indemnity. (Y)

Ground Rules for CQ's Eisenhower Boxscore

Only specific requests for legislative action submitted to Congress by the President were tabulated for the Boxscore. Excluded from the list of legislative requests were proposals advocated by officials of the executive branch but not specifically by the President; measures that the President endorsed but did not request; suggestions that Congress consider or study particular topics, if no legislative action was requested; nominations.

Almost all appropriation requests were excluded because they are a yearly occurrence and provide the funds necessary to carry out the regular functions of the government. But CQ included several appropriation requests the President designated as key points of certain programs, and which were submitted in special messages (rather than in the Budget.)

Because requests for approval of treaties carry over from one Congress to the next, CQ listed all unratified treaties sent to the Senate by Mr. Eisenhower from 1953 on.

CQ tabulated action taken in 1955 on bills relating to the President's 1956 program when such bills still were pending before Congress in 1956.

The number "225" is a fair, but necessarily somewhat arbitrary, count of Presidential proposals. Requests can be totaled in many ways. Though not all the President's proposals were equally important, CQ made no attempt to weigh them. But a rough, automatic weighing results from the fact that major requests usually have several points.

Congress does not always vote "yes" or "no" on a Presidential proposal. CQ weighed compromises to determine if the result was closer to approval or to rejection of the President's request.

HOW CQ MEASURES CONGRESS' PERFORMANCE

The legislative record of the individual Senator or Representative is composed of actions -- or inactions -- many of which are not a matter of public record. As a member of one or more standing committees and their several subcommittees, where the shape of legislation generally is determined, the legislator participates in the making of important decisions, often behind closed doors. As bills move to the floor, he may be busy rounding up supporters -- again out of public view -- for an amendment that will be offered. On the floor he may or may not participate in the recorded debate. The only official record by which the actions of any legislator may be compared with those of his colleagues is the roll-call vote.

The great bulk of proposed legislation that reaches the floor is disposed of by voice vote -- without a record of each legislator's position. For example, Congress in 1956 passed 2,791 bills, yet recorded only 203 roll calls. Some of the legislation accepted or rejected by voice vote is important. Conversely, some of the matters disposed of by roll-call vote are relatively unimportant. Nevertheless, most roll calls involve substantial issues, and they provide, in the final analysis, the only indisputable record of each legislator's actions.

For these reasons, Congressional Quarterly publishes the results of all roll calls in specially designed voting charts. These show summaries of the proposals put to a vote and the positions recorded by the Members. CQ's roll-call charts present the individual Member's complete voting record, in so far as it is available.

This voting record, covering a wide span of legislative issues during any session, is inevitably open to partisan analysis and interpretation by the two major parties and other interested groups. In an attempt to provide students of Congress with a meaningful yet nonpartisan analysis of record voting, Congressional Quarterly conducts five separate and distinct studies, each under a specific system of ground rules, as follows:

• PRESIDENTIAL SUPPORT and OPPOSITION: This study is designed to show the extent to which each Member of Congress supports or opposes the specific legislative requests or stands of the President. Key step is the choice of roll calls for inclusion in the tabulation. Only those votes are included on which it is possible to say that the President, were he a Member of Congress, would have voted "yea" or "nay" on the basis of his personal messages and statements issued before the vote was taken. This method results in the inclusion of some non-controversial votes as well as the exclusion of certain important roll calls on which the President's own position was not publicly clear at the time the vote was taken. Any departure from the method used, however, would lead to a subjective weighting of issues, the results of which would be open to serious challenge.

• PARTY UNITY: This study is designed to show the extent to which each Member votes with the majority of his party when that majority is opposed by a majority of the other party. Thus, by definition, roll calls included in the tabulation of Party Unity scores are selected automatically according to the numerical outcome of the vote. While this is an inherently arbitrary division, since the majority in question may range from unanimity to one more than the minority, it is the only method available that is free of bias. Any approach based on a yardstick determined by the votes of the respective party leaders runs into the fact that these leaders occasionally are to be found voting with a distinct party minority. In the absence of any more reliable method of determining party positions when they are in opposition, the system used by CQ provides the best index to a Member's support of his party relative to that of his party colleagues.

• BIPARTISAN SUPPORT: This study, in contrast to Party Unity, is designed to show the extent to which each Member votes with his party's majority when both party majorities are in agreement. All roll calls thus are classified automatically either as Party Unity or Bipartisan Support votes, according to the mathematical outcome. As in the case of the former, the size of the majorities may vary widely on Bipartisan Support votes, although they tend to be large in the case of votes on relatively non-controversial issues.

• VOTING PARTICIPATION: This study is designed to show the extent to which each Member actually casts "yea" or "nay" votes -- the only kind that can determine the legislative outcome -- on roll calls for which he is eligible. Relatively few Members score 100 percent since absences due to illness, committee sessions and travel are common. Voting Participation is not, however, a record of absenteeism as such. It is a measure of the relative extent to which Members make effective use of their voting privilege.

• ON THE RECORD: Members who, for one reason or another, do not cast "yea" or "nay" votes on roll calls are generally recorded as being for or against the measure voted upon. These recorded positions are added to the "yea" and "nay" votes in tabulating On The Record, which is a measure of the extent to which each Member makes his position on all roll-call votes a matter of public record.

Each of the foregoing studies is subject to the qualifications set forth in the ground rules for each study. Full understanding of these qualifications is essential to any interpretation placed upon the group and individual scores derived from the methods employed.

84th CONGRESS BACKS PRESIDENT ON 72% OF TEST VOTES

The Democratic 84th Congress backed President Eisenhower on 139 or 72 percent of the 192 roll calls in both sessions that presented clear-cut tests of support for his views. By contrast, the Republican 83rd Congress endorsed the President's position on 164 or 83 percent of the 198 roll calls that tested his program in 1953 and 1954.

On an annual basis, the ratio of Presidential victories on test votes dropped from a high of 90 percent in 1953 -- when he won 74 of 83 test roll calls -- to a low of 70 percent in 1956, when the President's position prevailed on 69 of 99 test votes.

Of the 69 victories in 1956, 43 saw majorities of Republicans and Democrats (present and voting) supporting the President's views. On another 21, a majority of Republicans backed the President when a majority of Democrats opposed him.

Of the 30 defeats administered in 1956, 23 were inflicted when a majority of Democrats opposed the President while a majority of Republicans supported him. Bipartisan majorities handed the President defeats on four occasions -- votes on social security and foreign aid in the Senate (Roll Call 107 and 123) and veterans' pensions in the House (RC 39 and 40).

On only five of the 99 test votes of 1956 did a majority of Democrats (present and voting) support the President's position when a majority of Republicans opposed it. These concerned aid to Yugoslavia (RC 90), funds for a District of Columbia airport (RC 127) and a program for depressed areas (RC 129) in the Senate, and two amendments to the school aid bill (RC 45 and 46) in the House.

All of the 99 test votes are listed beginning on the 14th page of the Fact Sheet. They were selected by Congressional Quarterly from a total of 203 roll calls recorded in 1956. Basis for selection was a clear indication, as revealed in the President's own messages and public statements issued prior to the vote, that the President supported or opposed the proposal in question. (See Ground Rules, p. 108)

How President Fared

Eisenhower Victories

Col. 1 -- Number of roll calls on which a majority of Republicans supported and a majority of Democrats opposed the President's position.

Col. 2 -- Number of roll calls on which majorities of both parties supported the President's position.

Support and Opposition

Individual Eisenhower Support and Opposition scores for each Senator and Representative for 1956 and for both sessions of the 84th Congress appear in the charts beginning on the fifth page of the Fact Sheet. These scores, as well as the composite scores for Republicans and Democrats that appear below, are tabulated solely on the basis of "yea" and "nay" votes on Eisenhower-issue roll calls as selected by Congressional Quarterly. Pairs and other announced stands do not count in this tabulation.

Failure to cast a "yea" or "nay" vote, for whatever reason, thus may serve to lower a Member's Support score. It does not, however, increase his Opposition score, which likewise is tabulated solely on the basis of "yea" and "nay" votes. In most instances, a Member's Support and Opposition scores add up to less than 100 percent. The difference represents the percentage of Eisenhower-issue roll calls on which he did not cast a "yea" or "nay" vote. Failure to vote often results from illness or absence on official business. A list of Members absent at times during 1956 for reasons of illness, personal or family follows.

Absences

Failures to vote usually may be traced to valid causes, including illness and conflicting official duties. Among those who missed one or more 1956 roll calls because of their own illness or illness or death in their families:

GROUND RULES FOR CQ IKE SUPPORT--OPPOSITION

• EISENHOWER ISSUES -- CQ analyzes all Presidential messages, press conference statements and other public statements in order to determine what the President, as distinct from other Administration spokesmen, does or does not want in the way of legislative action. The basic data of this analysis appears in the Presidential Boxscore (this volume, page 93). Most of the 99 Eisenhower-issue roll calls selected by CQ in 1956 related to the President's own program, as set forth in the Boxscore study. A few, however, related to legislative moves which the record shows he clearly supported or opposed at the time the vote was taken.

• BORDERLINE CASES -- By the time an issue reaches a vote, it may differ from the original form on which the President expressed himself. In such cases, CQ analyzes the measure to determine whether, on balance, the features favored by the President outweigh those he opposes or vice versa. Only then is the vote classified. For example, Senate passage of the Area Redevelopment Act (RC 129) was classed as an Eisenhower victory while the earlier rejection of an amendment placing the proposed Area Redevelopment Administration in the Department of Commerce (RC 128) was considered a defeat. While the President was on record in favor of the rejected amendment, he was not on record concerning the specific provisions of the Democratic-sponsored bill, S 2663, as passed by the Senate. CQ decided, however, that S 2663, on balance, contained the major features of the legislation requested by the President in his Economic Report, and classed passage of the bill as an Eisenhower victory, although a majority of Republicans voted against it.

• IMPORTANT VOTES EXCLUDED -- Occasionally, votes involve issues that contain features favorable and unfavorable to the President in nearly equal measure. Since such votes cannot be classed as victories or defeats, they are excluded from the tabulation, even though they may be important. For example, CQ excluded the House vote (RC 48) on passage of the Democratic-sponsored school construction bill (HR 7535), which was defeated, but included roll calls on two amendments and a motion. The President was clearly on record against the Gwinn and Powell amendments (RC 45 and 46), and for the motion to substitute the McConnell bill (RC 47). But it was not clear at the time whether he would have voted for or against passage of HR 7535, as amended, and when asked this question after the vote White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said: "We're interested in school rooms."

The President's own position, as distinct from that of other Administration officials, was not a matter of public record before several other important roll calls. These included votes on the natural gas bill, several electoral reform proposals, the Niagara power project (although later the President endorsed the bill), a Democratic-sponsored bill for a $400 million atomic power reactor program and several key amendments to the social security bill. All of these votes therefore were excluded from the tabulation.

• MOTIONS -- Roll calls on motions to recommit, to reconsider or to table often are key tests that govern the legislative outcome. Several such votes were included among the 99 Eisenhower-issue roll calls of 1956. For example, the Senate first rejected (RC 32) a farm bill amendment, opposed by the President, to drop the requirement that states contribute to the cost of commodities furnished for disaster relief. Later, however, the Senate adopted a motion to reconsider the amendment (RC 40), then agreed to the amendment first rejected (RC 41).

• RULES -- In the House, debate on most significant bills is governed by rules that restrict time and may bar floor amendments. These rules must be adopted by the House before the bills in question may be considered. Members may vote for the rule, in order to permit debate, although they intend to vote against the bill. Generally, however, a vote against a rule is a vote against the bill, and vice versa, since rejection of the rule prevents consideration of the bill. CQ assumed that if the President favored a bill, he favored the rule, unless it was a closed rule. For example, a rule for consideration of the Fryingpan-Arkansas proclamation project, favored by the President, was defeated the day before adjournment (RC 68), effectively killing the bill. This roll call was classed as a defeat for the President.

• APPROPRIATIONS -- Generally, roll calls on appropriations are excluded from this tabulation, since it seldom is possible to pin down the President's position on the revisions Congress almost invariably makes in the sums allowed. Exceptions to this rule apply to foreign aid appropriations, since the program although recurring is not permanent, and to cuts or increases in other measures that clearly concern aspects of Presidential policy. For example, the Senate's vote (RC 86) to increase Air Force funds by $800 million was a clear challenge to the President's views on national defense, and was tabulated as a defeat, as was the previous vote rejecting a compromise increase of $350 million (RC 85).

• FAILURES TO VOTE -- In tabulating the Support and Opposition scores of Members on the selected Eisenhower-issue roll calls, CQ counts only "yea" and "nay" votes on the ground that only an actual vote affects the outcome. Most failures to vote are based on valid reasons such as absence because of illness or official business. A list of Members absent at one time or another during 1956 because of illness appears on the second page of the Fact Sheet.

• WEIGHTING -- All Eisenhower-issue roll calls have equal statistical weight in this analysis. For example, included among the 99 Eisenhower-issue votes of 1956 were nine on which no opposition votes were recorded. Five of these recorded the Senate's approval of certain treaties. A Member's votes for these measures, all favored by the President, count as heavily in his score as his votes on as many controversial issues decided by close margins. Any system of differential weighting, however, would make the analysis less objective and, by the same token, less useful.

Eisenhower Support-Opposition Scores

Senate–All Issues–1956 & 84th Congress

1. OVERALL SUPPORT Score, 1956. Percentage of 65 Eisenhower-issue roll calls -- both foreign and domestic -- in 1956 on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with President's position.

2. OVERALL OPPOSITION Score, 1956. Percentage of 65 Eisenhower-issue roll calls -- both foreign and domestic -- in 1956 on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in disagreement with President's position.

3. OVERALL SUPPORT Score, 84th Congress. Percentage of 117 Eisenhower-issue roll calls -- both foreign and domestic -- in 1955 and 1956 on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with President's position. (These 117 roll calls include the 65 in 1956.)

4. OVERALL OPPOSITION Score, 84th Congress. Percentage of 117 Eisenhower-issue roll calls -- both foreign and domestic -- in 1955 and 1956 on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in disagreement with President's position.

99 ROLL-CALL VOTES THAT TESTED SUPPORT FOR EISENHOWER

Listed below are the 99 roll-call votes of 1956 that clearly tested Congressional support for President Eisenhower's program as spelled out in his personal messages and statements. These 99 votes, selected from the total of 203 cast during the second session of the 84th Congress, formed the basis for Eisenhower Support scores tabulated by Congressional Quarterly. The test votes are grouped by chamber according to the outcome and their classification as domestic or foreign policy votes. Within each group, the roll calls are listed in their chronological order by CQ roll-call (RC) number. Page references are to the 1956 CQ Almanac vote charts, which present the votes of each Member. (For list of 1955 Eisenhower-issue roll calls, 1955 Almanac, p. 66.)

CQ Fact Sheet On Party Unity

PARTIES CLASH ON HALF OF 1956 ROLL CALLS

Reflecting the partisanship of an election year, Republicans and Democrats clashed on one-half of all roll calls in 1956, contrasted with one-third in 1955, according to Congressional Quarterly's annual analysis of Party Unity.

Out of a total of 203 roll-call votes in both chambers in 1956, 101 found a majority of Democrats, present and voting, opposed by a majority of Republicans. With their numerical edge in Senate and House, Democrats prevailed in 57 of the 101 party-line encounters. In these clashes, Democrats were unanimous on five occasions in the Senate, and Republicans twice in the House.

Party Unity Scoreboard

By definition, Party Unity roll calls are those on which a majority of one party votes in opposition to a majority of the other party. Selection of the roll calls thus is automatic, and is determined by the numerical outcome of the vote. Roll calls on which either party divides evenly are excluded from this tabulation. Results of Party Unity voting in 1956 and 1955:

1956	Total Roll Calls	Party Unity Roll Calls	Percent Of Total
Both chambers	203	101	50%
Senate	130	69	53
House	73	32	44
1955
Both chambers	163	57	35%
Senate	87	26	30
House	76	31	41

	SENATE		HOUSE

Dems Won, GOP Lost	39	12	18	21
GOP Voted Unanimously	--	2	2	1
Dems Voted Unanimously	5	4	--	1

Party Scores

Party Unity and Opposition to Party scores represent the percentage of Party Unity roll calls on which members vote "yea" or "nay" in agreement and in disagreement with their party's majority. Failures to vote are not counted, so the two scores rarely add to 100 percent. Composites of Republican and Democratic scores for 1956 and for the 84th Congress (1955 and 1956):

Definitions

- PARTY UNITY ROLL CALLS -- Roll-call votes that split the parties, the majority of voting Republicans opposing the majority of voting Democrats. Roll calls on which either party divides evenly are excluded.
- PARTY UNITY SCORES -- Percentage of Party Unity roll calls on which a Member votes "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the majority of his party. Failures to vote, even if a Member announces his stand, lower his score, count as a missed "time at bat."
- OPPOSITION TO PARTY SCORES -- Percentage of Party Unity roll calls on which a Member votes "yea" or "nay" in disagreement with the majority of his party. Failures to vote, even if a Member announces his stand, lower his score. A Member's Party Unity and Opposition To Party scores add to 100 percent only if he voted on all Party Unity roll calls.

Who Draws Party Line?

On some roll calls the parties take official stands after caucusing. Or the floor leaders may provide guidance. The Administration's position also may help line up its party in Congress.

Even if the party leaders take an official stand, the party majority may not support them. For example, if Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) announces that President Eisenhower favors a bill, the majority of Republicans nevertheless may vote "nay." For purposes of CQ's analysis, actual votes draw party lines. In the illustration just cited, the Republican line would be "nay;" any Republican voting "yea" would be counted as opposing his party.

On some roll calls, no official party position is stated and each Member is on his own. In these cases -- just as when an official party stand is known -- actual votes draw party lines for CQ's analysis.

Defections

Bolters cost both parties victories on Party Unity roll calls in 1956. If the bolters had followed the majority of their party, the party would have won some roll-call tests it lost.

CQ confined this analysis of defections to roll calls on which defectors constituted a small minority -- 25 percent or less of those voting.

Such defections cost the Democrats five victories in the Senate, six in the House. The toll of defections for Republicans: 14 losses in the Senate, three losses in the House. On each of these roll calls, if the small minority had gone along with the party majority, the majority position would have won.

Senate Democratic Losses

● CORN ACREAGE -- The Senate rejected, 44-46, an amendment to establish the minimum acreage allotment for corn at 50 million acres. Democrats voted for the amendment, 42-3. Defectors: Russell, Eastland, Robertson. (RC 13, p. 153)

The Senate then agreed, 47-44, to table a motion to reconsider the above amendment. Democrats voted against the motion to table, 3-42. Defectors: Russell, Eastland, Robertson. (RC 14, p. 153)

● WHEAT SUPPORTS -- The Senate agreed, 46-41, to table a motion to reconsider a vote to retain flexible farm price supports for millable wheat. Democrats voted against the motion to table, 6-35. Defectors: Holland, Eastland, Stennis, Bible, Anderson, Robertson. (RC 18, p. 154)

● INTERNATIONAL LABOR ORGANIZATION -- The Senate adopted, 43-40, a resolution to limit U.S. contributions to the International Labor Organization if Communists participated in its activities. Democrats voted against the resolution, 8-32. Defectors: McClellan, Frear, Russell, Ellender, Stennis, Johnston, Wofford, Robertson. (RC 51, p. 163)

● HELLS CANYON -- The Senate rejected, 41-51, a bill to authorize federal construction of the Hells Canyon dam. Democrats voted for the bill, 39-8. Defectors: Frear, Smathers, Russell, Long, Eastland, Ervin, Byrd, Robertson. (RC 113, p. 180)

Senate Republican Losses

● DUAL PARITY -- The Senate agreed, 49-42, to table a motion to reconsider a vote to retain dual parity in the farm bill. Republicans voted against the motion to table, 7-38. Defectors: Millikin, Carlson, Thye, Langer, Young, Case (S.D.), Mundt. (RC 29, p. 156)

● PROCESSOR CERTIFICATION -- The Senate adopted, 49-44, a farm bill amendment requiring processors to certify the price paid the producer was not less than the support price. Republicans voted against the amendment, 8-36. Defectors: Kuchel, Williams, Thye, Langer, Young, Mundt, Watkins, Wiley. (RC 37, p. 159)

The Senate then agreed, 52-42, to table a motion to reconsider the above amendment. Republicans voted against tabling, 6-39. Defectors: Kuchel, Williams, Thye, Langer, Young, Watkins. (RC 38, p. 159)

● DISASTER RELIEF COMMODITIES -- The Senate agreed, 47-45, to reconsider a vote against an amendment eliminating a farm bill provision requiring 15 percent state contribution to the cost of commodities furnished for disaster relief. Republicans voted against reconsideration, 2-42. Defectors: Langer, Young. (RC 40, p. 159)

The Senate then adopted, 47-45, an amendment to eliminate the above provision. Republicans voted against the amendment, 2-42. Defectors: Langer, Young. (RC 41, p. 160)

• CORN, COTTON, WHEAT SET-ASIDES -- The Senate adopted, 50-44, a farm bill amendment to make the authority for corn set-asides mandatory and to increase cotton and wheat set-asides. Republicans voted against the amendment, 6-39. Defectors: Thye, Langer, Young, Case (S.D.), Mundt, McCarthy. (RC 42, p. 160)

• NIAGARA POWER -- The Senate passed, 48-39, a bill to authorize New York State development of Niagara River power. Republicans voted against the bill, 8-33. Defectors: Kuchel, Smith (Maine), Case (N.J.), Langer, Young, Case (S.D.), Mundt, Aiken. (RC 60, p. 166)

• HOUSING INTEREST RATES -- The Senate rejected, 40-41, an amendment to raise the interest rate on loans for college housing. Republicans voted for the amendment, 38-1. Defector: Langer. (RC 70, p. 169)

• PUBLIC HOUSING -- The Senate rejected, 38-41, an amendment to cut the number of public housing units from 135,000 to 35,000 a year. Republicans voted for the amendment, 31-7. Defectors: Bush, Purtell, Payne, Smith (Maine), Case (N.J.), Ives, Langer. (RC 72, p. 169)

• AIR FORCE FUNDS -- The Senate rejected, 42-47, an amendment to reduce the proposed increase in Air Force funds. Republicans voted for the amendment, 39-3. Defectors: Welker, Malone, McCarthy. (See RC 85, p. 172)

The Senate then approved, 48-40, the full $800 million increase recommended by committee. Republicans voted against the committee amendment, 5-37. Defectors: Welker, Smith (Maine), Malone, Case (S.D.), McCarthy. (RC 86, p. 172)

• SOCIAL SECURITY -- The Senate adopted, 47-45, an amendment to pay social security benefits to disabled workers at age 50, instead of 65. Republicans voted against the amendment, 6-38. Defectors: Purtell, Payne, Malone, Langer, Young, Wiley. (RC 108, p. 179)

• DEPRESSED AREAS -- The Senate rejected, by a tie vote of 43-43, an amendment to the depressed areas bill to place administration with the Department of Commerce. Republicans voted for the amendment, 43-1. Defector: Langer. (RC 128, p. 183)

• LAKE MICHIGAN WATER DIVERSION -- The Senate passed, 43-33, a bill to authorize increased diversion of water from Lake Michigan to the Illinois Waterway. Republicans voted against the bill, 6-30. Defectors: Dirksen, Capehart, Hruska, Bridges, Case (S.D.), Mundt. (RC 130, p. 185)

House Democratic Losses

• SCHOOL MILK - BRUCELLOSIS ERADICATION -- The House rejected, 195-215, a conference report to extend the school milk and brucellosis eradication programs for 90 days. Democrats voted for the extension, 195-22. (RC 10, p. 192)

• COTTON SUPPORTS -- The House rejected, 186-208, a farm bill amendment to support upland cotton at 84 percent of parity. Democrats voted for the amendment, 183-24. (RC 21, p. 198)

• FISHING INDUSTRY SCHOOLS -- The House failed, 256-133, to pass by the required two-thirds majority, a motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill for fishing industry schools. Democrats voted for the motion, 170-33. (RC 44, p. 212)

• POSTAL RATES -- The House passed, 217-166, a bill to increase postal rates. Democrats voted against the bill, 39-162. (RC 49, p. 216)

• ATOMIC POWER -- The House agreed, 203-191, to recommit a bill for an accelerated civilian atomic power program. Democrats voted against the recommital motion, 27-174. (RC 65, p. 224)

CQ Fact Sheet On Bipartisan Support

CONGRESS' BIPARTISANSHIP DECLINES IN 1956

Majorities of Republicans and Democrats saw eye to eye on only one half of the 203 roll-call votes of 1956, compared with two-thirds of the 163 roll-call votes in 1955. Congressional Quarterly tabulated all record votes as either Party Unity roll calls, when the two party majorities were opposed, or Bipartisan roll calls, when the two majorities agreed. (For an analysis of Party Unity in 1956, see p. 121)

The Bipartisan roll calls of 1955 and 1956 compared:

	Senate	House	Both Chambers
1956
Total roll calls	130	73	203
Bipartisan roll calls	61	41	102
Percent bipartisan	47%	56%	50%
1955
Total roll calls	87	76	163
Bipartisan roll calls	61	45	106
Percent bipartisan	70%	59%	65%

Party, Regional Scores

Party and Regional scores relate the number of votes actually cast with the Bipartisan majority to the maximum possible number. Support and Opposition scores do not add to 100 percent because of failures to vote. For Members' absences, see p. 123.

Definitions

- BIPARTISAN ROLL CALLS -- Roll-call votes on which a majority of voting Democrats agrees with a majority of voting Republicans. Roll calls on which either party divides evenly are included.
- BIPARTISAN SUPPORT SCORES -- Percentage of bipartisan roll calls on which a Member votes "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. Failures to vote, even if a Member announces his stand, lower his score.
- BIPARTISAN OPPOSITION SCORES -- Percentage of bipartisan roll calls on which a Member votes "yea" or "nay" in opposition to the bipartisan majority. Failures to vote, even if Member announces his stand, lower his score. A Member's Bipartisan Support and Opposition scores add to 100 percent only if he voted on all bipartisan roll calls.

Individual Support, Opposition Scores

House Bipartisanship - 1956 & 84th Congress

1. BIPARTISAN SUPPORT, 1956. Percentage of 41 Bipartisan Support roll calls on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the majority of his party. CQ Fact Sheet

On Voting Participation

CONGRESSMEN VOTE ALMOST 90% OF THE TIME

As in the first session of the 84th Congress, Senators and Representatives in 1956 turned out in force for roll-call votes. On the average, Members voted on nearly nine of every 10 roll calls. Republicans had slightly higher Voting Participation scores than did Democrats, who led by a small margin in 1955. Even when they failed to cast "yea" or "nay" votes, most Members went On the Record by announcing their stands. On the Record scores were computed on the basis both of record votes and announced stands.

Scores

Composite scores relate the actual number of votes cast or stands recorded to the maximum possible number which each party might have cast or recorded on the 130 Senate and 73 House roll calls of 1956, and the 217 Senate and 149 House roll calls of the 84th Congress.

Definitions

• VOTING PARTICIPATION -- Percentage of roll-call votes on which Congressman votes "yea" or "nay." Failures to vote "yea" or "nay" lower scores -- even if the Congressman votes "present," enters a pair, announces his stand in the Congressional Record, or answers the CQ Poll. Only votes of "yea" or "nay" directly affect the outcome of a roll call. Voting Participation is the closest approach to an attendance record, but it is only an approximation. A Congressman may be present and nevertheless decline to vote "yea" or "nay" -- usually because he has entered a pair with an absent Member.

• ON THE RECORD -- Percentage of roll-call votes on which Congressman makes his position known by voting "yea" or "nay," entering a live pair, announcing his stand, or answering the CQ Poll. Scores are lowered by votes of "present" and by general pairs -- as well as by complete silence on the issue. Votes of "present" and general pairs are not expressions of opinion. On The Record does not measure the effectiveness of a Congressman in determining the outcome of roll calls, but it does show how frequently he tells his constituents and the general public where he stands on specific issues. Even if he must be absent, a Congressman can go On The Record.

Pairs are used to cancel out the effect of absences. A Congressman who expects to be absent for a roll call pairs off with another Congressman, both of them agreeing not to vote. A live pair concerns one or several specific issues. A Congressman who would vote "yea" pairs with a Congressman who would vote "nay." Thus, both announce their stands. A general pair is a more arbitrary matching of absent Congressmen, not involving announcement of their stands.

The CQ Poll gives absent Congressmen the opportunity to announce their stands on roll calls. On important roll calls, CQ sends out ballots asking Congressmen how they would have voted if they had been present.

Absences

Failures to vote usually may be traced to valid causes, including illness and conflicting official duties. Many missed one or more 1956 roll calls because of their own illness or illness or death in their families. (For names, see p. 123)

How a Bill Is Passed

Note: Parliamentary terms used below are defined in the Glossary, which follows.

Introduction of Bills

Any House Member (including territorial Delegates) may introduce any one of several types of bills and resolutions by handing it to the Clerk of the House, or placing it in a box called the hopper. A Senator first gains recognition of the presiding officer to announce the introduction of a bill. Then his bill is "read" twice, though in practice only the title usually is given.

As the next step in either the House or Senate, the bill is numbered, referred to the appropriate committee, labeled with the sponsor's name, and sent to the Government Printing Office so that copies can be made for subsequent study and action. One bill sometimes carries several Senators' names; this practice does not extend to the House where each bill carries the name of one sponsor only. However, other Members may file identical measures. Bills written in the executive branch and proposed as Administration measures usually are introduced by the chairmen of the Congressional committees that have jurisdiction over the subjects involved.

Designation of bills and resolutions:

Bills -- Prefixed with "HR" in the House, "S" in the Senate, followed by a number.

Joint Resolutions -- Designated H J Res or S J Res. These can become law just as bills do.

Concurrent Resolutions -- Designated H Con Res or S Con Res. These do not become law.

Resolutions -- Designated H Res or S Res. These do not become law and are adopted only by the chamber that originates them.

Committee Action

A bill is referred to the appropriate committee by the House parliamentarian on the Speaker's order, or by the Senate President. Sponsors may indicate their preferences for referral, although custom and chamber rule generally govern this. An exception is the referral of private bills, which are sent to whatever group is designated by their sponsors. Bills are technically considered "read for the first time" when referred to House committees.

When a bill reaches a committee it is placed upon that group's calendar. At that time it comes under the sharpest Congressional focus. Its chances for passage are quickly determined -- and the great majority of bills fall by the legislative roadside. Failure of a committee to act on a bill is equivalent to killing it; the measure can be withdrawn from the group's purview only by a discharge petition requiring signatures of 218 House members on House bills, or by passage of a special resolution in the Senate. Discharge attempts rarely succeed.

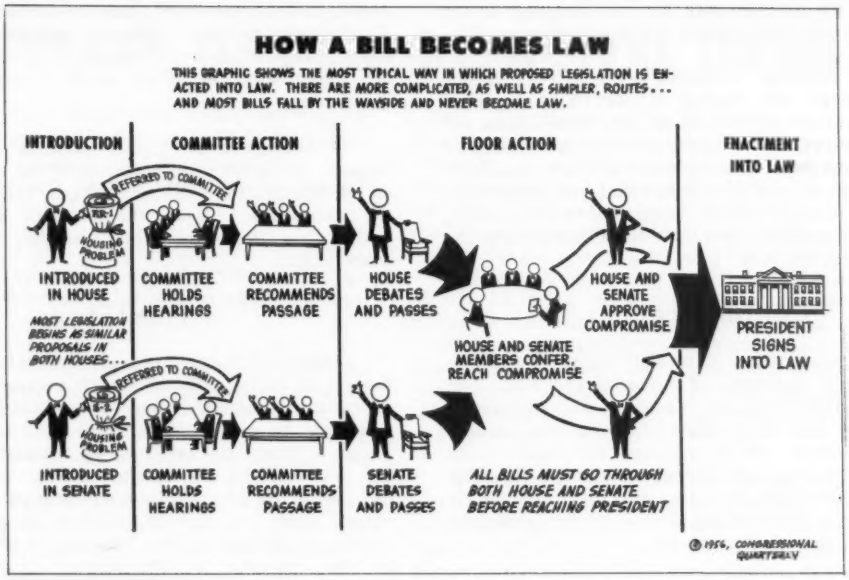
The first committee action taken on a bill usually is a request for comment on it by interested agencies of the government. The committee chairman may assign the bill to a subcommittee for study and hearings, or it may be considered by the full committee. Hearings may be public, closed (executive session), or both. A subcommittee, after considering a bill, reports to the full committee its recommendations for action and any proposed amendments.

The full committee then votes on its recommendation to the House or Senate. This is called reporting the bill. Occasionally a committee may report a bill unfavorably; most of the time a report calls for favorable action on the legislation (since the committee can effectively "kill" legislation by simply failing to take any action).

When a committee sends a bill to the chamber floor, it explains its reasons in a written statement, called a report, which accompanies the bill. Often committee members opposing a measure issue a dissenting minority report.

Frequently, the committee proposes amendments to the bill. If they are substantial and the legislation is complicated, the committee may order a "clean bill" introduced, which will embody the proposed amendments. The original bill then is put aside and the "clean bill," with a new number, is reported to the floor.

The chamber must approve, alter, or reject the committee amendments before the bill itself can be put to a vote.



Floor Action

After a bill is reported back to the house where it originated, it is placed on the calendar. There are five legislative calendars in the House, issued in one cumulating calendar titled Calendars of the United States House of Representatives and History of Legislation. There is only one legislative calendar in the Senate and one "executive calendar" for treaties and nominations. Noncontroversial bills often are passed on the "call of the calendar." In the House such bills may be placed on the Consent Calendar; if there is no objection voiced to a bill on that calendar when it is called, the measure is passed without debate. When the Senate calendar is called, each Senator is limited to five minutes' debate on each bill.

DEBATE

A bill is brought to debate by varying procedures. If a routine measure, it may await the call of the calendar. If it is urgent or important, it can be taken up in the Senate by unanimous consent, or by a majority vote. The Policy Committee of the majority party in the Senate schedules the bills that it wants taken up for debate.

In the House, precedence is granted if a special rule is obtained from the Rules Committee. Such rules often are debated and voted upon in the same fashion as regular bills. They are important because they specify how long the bill may be debated, and whether it may be amended from the floor. If floor amendment is banned, the bill is considered under a "closed rule" which permits only committee members to alter its language, subject to chamber acceptance. This is the usual practice on tax bills.

When a bill is debated under an "open rule," amendments may be offered from the floor. Committee amendments are always taken up first, but may be changed, as may all amendments up to the second degree, i.e., a changed amendment cannot be further altered. Substitute motions, however, are permissible.

Duration of debate in the House depends on whether the bill is before the Committee of the Whole or under discussion by the House proper. In the former, the amount of time agreed on for general debate is equally divided between proponents and opponents. At the end of this general discussion, the bill is read "for the second time," section by section, for amendment. Debate on each amendment is limited to five minutes. Persons debating bills considered in the House proper are allowed one hour apiece. Senate debate is usually unlimited. It can be halted only by unanimous consent, or by "cloture", which requires a two-thirds vote.

VOTES

Voting on bills may occur repeatedly before they are finally approved or rejected. The House votes both on the rule for the bill and various amendments to it. Voting on amendments often is a more illuminating test of a bill's support than is the final tally. Sometimes Congressmen approve final passage of bills after vigorously supporting amendments which would have scuttled the legislation if adopted.

The House and Senate vote both by untabulated voice votes and a recorded roll call of their names, to which they answer "yea" or "nay." The House also uses a standing vote, called a division, and a teller vote, when Members file up the center aisle past counters. The Senate also has a division, or standing, vote. It does not employ the teller vote. House totals on division and teller votes are announced. Division vote totals in the Senate are not announced. Only a roll-call vote reveals the yea or nay vote of a Member.

After amendments to a bill have been voted upon, a vote may be taken on a motion to recommit the bill to committee. If carried, this vote removes the bill from the chamber's calendar. If the motion is unsuccessful, the bill then is "read for the third time." An actual reading usually is dispensed with, although an opponent of a bill can delay this move by objecting and asking for a full reading of an engrossed (certified in final form) copy of the bill. After the "third reading," the vote on final passage is taken.

The final action vote may be followed by a motion to reconsider, and this motion itself may be followed by a move to lay the motion on the table. Usually, those voting for the bill's passage vote for the tabling motion, thus safeguarding the final passage action. With that, the bill has been formally passed by the chamber. While a motion to reconsider a Senate vote is pending on a bill, the measure cannot be sent to the House. Once a bill has been passed by either chamber, it becomes, officially, an "act," though it continues generally to be referred to as a bill.

ACTION IN SECOND HOUSE

After a bill is passed it is sent to the opposite chamber. This body may then take one of several steps. It may pass the bill as is -- accepting the other chamber's amendments. It may send the bill to committee for scrutiny or alteration, or reject the entire bill, advising the opposite house of its actions. Or it may simply ignore the bill submitted while it continues work on its own version of the legislation. Frequently, one chamber may approve a version of a bill that is greatly at variance with the version already passed by the other house, and then substitute its amendments for the language of the other, retaining only the latter's bill designation.

Often the opposite chamber makes only minor changes. If these are readily agreed to by the other house, the bill then is routed to the White House for signing. However, if the opposite chamber basically alters the bill submitted to it, the measure usually is "sent to conference." The chamber that has possession of the "papers" (engrossed bill, engrossed amendments, messages of transmittal) requests a conference and the other chamber agrees to it.

Conference

A conference undertakes to harmonize conflicting House and Senate versions of a legislative bill. The conference is staffed by interested senior Members, appointed by the presiding officers of the two houses, from the committees which managed the bills. This charges the Members of one house who are most familiar with the bill with the duty of maintaining their chamber's position in the face of amending actions by the conferees (or "managers") of the other house.

The number of conferees from each chamber may vary, the range usually being from three to nine Members in each group, depending upon the length or complexity of the legislation involved. There may be five Representatives and three Senators on the conference committee, or the reverse. But a majority vote controls the action of each group so that a larger representation does not give one chamber a voting advantage over the other chamber's conferees.

Theoretically, conferees are not allowed to write new legislation in reconciling the two versions before them, but this curb sometimes is by-passed. Many bills have been put into a palatable compromise form only after new language was provided by the conferees.

Frequently the ironing out of difficulties takes days or even weeks. Conferences on knotty appropriations bills sometimes are particularly drawn out.

As a conference proceeds, conferees reconcile their differences, but generally they grant concessions only insofar as they remain sure that the chamber they represent will accept the compromises. Once in a while uncertainty over this, or the positive refusal of a chamber to back down on a disputed amendment, results in an impasse, and the bills die in conference even though each was approved by its sponsoring chamber.

Conferees sometimes go back to their respective chambers for further instructions, when they report certain portions in disagreement. Then the chamber concerned can either "recede and concur" in the amendment of the other house, or "insist on its amendment."

When the conferees have reached agreement, they prepare a conference report, explaining why they did -- or did not -- retain some amendments, and cut out others. The reports are the justifications to their respective houses of the actions of the conferees, and the explanations, in document form, must be submitted to each house. Conference reports, with an explanation by the House conferees, are always printed in the House. In the Senate an explanation is often made orally by one of the conferees.

The conference report must be approved by each house. Consequently, approval of the report is approval of the compromise bill worked out. In the order of voting on conference reports, the chamber which asked for a conference yields the other chamber the opportunity to vote first.

Final Steps

After a bill has been passed by both the House and Senate all of the original papers are sent to the enrolling clerk of the chamber in which the bill originated. He then prepares an enrolled bill which is printed on parchment paper. When this bill has been certified as correct by the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House, depending on which chamber originated the bill, it is signed first (no matter whether it originated in the Senate or House) by the Speaker of the House and then by the President of the Senate. It is next sent to the White House to await Presidential action.

If the President approves the bill he signs it, dates it and usually writes the word "approved" on the document. If he does not sign it within ten days (Sundays excepted) and Congress is in session, the bill becomes law without his signature.

VETOES

However, should Congress adjourn before the 10 days expire, and the President has failed to sign the measure, it does not become law. This procedure is called the pocket veto. Occasionally a President vetoes a bill by refusing to sign it and returning it to the Congress with a message stating his reasons. The message is sent to the chamber which originated the bill. If no action is taken there on the message, the bill affected dies. Sometimes, however, Congress attempts to override the President's veto and enact the bill, "the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding." This requires a two-thirds vote of those present, who must number a quorum and vote by roll call.

Debate can precede this vote, with motions permitted to lay the message on the table, postpone action on it, or refer it to committee. If the President's veto is overridden by a two-thirds vote in both houses, the bill becomes law. Otherwise it is dead, and can be revived only by reintroduction and routing through the process all bills undergo.

When bills are passed finally and signed, or passed over a veto, they are given law numbers in numerical order as they become law. There are two series of numbers, one for public and one for private laws, starting at the number "1" for each two-year term of Congress. They are then identified by law number and by Congress -- i.e., Public Law 250, 84th Congress; Private Law 21, 84th Congress.

GLOSSARY OF CONGRESSIONAL TERMS

Act -- The term for legislation which has passed both houses of Congress and has been signed by the President or passed over his veto, thus becoming law.

Also, used technically for a bill that has been passed by one house and engrossed.

Adjournment sine die -- Adjournment without definitely fixing a day for reconvening; literally "adjournment without day." Marks the official end of a Congressional session.

Adjournment to a Day Certain -- Adjournment under a motion or resolution which fixes the next time of meeting. Neither house can adjourn for more than three days without the concurrence of the other. A session of Congress is not ended by adjournment to a day certain.

Amendment -- Proposal of a Congressman to alter the language or stipulations in a bill or act. It is usually printed, debated, and voted upon in the same manner as a bill.

Appeal -- A Congressman's challenge of a ruling or decision made by the presiding officer of the Senate or House. The Congressman appeals to Members of the Chamber to override the decision. If carried by a majority vote, the appeal nullifies the chair's ruling.

Appropriation Bill -- Grants the actual monies approved by authorization bills, but not necessarily to the total permissible under the authorization bill. Normally an appropriation bill originates in the House, and is not acted on until its authorization measure is enacted. In addition to general appropriation bills, there are two specialized types. (See Deficiency and Supplemental.)

Authorization Bill -- Authorizes a program, specifies its general aim and conduct, and puts a ceiling on monies that can be used to finance it. Usually enacted before appropriation bill is passed. (See Contract Authorization.)

Bills -- Most legislative proposals before Congress are in the form of bills, and are designated as HR (House of Representatives) or S (Senate) according to the house in which they originate and by a number assigned in the order in which they were introduced, from the beginning of each two-year Congressional term. "Public bills" deal with general questions, and become Public Laws if approved by Congress and signed by the President. "Private bills" deal with individual matters such as claims against the government, immigration and naturalization cases, land titles, etc., and become Private Laws if approved and signed.

The introduction of a bill, and its referral to an appropriate committee for action follows the process given in "How a Bill Is Passed." (See also Concurrent Resolution, Joint Resolution, Resolution, in this Glossary.)

Bills Introduced -- In the Senate, any number of Senators may join in introducing a single bill. In the House, no more than one Member's name may appear on a bill. The result is that in the House many duplicate bills are introduced, only one of which is passed. Thus, a Member may have his name on a bill introduced but not on an identical bill passed. In case of identical bills introduced, the bill selected for passage is usually that sponsored by the chairman of the committee having jurisdiction, or the senior Member of the group of sponsors.

Many bills in reality are committee bills and are introduced under the name of the chairman of the committee or subcommittee as a formality. All appropriation bills fall into this category, as do many other bills, particularly those dealing with complicated, technical subjects. A committee frequently holds hearings on a number of related bills, and may agree on one of them or on an entirely new bill. (See Clean Bill.)

Bills Referred -- When introduced, a bill is referred to the committee which has jurisdiction over the subject with which the bill is concerned. The appropriate reference for bills is spelled out in the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946. Bills are referred by the Speaker in the House and the Presiding Officer in the Senate. Appeals may be made from their decisions.

Budget -- The document sent to Congress by the President in January of each year estimating government revenue and expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year and recommending appropriations in detail. The President's Budget Message forms the basis for Congressional hearings and legislation on the year's appropriations. (See also Legislative Budget.)

Calendar -- An agenda or list of pending business before committees or either chamber. The House uses five legislative calendars. (See Consent, Discharge, House, Private and Union Calendar.)

In the Senate, all legislative matters reported from committee go on a single calendar. They are listed there in order, but may be called up irregularly by the Majority Leader either by a motion to do so, or by obtaining the unanimous consent of the Senate. Frequently the Minority Leader is consulted to assure unanimous consent. Only cloture can limit debate on bills thus called up. (See Call of the Calendar.)

The Senate also uses one non-legislative calendar, for treaties, etc. (See Executive Calendar.)

Calendar Wednesday -- In the House on Wednesdays, committees may be called in the order in which they appear in Rule X of the House Manual, for the purpose of bringing up any of their bills from the House or the Union Calendars, except bills which are privileged. General debate is limited to two hours. Bills called up from the Union Calendar are considered in Committee of the Whole. Calendar Wednesday is not observed during the last two weeks of a session, and may be dispensed with at other times -- by a two-thirds vote. It usually is dispensed with.

Call of the Calendar -- Senate bills which are not brought up for debate by a motion or a unanimous consent agreement are brought before the Senate for action when the calendar listing them in order is "called." Bills considered in this fashion are usually non-controversial and debate is limited to five minutes for each Senator on a bill or on amendments to it.

Chamber -- Meeting place for the total membership of either the House or the Senate, as distinguished from the respective committee rooms.

Clean Bill -- Frequently after a committee has finished a major revision of a bill, one of the committee members, usually the chairman, will assemble the changes plus what is left of the original bill into a new measure and introduce it as a "clean bill". The new measure, which carries a new number, is then sent to the floor for consideration. This often is a timesaver, as committee-recommended changes do not have to be considered one at a time by the chamber.

Cloture -- The process by which debate can be limited in the Senate, other than by unanimous consent. A motion for cloture can apply to any measure before the Senate except a proposal to change the chamber's rules of procedure. It requires 16 Senators' signatures for introduction, and 64 votes for passage -- 2/3 of the Senate membership. The motion is voted upon by a yea and nay roll call one hour after the Senate meets on the second day following introduction of the motion. If voted, cloture limits each Senator to one hour of debate.

Committee -- A subdivision of the House or Senate which prepares legislation for action by the parent chamber, or makes investigations as directed by the parent chamber. There are several types of committees. (See Standing, and Select or Special.) Most standing committees are divided into subcommittees, which study legislation, hold hearings, and report their recommendations to the full committee. Only the full committee can report legislation for action by the House or Senate.

Committee of the Whole -- The working title of what is formally "The Committee of the Whole House (of Representatives) on the State of the Union." Unlike other committees, it has no fixed membership. It is comprised of any 100 or more House members who participate -- on the floor of the chamber -- in debating or altering legislation before the body. Such measures, however, must first have passed through the regular committees and be on the calendar.

Technically, the Committee of the Whole considers only bills directly or indirectly appropriating money, authorizing appropriations, or involving taxes or charges on the public. Actually, the Committee of the Whole often considers other types of legislation. Because the Committee of the Whole need number only 100 Congressmen, a quorum is more readily attained, and business is expedited. None of the group's votes can be the time-consuming roll calls which require yeas and nays for the record.

When the full House resolves itself into the Committee of the Whole, it supplants the Speaker with a "chairman." The measure is debated or amended, with non-roll-call votes as needed. When the Committee completes its action on the measure, it dissolves itself by "rising." The Speaker returns, and the full House hears the erstwhile chairman of the committee report that group's recommendations. The full House then acts upon them.

At this time Members may demand a roll-call vote on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

Concurrent Resolution -- A concurrent resolution, designated H Con Res or S Con Res, must be passed by both houses but does not require the signature of the President and does not have the force of law. Concurrent resolutions generally are used to make or amend rules applicable to both houses or to express the sentiment of the two houses. A concurrent resolution, for example, is used to fix the time for adjournment of a Congress. It might also be used to convey the congratulations of Congress to another country on the anniversary of its independence.

Conference -- A meeting between the representatives of the House and Senate to reconcile differences between the two houses over provisions of a bill. Members of the conference committee are appointed by the Speaker and the President of the Senate and are called "managers" for their respective chambers. A majority of the managers for each house must reach agreement on the provisions of the bill (often a compromise between the versions of the two chambers) before it can be sent up for floor action in the form of a "conference report." There it cannot be amended, and if not approved by both chambers, the bill goes back to conference. Elaborate rules govern the conduct of the conferences. All bills which are passed by House and Senate in slightly different form need not be sent to conference; either chamber may "concur" in the other's amendments. (See Custody of the Papers.)

Congressional Record -- The daily, printed account of proceedings in both House and Senate chambers, with debate, statements, and the like reported verbatim. Committee activities are not covered, excepting their reports to the parent body. Highlights of legislative and committee action are embodied in a Digest section of the Record, and Congressmen are entitled to have their extraneous remarks printed in its Appendix. They may edit and revise remarks made on the floor, and frequently do, so that quotations reported by the press are not always found in the Record.

Consent Calendar -- Members of the House may place on this calendar any bill on the Union or House calendar which is considered to be non-controversial. Bills on the consent calendar are normally called on the first and third Mondays of each month. On the first occasion when a bill is called in this manner, consideration may be blocked by the objection of any Member. On the second time, if there are three objections, the bill is stricken from the consent calendar; if less than three Members object, the bill is given immediate consideration.

A bill on the consent calendar may be postponed in another way. A Member may ask that the measure be passed over "without prejudice." In that case, no objection is recorded against the bill, and its status on the Consent calendar remains unchanged.

A bill stricken from the Consent calendar remains on the Union or House calendar.

Contract Authorizations -- Found in both authorization and appropriation bills, these authorizations are stop-gap provisions which permit the federal government to let contracts or obligate itself for future payments from funds not yet appropriated. The assumption is that funds will be available for payment when contracted debts come due.

Correcting the Record -- Rules prohibit Members from changing their votes after the result has been announced. But frequently, hours, days, or months after a vote has been taken, a Member announces that he was "incorrectly recorded" and requests -- and almost always receives -- unanimous consent to have the vote corrected in the permanent edition of the Congressional Record. This occurs more frequently in the House than in the Senate. Errors in the text of the Record may be corrected in the same manner.

Custody of the Papers -- To reconcile differences on a bill between the House and Senate, a conference may be arranged. The chamber in "custody of the papers" -- the engrossed bill, engrossed amendments, messages of transmittal -- is the only body empowered to request the conference. That body then has the advantage of acting last on the conference report when it is submitted.

Deficiency Appropriation -- An appropriation to cover the difference between an agency's regular appropriation and the amount deemed necessary for it to operate for the full fiscal year. Regular appropriations normally are passed in one fiscal year for the ensuing fiscal year. Deficiency appropriations are for use in the same fiscal year in which they are passed. (See Supplemental Appropriation.)

Dilatory Motion -- A motion, usually made upon a technical point, for the purpose of killing time and preventing action on a bill. The rules outlaw dilatory motions, but enforcement is largely within the discretion of the presiding officer.

Discharge a Committee -- Relieve a committee from jurisdiction over a measure before it. This is rarely a successful procedure, attempted more often in the House than in the Senate.

In the House, if a committee does not report a bill within 30 days after the bill was referred to it, any Member may file a discharge motion. This motion, treated as a petition, needs the signatures of 218 members. After the required signatures have been obtained, there is a delay of seven days. Then, on the second and fourth Monday of each month, except during the last six days of a session, any Member who has signed the petition may be recognized to move that the committee be discharged. Debate on the motion to discharge is limited to 20 minutes, and, if the motion is carried, consideration of the bill becomes a matter of high privilege.

If a resolution to consider a bill (see Rule) is held up in the Rules Committee for more than seven legislative days, any Member may enter a motion to discharge the Committee. The motion is handled like any other discharge petition in the House.

Occasionally, to expedite non-controversial legislative business, a committee is discharged upon unanimous consent of the House, and a petition is not required. (For Senate procedure, see Discharge Resolution.)

Discharge Calendar -- The House calendar to which motions to discharge committees are referred when they have the necessary 218 signatures and are awaiting action.

Discharge Petition -- In the House, a motion to discharge a committee from considering a bill. The motion, or petition, requires signatures of 218 House members. (See Discharge a Committee.)

Discharge Resolution -- In the Senate, a special motion any Senator may introduce to relieve a committee from consideration of a bill before it. The resolution can be called up on motion for approval or disapproval, in the same manner as other matters of Senate business. (For House procedure, see Discharge a Committee.)

Division Vote -- Same as Standing Vote. (See below.)

Enacting Clause -- Key phrase in bills saying, "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives . . ." A successful motion to strike it from legislation kills the measure.

Engrossed Bill -- The final copy of a bill as passed by one chamber, with the text as amended by floor action and certified to by the Clerk of the House or the Secretary of the Senate.

Enrolled Bill -- The final copy of a bill which has been passed in identical form by both chambers. It is certified to by an officer of the house of origin (House Clerk or Senate Secretary) and then sent on for signatures of the House Speaker, the Senate President, and the U.S. President. An enrolled bill is printed on parchment.

Executive Calendar -- This is an additional, non-legislative calendar, in the Senate, on which Presidential documents such as treaties and nominations are listed.

Executive Document -- A document, usually a treaty, sent to the Senate by the President for consideration or ratification. These are identified for each session of Congress as Executive A, 84th Congress, 1st Session; Executive B, etc. They are referred to committee in the same manner as other measures. Unlike legislative documents, however, treaties do not die at the end of a Congress, but remain "live" proposals until acted on by the Senate or withdrawn by the President.

Executive Resolution -- A Senate resolution dealing with executive business rather than legislative, i. e., with the handling of a treaty or nomination. A motion to discharge a committee from consideration of a nomination would be made in an Executive Resolution, instead of an ordinary Senate Resolution.

Executive Session -- Meeting of a Senate or a House committee which only the group's members are privileged to attend. Frequently witnesses appear before committees meeting in executive session, and other Congressmen may be invited, but the public and press are not allowed.

Expenditure -- The actual spending of money as distinguished from the appropriation of it. Expenditures are made by the disbursing officers of the Administration; appropriations are made only by Congress. The two are rarely identical in any fiscal year; expenditures may represent money appropriated one, two or more years previously.

Filibuster -- A time-delaying tactic used by a minority in an effort to prevent a vote on a bill which probably would pass if brought to a vote. The most common method is to take advantage of the Senate's rules permitting unlimited debate, but other forms of parliamentary maneuvering may be used. The stricter rules in the House make filibusters more difficult, but they are attempted from time to time through devices such as repeated demands for quorum calls.

Fiscal Year -- Financial operations of the government are carried out in a 12-month fiscal year, beginning on July 1 and ending on June 30. The fiscal year carries the date of the calendar year in which it ends.

Floor Manager -- A Member, usually representing sponsors of a bill, who attempts to steer it through debate and revision to a final vote in the chamber. Floor managers are frequently chairmen or ranking members of the committee that reported the bill. Managers are responsible for apportioning the time granted supporters of the bill for debating it. The Minority Leader or the ranking minority member of the committee often apportions time for the opposition.

Frank -- A Congressman's facsimile signature on envelopes, used in lieu of stamps for his official outgoing mail, thus postage - free. Also the privilege of sending mail postage-free.

Germane -- Pertaining to the subject matter of the measure at hand. All House amendments must be germane to the bill. The Senate requires that amendments be germane only when they are to general appropriation bills, to those being considered under cloture, or often when proceeding under an agreement to limit debate.

Hearings -- Committee sessions for hearing witnesses. At hearings on legislation, witnesses usually include specialists, government officials and spokesmen for persons affected by the bills under study. Hearings related to special investigations bring forth a variety of witnesses. Committees sometimes use their subpena power to summon reluctant witnesses. The public and press may attend "open" hearings, but are barred from "closed" or "executive" hearings.

The committee announces its hearings, from one day to many weeks in advance, and may invite certain persons to testify. Persons who request time to testify may be turned down by the committee but most requests are honored.

Hopper -- Box on House Clerk's desk where bills are deposited on introduction.

House -- The House of Representatives, as distinct from the Senate, although each body is a "house" of Congress.

House Calendar -- Listing for action by the House of Representatives of public bills which do not directly or indirectly appropriate money or raise revenue.

Immunity -- Constitutional privilege of Congressmen to make verbal statements on the floor and in committee for which they cannot be sued or arrested for slander or libel. Also, freedom from arrest while traveling to or from sessions of Congress or on official business. Congressmen in this status may be arrested only for treason, felonies or a breach of the peace, as defined by Congressional manuals.

Joint Committee -- A committee composed of a specified number of members of both House and Senate. Usually a joint committee is investigative in nature. There are a few standing joint committees, such as the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and the Joint Committee on the Economic Report.

Joint Resolution -- A joint resolution, designated H J Res or S J Res, requires the approval of both houses and the signature of the President, just as a bill does, and has the force of law if approved. There is no real difference between a bill and a joint resolution. The latter is generally used in dealing with limited matters, such as a single appropriation for a specific purpose or the granting of Congressional approval for executive actions -- for example, international executive agreements.

Joint resolutions also are used to propose amendments to the Constitution. These do not require Presidential signature, but become a part of the Constitution when three-fourths of the states have ratified them.

Journal -- The official record of the proceedings of the House and Senate. The Journal records the actions taken in each chamber, but unlike the Congressional Record, it does not include the verbatim report of speeches, debate, etc.

Law -- An Act of Congress which has been signed by the President, or passed over his veto by the Congress. Laws are listed by number; for example, the Housing Act of 1954 (HR 7839) became Public Law No. 560.

Legislative Budget -- An appraisal by Congress of federal spending and income for the year ahead. The Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 (CQ Almanac, Vol. II, 1946, pp. 362, 531) directs four committees -- House Appropriations and Ways and Means and Senate Appropriations and Finance -- to study the President's budget recommendations each year, then by Feb. 15, report their own recommendations. The law directs that the report be accompanied by a concurrent resolution adopting the budget and fixing a limit on the year's appropriations. In practice, however, Congress has not complied with this law.

Legislative Day -- The "day" extending from the time either house meets after an adjournment until the time it next adjourns. Because the House normally adjourns from day to day, legislative days and calendar days usually coincide. But in the Senate, a legislative day may, and frequently does, extend over several calendar days.

Lobby -- A group seeking to influence the passage or defeat of legislation. Originally the term referred to persons frequenting the lobbies or corridors of legislative chambers in order to speak to lawmakers.

The exact definition of a lobby and the activity of lobbying is a matter of opinion. By some definitions, lobbying is limited to attempts at direct influence by personal interview and persuasion. Under other definitions, lobbying includes attempts at indirect influence, such as stirring members of a group to write or visit Congressmen, or attempting to create a climate of opinion favorable to a desired legislative action.

The right to attempt to influence legislation is based on the First Amendment to the Constitution, which says Congress shall make no law abridging the right of the people "to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

Majority Leader -- Chief strategist and floor spokesman for the party in nominal control in either chamber. He is elected by his party colleagues and is virtually program director for his chamber, since he usually speaks for its majority.

Majority Whip -- In effect, the assistant majority leader, in House or Senate. His job is to help marshal majority forces in support of party strategy.

Manual -- The official handbook in each house prescribing its organization, procedures and operations in detail. The Senate Manual contains standing rules, orders, laws and resolutions affecting Senate business; the House Manual is the equivalent for the lower chamber. Both volumes contain previous codes under which Congress functioned and from which it continues to derive precedents. Committee powers are outlined. The rules set forth in the Manuals may be changed by elaborate chamber actions also specified by the Manuals.

Marking up a Bill -- Going through a measure, usually in committee, taking it section by section, revising language, penciling in new phrases,, etc. If the bill is extensively revised, the new version may be introduced as a separate bill, with a new number. (See Clean Bill.)

Minority Whip -- Performs duties of whip for minority party. (See Majority Whip.)

Morning Hour -- The time set aside at the beginning of each legislative day for the consideration of regular routine business. The "hour" is of indefinite duration in the House, where it is rarely used. In the Senate it is the first two hours of a session following an adjournment, as distinguished from a recess. The morning hour can be terminated earlier if the morning business has been completed. This business includes such matters as messages from the President, communications from the heads of departments, messages from the House, the presentation of petitions and memorials, reports of standing and select committees, and the introduction of bills and resolutions.

During the first hour of the morning hour in the Senate, no motion to proceed to the consideration of any bill on the calendar is in order except by unanimous consent. During the second hour, motions can be made but must be decided without debate.

Motion -- Request by a Congressman for any one of a wide array of parliamentary actions. He "moves" for a certain procedure, or the consideration of a measure or a vote, etc. The precedence of motions, and whether they are debatable, is set forth in the House and Senate Manuals.

Nominations -- Appointments to office by the executive branch of the government, subject to Senate confirmation. Although most nominations win quick Senate approval, some are controversial and become the topic of hearings and debate. Sometimes Senators object to appointees for patronage reasons -- for example, when a nomination to a local federal job is made without consulting the Senators of the state concerned. Then a Senator may use the stock objection that the nominee is "personally obnoxious" to him. Usually other Senators join in blocking such an appointment out of courtesy to their colleague.

One Minute Speeches -- Addresses by House members at the beginning of a legislative day. The speeches may cover any subject, but are limited strictly to one minute's duration.

Override a Veto -- If the President disapproves a bill and sends it back to Congress with his objections, Congress may override his veto by a two-thirds vote in each chamber. The Constitution requires a yea-and-nay roll call. The question put to each house is: "Shall the bill pass, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding?" (See also Pocket Veto and Veto.)

Pair -- A "gentlemen's agreement" between two lawmakers on opposite sides to withhold their votes on roll calls so their absence from Congress will not affect the outcome of record voting. If passage of the measure requires a two-thirds majority, a pair would require two Members favoring the action to one opposed to it.

Two kinds of pairs -- special and general -- are used; neither is counted in vote totals. The names of lawmakers pairing on a given vote and their stands, if known, are printed in the Congressional Record.

The special pair applies to one or a series of roll-call votes on the same subject. On special pairs lawmakers usually specify how they would have voted.

A general pair in the Senate, now rarely used in that chamber, applies to all votes on which the Members pairing are on opposite sides, and it lasts for the length of time pairing Senators agree on. It usually does not specify a Senator's stand on a given vote.

The general pair in the House differs from the other pairs. No agreement is involved and the pair does not tie up votes. A Representative expecting to be absent may notify the House Clerk he wishes to make a "general" pair. His name then is paired arbitrarily with that of another Member desiring a general pair, and the list is printed in the Congressional Record. He may or may not be paired with a Member taking the opposite position. General pairs in the House give no indication of how a Congressman would have voted. (See Record Vote and Stand.)

Pocket Veto -- The act of the President in withholding his approval of a bill after Congress has adjourned. When Congress is in session, a bill becomes law without the President's signature if he does not act upon it within ten days, excluding Sundays, from the time he gets it. But if Congress adjourns within that ten-day period, the bill is killed without the President's formal veto.

Point of Order -- An objection raised by a Congressman that the chamber is departing from rules governing its conduct of business. The objector cites the rule violated, the chair sustaining his objection if correctly made. Order is restored by the chair's suspending proceedings of the chamber until it conforms to the prescribed "order of business." Members sometimes raise a "point of no order" -- when there is noise and disorderly conduct in the chamber.

President of the Senate -- Presiding officer of the upper chamber, normally the Vice President of the U.S. In his absence, a President pro tempore (President for the time being) presides.

Previous Question -- In this sense, a "question" is an "issue" before the House for a vote and the issue is "previous" when some other topic has superseded it in the attention of the chamber. A motion for the previous question, when carried, has the effect of cutting off all extraneous debate and forcing a vote on the subject originally at hand. If, however, the previous question is moved and carried before there has been any debate on the subject at hand and the subject is debatable, then 40 minutes of debate is allowed before the vote. The previous question is sometimes moved on a non-debatable question in order to prevent amendments. The motion for the previous question is a debate-limiting device and is not in order in the Senate.

Private Calendar -- Private House bills dealing with individual matters such as claims against the government, immigration and naturalization cases, land titles, etc. When it is before the chamber, two Members may block a private bill, which then is recommitted to committee.

Backers of a private bill thus recommitted have another recourse. The measure can be put into an "omnibus claims bill" -- several private bills rolled into one. As with any bill, no part of an omnibus claims bill may be deleted without a vote. When a private bill goes back to the floor in this form, it can be defeated only by a majority of those present.

Privilege -- Privilege relates to the rights of Congressmen and to the relative priority of the motions and actions they may make in their respective chambers. The two are distinct. "Privileged questions" concern legislative business. "Questions of privilege" concern legislators themselves. (See below.)

Privileged Questions -- The order in which bills, motions and other legislative measures may be considered by Congress is governed by strict priorities. A motion to table, for instance, is more privileged than a motion to recommit. Thus, a motion to recommit can be superseded by a motion to table, and a vote would be forced on the latter motion only. A motion to adjourn, however, would take precedence over this one, and is thus considered of the "highest privilege."

Pro Forma Amendment -- See Strike Out the Last Word.

Questions of Privilege -- These are matters affecting members of Congress individually or collectively.

Questions affecting the rights, safety, dignity and integrity of proceedings of the House or Senate as a whole are questions of privilege of the House or Senate, as the case may be.

Congressmen singly involve questions of "personal privilege." A Member's rising to a question of personal privilege is given precedence over almost all other proceedings. An annotation in the House Rules points out that the privilege of the Member rests primarily on the Constitution, which gives him a conditional immunity from arrest and an unconditional freedom to speak in the House.

Quorum -- The number of Members whose presence is necessary for the transaction of business. In the Senate and House it is a majority of the membership (when there are no vacancies, this is 49 in the Senate and 218 in the House.). A quorum is 100 in the Committee of the Whole House. If a point of order is made that a quorum is not present, the only business in order is either a motion to adjourn or a motion to direct the Sergeant-at-Arms to request the attendance of absentees.

Readings of Bills -- Traditional parliamentary law required bills to be read three times before they were passed. This custom is of little modern significance except in rare instances. Normally the bill is considered to have its first reading when it is introduced and printed, by title, in the Congressional Record. Its second reading comes when floor consideration begins. (This is the most likely point at which there is an actual reading of the bill, if there is any.) The third reading (usually by title) takes place when action has been completed on amendments.

Recess -- Distinguished from adjournment in that a recess does not end a legislative day and therefore does not interfere with unfinished business. The rules in each house set forth certain matters to be taken up and disposed of at the beginning of each legislative day. The House, which operates under much stricter rules than the Senate, usually adjourns from day to day. The Senate often recesses.

Recommit to Committee -- A simple motion, made on the floor after deliberation on a bill, to return it to the committee which reported it. If approved, recommittal usually is considered a death blow to the bill. In the House a motion to recommit can be made only by a Member opposed to the bill, and in recognizing a Member to make the motion, the Speaker gives the minority party preference over the majority.

A motion to recommit may include instructions to the committee to report the bill again with specific amendments or by a certain date. Or the instructions may be to make a particular study with no definite deadline for final action.

Reconsider a Vote -- A motion to reconsider the vote by which an action was taken has the effect, until it is disposed of, of suspending the action. In the Senate the motion can be made only by a Member who voted on the prevailing side of the original question, or by a Member who did not vote at all. In the House it can be made only by a Member on the prevailing side.

A common practice after close votes in the Senate is a motion to reconsider followed by a motion to table the motion to reconsider. On this motion to table, Senators vote as they voted on the original question to enable the motion to table to prevail. The matter is then finally closed and further motions to reconsider are not entertained. In the House, as a routine precaution, a motion to reconsider usually is made every time a measure is passed. Such a motion almost always is tabled immediately, thus shutting off the possibility of future reconsideration except by unanimous consent.

Motions to reconsider must be entered in the Senate within the next two days of actual session after the original vote has been taken. In the House they must be entered either on the same day or on the next succeeding day the House is in session.

Record Vote -- This is a roll call of the entire chamber membership, to which each Member on the floor must answer "yea", "nay", or, if he does not wish to vote, "present." The Constitution requires yea-and-nay votes on the question of overriding a veto. In other cases, they can be obtained by the demand of one-fifth of the Members present. In the House, the yeas-and-nays are required automatically whenever a Member objects to a non-record vote taken when a quorum was not present, if the question is one which requires a quorum. The yeas-and-nays are not taken in the Committee of the Whole.

Report -- Both a verb and a noun, as a Congressional term. A committee which has been examining a bill referred to it by the parent chamber "reports" its finding and recommendations to the chamber when the committee returns the measure. The process is called "reporting" a bill.

A "report" is the document setting forth the committee's explanation of its action. House and Senate reports are numbered separately and are designated S Rept or H Rept. Conference reports are numbered and designated in the same way as regular House reports.

Most reports favor a bill's passage. Adverse reports are occasionally submitted, but more often, when a committee disapproves a bill, it simply fails to report it at all. When a committee report is not unanimous, the dissenting committeemen may file a statement of their views, called Minority Views and referred to as a Minority Report. Sometimes a bill is reported without recommendation.

Rescission -- An item in an appropriation bill rescinding, or cancelling, funds previously appropriated but not spent.

Resolution -- A simple resolution, designated H Res or S Res, deals with matters entirely within the prerogatives of one house or the other. It requires neither passage by the other chamber nor approval by the President, and does not have the force of law. Most resolutions deal with the rules of one house. They also are used to express the sentiments of a single house, as condolences to the family of a deceased member or to give "advice" on foreign policy or other executive business. (Also see Concurrent and Joint Resolutions.)

Rider -- A provision tacked on to a bill which its sponsor hopes to get through more easily by including in other legislation. Riders become law if the bills embodying them do. Riders providing for legislation in appropriations bills are outstanding examples, though technically they are banned.

Rule -- The term has two specific Congressional meanings. A rule may be a standing order governing the conduct of House or Senate business and listed in the chamber's book of rules. The rules deal with duties of officers, order of business, admission to the floor, voting procedures, etc.

In the House, a rule also may be a decision made by its Rules Committee about the handling of a particular bill on the floor. The Committee may determine under which standing rule a bill shall be considered, or it may provide a "special rule" in the form of a resolution. If the resolution is adopted by the House, the temporary rule becomes as valid as any standing rule, and lapses only after action has been completed on the measure to which it pertains.

A special rule sets the time limit on general debate. It may also waive points of order against provisions of the bill in question or against specified amendments intended to be proposed to the bill. It may even forbid all amendments or all amendments except, in some cases, those proposed by the legislative committee which handled the bill. In this instance it is known as a "closed" or "gag" rule as opposed to an "open" rule which puts no limitation on floor action, thus leaving the bill open to alteration. (See Suspend the Rules.)

Select or Special Committee -- A committee set up for a special purpose and a limited time by resolution of either House or Senate. Most special committees are investigative in nature.

Sine Die -- See Adjournment sine die.

Slip Laws -- The first official publication of a bill that has been enacted into law. Each is published separately in unbound single-sheet or pamphlet form. It usually takes two to three days from the date of Presidential approval to the time when slip laws become available.

Speaker -- The presiding officer of the House of Representatives, elected by its Members.

Special Session -- A session of Congress after it has adjourned sine die, completing its regular session. Special sessions are convened by the President of the U. S. under his Constitutional powers.

Stand -- A lawmaker's position, for or against, on a given issue or vote. He can make known his stand on a roll-call vote by answering "yea" or "nay," by "pairing" for or against, or by "announcing" his position to the House or Senate. Members also may go on record by answering the Congressional Quarterly Poll of unrecorded Congressmen on important roll calls. (See Pair, and Record Vote, above.)

Standing Committee -- A group permanently provided for by House or Senate rules. The standing committees at present are specified by the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, which broadly defines their respective jurisdictions.

Standing Vote -- A non-record vote used in both House and Senate. A standing vote, also called a division vote, is taken as follows: Members in favor of a proposal stand and are counted by the presiding officer; then Members opposed stand and are counted. There is no record of how individual Members voted. In the House, the presiding officer announces the number for and against. In the Senate, usually only the result is announced.

Statutes-at-Large -- A chronological arrangement of the laws enacted in each session of Congress. Though indexed, the laws are not arranged by subject matter nor is there an indication of how they affect previous law. (See U.S. Code.)

Strike From the Record -- Remarks made on the House floor may offend some Member, who moves that the offending words be "taken down" for the Speaker's cognizance, and then expunged from the verbatim report to be carried in the Congressional Record.

Strike Out the Last Word -- A move whereby House Members are entitled to speak for a fixed time on a measure then being debated by the chamber. A Member gains recognition from the chair by moving to strike out the last word of the amendment or section of the bill then under consideration. The motion is pro forma, and customarily requires no vote.

Strike the Enacting Clause -- Each bill before Congress starts off with the phrase: "Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That . . ." A Member wishing to kill a bill frequently will move from the floor to "strike the enacting clause" -- that first sentence -- from the bill. If the action carries and the enacting clause is stricken, the bill cannot, of course, be enacted into law.

Substitute -- A motion, an amendment, or an entire bill introduced in place of pending business. Passage of a substitute measure kills the original measure by supplanting it. A substitute may be amended.

Supplemental Appropriation -- An appropriation supplemental to the regular appropriation, but not a deficiency measure. Supplemental appropriations normally are passed after the regular appropriation, but supposedly before the fiscal year to which they apply. Deficiencies are passed in the same fiscal year to which they apply. This distinction is not always adhered to.

Suspend the Rules -- Often a time-saving procedure for passing bills in the House. The wording of the motion, which may be made by any Member recognized by the Speaker, is: "I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (HR 000)..." A favorable vote by two-thirds of those present is required for passage. Debate is limited to 40 minutes and no amendments from the floor are permitted. If a two-thirds favorable vote is not attained, the bill may be considered later under regular procedures.

Table a Bill -- The motion to "lay on the table" is not debatable in either house, and is usually a method of making a final, adverse disposition of a matter. In the Senate, however, different language is sometimes used. The motion is worded to let a bill "lie on the table," perhaps for subsequent "picking up." This motion is more flexible, merely keeping the bill pending for later action, if desired.

Teller Vote -- In the House, Members file past tellers and are counted as for or against a measure, but they are not recorded individually. The teller vote is not used in the Senate. In the House, tellers are ordered upon demand of one-fifth of a quorum. This is 44 in the House, 20 in Committee of the Whole.

Treaties -- Executive proposals which must be submitted to the Senate for approval of two-thirds of the Senators present. Before they act on such foreign policy matters, Senators may refer them to committee for scrutiny. Treaties are read three times and debated in the chamber much as are legislative proposals.

Unanimous Consent -- Synonymous with Without Objection. (See below.)

Union Calendar -- Bills which directly or indirectly appropriate money or raise revenue are placed on this House calendar according to the date reported from committee.

U.S. Code -- A consolidation and codification of the general and permanent laws of the United States arranged by subject under 50 Titles, the first six dealing with general or political subjects, and the other 44 alphabetically arranged from Agriculture to War and National Defense. The Code is now revised every six years and a supplement is published after each session of Congress.

Veto -- Disapproval by the President of a bill or joint resolution, other than one proposing an amendment to the Constitution. When Congress is in session, the President must veto a bill within 10 days, excluding Sundays, after he has received it; otherwise it becomes law with or without his signature. When the President vetoes a bill, he returns it to the house of its origin with a message stating his objections. The veto then becomes a question of high privilege. (See Override a Veto.)

When Congress has adjourned, the President may pocket veto a bill by failing to sign it. (See Pocket Veto.)

Voice Vote -- In either House or Senate, Members answer "aye" or "no" in chorus and the presiding officer decides the result. The term also is used loosely to indicate action by unanimous consent or without objection.

Without Objection -- Used in lieu of a vote on noncontroversial motions, amendments, or bills, which may be passed in either the House or the Senate if no Member voices an objection.

Senate Gives Unanimous Approval to Two Conventions Dealing With Slavery, Tariffs

1. Conventions on Slavery (Exec F, 83rd Congress, second session) and Tariff Publication (Exec P, 82nd Congress, second session). Slavery convention transferred to the United Nations and International Court of Justice functions formerly assigned to the League of Nations and the Permanent Court of International Justice. Tariff Publication convention increased from $2,233 a year to $8,658 a year the sum contributed by the United States to the International Bureau for the Publication of Customs Tariffs. Two conventions considered en bloc. (Two-thirds majority or 56 "yeas" required.) Ratified, 84-0, Jan. 25. (See story, p. 606)

Motion to Recommit Natural Gas Bill, Three Proposed Amendments Rejected

2. Natural Gas (S 1853), Amend Natural Gas Act to exempt independent producers of natural gas from federal utility-rate control. Potter (R Mich.) motion to recommit the bill. Rejected, 30-64, Feb. 6. (See story, p. 469)

3. Natural Gas (S 1853), Pastore (D R.I.) amendment to require Federal Power Commission to consider interest of consumer in determining the reasonable market price of natural gas. Rejected, 40-53, Feb. 6.

4. Natural Gas (S 1853), Potter (R Mich.) amendments (considered en bloc) to substitute "fair and equitable price" for "reasonable market price" as criterion for determining price of natural gas. Rejected, 33-59, Feb. 6.

5. Natural Gas (S 1853), Humphrey (D Minn.) amendment to declare escalation clauses in contracts for purchase of natural gas contrary to public interest and unenforceable in court. Rejected, 33-59, Feb. 6. (For further votes on the bill, see next chart.)

Natural Gas Bill Passes, Select Committee Authorized, Sugar Bill Amendment Rejected

6. Natural Gas (S 1853). Douglas (D Ill.) amendment, in nature of a substitute, to exempt only "small," independent producers from control. Rejected, 35-58, Feb. 6. (See story, p. 469 and Senate Votes 2-5 on preceding chart.)

7. Natural Gas (HR 6645). Passage of bill (after substituting text and number of House bill for Senate bill). Passed, 53-38, Feb. 6.

8. Select Committee (S Res 205). Resolution to create a select committee to investigate campaign contribution offered to Sen. Case (R S.D.). Adoption of resolution. Adopted, 90-0, Feb. 7. (See story, p. 472)

9. Sugar (HR 7030). Amend and extend the Sugar Act of 1948. Capehart (R Ind.) amendment to establish different pro rata import quotas as to future U.S. sugar consumption increases. Rejected, 30-56, Feb. 8. (See story, p. 493)

Special Committee Established to Probe Corrupt Practices; 1952 Treaty Ratified

10. Treaty on Importing Trade Samples (Exec Q, 83rd Congress, first session). The treaty would relax rules on the importation of commercial sample goods and advertising matter. Legislation still is required for the treaty to take effect. (Two-thirds majority, or 51 "yeas" required.) Ratified 76-0, Feb. 22. (See story, p. 606)

11. Corrupt Practices Probe (S Res 219). Establish a special committee to investigate corrupt practices involving campaign contributions, lobbying or other activities. Adopted 79-1, Feb. 22. (See story in Investigations section)

Nixon Breaks Tie to Eliminate 90% Supports For Millable Wheat; 3 Amendments Rejected

15. Farm Program (S 3183). Humphrey (D Minn.) amendment (to Kerr amendment, Vote 16) to provide incentive payments of not more than $1,200 annually to producers who market cattle and hogs at lighter than normal weights. Rejected, 41-53, March 9. (For earlier votes on the bill, see previous chart)

16. Farm Program (S 3183). Kerr (D Okla.) amendment to provide 75 percent price supports on hogs and beef, or at the level of corn supports, whichever was higher. Rejected, 32-61, March 9. (See story, p. 375)

17. Farm Program (S 3183). Aiken (R Vt.) amendment to eliminate from the bill 90 percent price supports for millable wheat. Adopted, 46-45, March 9 after Vice President Richard M. Nixon cast a tie-breaking vote.

18. Farm Program (S 3183). Motion to table a motion to reconsider Aiken amendment (Vote 17). Adopted, 46-41, March 9.

19. Farm Program (S 3183). Humphrey (D Minn.) amendment (to Williams amendment, Vote 21) to provide 90 percent price supports to farmers who had not received more than $5,000 in loans from the Commodity Credit Corp., and limiting to $50,000 price support loans to all producers. Rejected, 36-56, March 12. (For more votes on the bill, see next chart)

Four Proposals to Change Existing Method Of Electing Chief Executive Considered

44. Electoral Reform (S J Res 31). Langer (R N.D.) substitute proposal to nominate Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates by direct vote in a national primary and elect them by direct popular vote. Rejected, 13-69, March 27. (See story, p. 448)

45. Electoral Reform (S J Res 31). Lehman (D N.Y.) substitute proposal to abolish electoral college and elect President and Vice President by direct popular vote. Rejected, 17-66, March 27.

46. Electoral Reform (S J Res 31.) Case (R N.J.) substitute proposal to make electoral vote in each state depend on the percentage of eligible voters balloting. Rejected, 20-66, March 27.

47. Electoral Reform (S J Res 31). Daniel (D Texas)-Thurmond (D S.C.)-Mundt (R S.D.) substitute proposal offering states a choice of dividing electoral votes in proportion to popular vote or providing for electors on Congressional district basis. Adopted, 48-37, March 27, (but fell short of two-thirds favorable vote necessary for passage of a constitutional amendment).

Three Treaties Approved; Amendment Adopted To Limit U. S. Funds to ILO If Reds Seated

50. Civil Aviation (Exec F, 84th Congress, second session). Provide for a meeting of the assembly of the International Civil Aviation Organization every three years instead of every year. Travel Conventions (Exec A, 84th Congress, second session), (Exec B, 84th Congress, second session). Simplify and standardize customs procedures in connection with international transportation of personal belongings and automobiles of tourists. Ratification of treaties. (A single roll call was taken on the three treaties; two-thirds majority or 54 "yeas" required.) Ratified, 81-0, April 19. (See story, p. 606)

51. FAO-ILO (S J Res 97). Amend certain laws providing for U.S. membership and participation in Food and Agriculture Organization and International Labor Organization. Bricker (R Ohio) amendment providing that not more than $1.75 million be appropriated for ILO if, during preceding year, delegates representing any Communist nation were permitted to vote in International Labor Conference or other meeting under auspices of ILO. Agreed to, 43-40, April 19. (See story, p. 488)

Senate Says Certain Airline Equipment Sales Would Not Count as Revenue in Fixing Subsidies

98. Air Carriers (S 3449). Williams (R Del.) motion to recommit a bill to provide that airline capital gains from the sale of flight equipment, if reinvested in new equipment, should not be counted as revenue in determining air subsidies. Rejected 22-62, July 9. (See story, p. 575)

99. Air Carriers (S 3449). Williams (R Del.) amendment to deduct capital gains derived from sales of flight equipment reinvested in new equipment from depreciation base of the new equipment for purposes of determining air subsidies; provide for recovery by Treasury of balance of retained capital gains if airline goes off subsidy. Rejected 37-46, July 9.

100. Air Carriers (S 3449). Humphrey (D Minn.) amendment to restrict application of formula in the bill to airlines with annual gross income of less than $50 million. Rejected, 32-43, July 9.

101. Air Carriers (S 3449). Passage of the bill. Passed 53-22, July 9.

CQ House Votes 4 through 7.

[Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 7,8,10,14.)

Colorado River Project, Rubber Plant Sale, Advertised Bids on Defense Contracts Voted

4. Rubber Producing Facilities (H Res 396). Disapprove sale of copolymer plant at Institute, W.Va. Adoption of resolution. Rejected, 61-310, Feb. 8. (See story, p. 593)

5. Military Procurement (HR 8710). Amend the Armed Services Procurement Act of 1947 to deny use of a Presidential emergency proclamation as authority for negotiating contracts instead of letting them through advertised competitive bidding. Passage of bill. Passed 372-2, Feb. 20. (See story, p. 530)

6. Colorado River Storage (H Res 311). To provide for the consideration of HR 3383, a bill to authorize construction of the Colorado River storage project, under an open rule. Adoption of resolution. Adopted, 354-26, Feb. 28.

7. Colorado River Irrigation and Reclamation Project (HR 3383). Passage of bill. Passed, 256-136, March 1. (See story, p. 408)

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 23, 24, 25.)

Omnibus Farm Bill Approved After Recommittal Motion Fails; Military Construction Bill Passed

13. Farm Program (HR 12). Agricultural Act of 1956. Martin (R Mass.) motion to recommit the conference report with instructions to substitute 82.5 percent supports and to delete dual parity provisions, mandatory supports for feed grains and domestic parity plans for wheat and rice. Rejected, 181-238, April 11. (See story, p. 375)

14. Farm Program (HR 12). Adoption of conference report providing 90 percent mandatory supports and including soil bank provisions. Adopted, 237-181, April 11. (For vote on veto, see next chart)

15. Military Construction (HR 9893). Passage of bill to authorize $2 billion for certain construction at military installations. Passed, 377-3, April 12. (See story, p. 567)

CQ House Votes 45 through 48.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 89,90,91,92.)

School Aid Bill Rejected, 194-224, After Powell Amendment Is Adopted, Recommittal Motion Fails

45. School Construction (HR 7535). Gwinn (R N.Y.) amendment to substitute for the state grants formula a plan to finance school construction by paying to each state and territory an amount equal to 1 percent of the federal income taxes collected in the state during the previous calendar year. Rejected 168-250, July 5. (See story, p. 411. For adoption of the rule for debate on the bill, see vote 42, p. 210)

46. School Construction (HR 7535). Powell (D N.Y.) amendment providing that no federal funds shall be allotted or transferred to any state that fails to comply with the decisions of the Supreme Court. Adopted 225-192, July 5.

47. School Construction (HR 7535). McConnell (R Pa.) motion to recommit with instructions to substitute the Administration program. Rejected 158-262, July 5.

48. School Construction (HR 7535). Passage of the bill. Rejected 194-224, July 5. (See story, p. 411)

CQ House Votes 58 through 62.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 106,110,111,112,113)

Civil Rights Recommittal Rejected, Bill Passes; Two Moves to Suspend Rules and Pass Bills Fail

58. House Proceedings. On a motion by Smith (D Va.) to table a motion by McCormack (D Mass.) that further routine proceedings be dispensed with. This was a parliamentary device by Smith to delay House actions, thus delaying consideration of the civil rights bill (HR 627). Rejected 104-290, July 19. (See story, p. 458)

59. Civil Rights (HR 627). Poff (R Va.) motion to recommit the bill to provide means of further securing and protecting the civil rights of persons within the jurisdiction of the U.S. Rejected 131-275, July 23.

60. Civil Rights (HR 627). Passage of the bill. Passed 279-126, July 23.

61. Construction Contract Act (S 1644). To prescribe policy and procedure in connection with construction contracts made by executive agencies. Celler (D N.Y.) motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill. (Two thirds or 263 "yeas" needed for passage.) Rejected 246-145, July 23. (See story, p. 602)

62. Wool Tariff (HR 12227). Cooper (D Tenn.) motion to suspend the rules and pass a bill to amend the Tariff Act of 1930 suspending for three years import duties on certain coarse wool and hair. (Two thirds or 226 "yeas" needed for passage.) Rejected 216-123, July 23. (See story, p. 495)

CQ House Votes 63 through 67.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 115,116,117,119,120.)

U.S. Atomic Reactor Program Killed, Motion Rejected To Cut Out Public Housing, Contempt Citation Voted

63. Congressional Veto Power (HR 7992). Committee amendment requiring the Secretary of Defense to notify Congress of proposed transfer of work to private industry and providing a 60-day period during which either chamber of Congress could veto such transfer by adopting a resolution of disapproval. Agreed to 201-185, July 24. (See story, p. 565) For earlier vote on similar issue, see vote 24, p. 200)

64. Atomic Power (HR 12061). Recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to strike the enacting clause and thus kill a bill to provide for a civilian atomic power acceleration program. Rejected 195-199, July 24. (See story, p. 542)

65. Atomic Power (HR 12061). Van Zandt (R Pa.) motion to recommit. Agreed to 203-191, July 24.

66. Housing (HR 11742). Colmer (D Miss.) amendment to the rule so as to permit an amendment to strike out Title V, authorizing public housing. Rejected 92-299, July 25. (See story, p. 511)

67. Miller Citation (H Res 638). Approving contempt proceedings against Arthur Miller for refusing to answer questions before the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Adopted 373-9, July 25. (See story, p. 588)

23 Bills Vetoed in 1956

President Eisenhower vetoed 23 bills in 1956, 10 of them during the Congressional session, including one pocket veto during the Easter recess. The remaining 13 were pocket vetoed after Congress adjourned. His veto total in four years: 86. In 1955, Mr. Eisenhower vetoed 11 bills, in 1954, 42, and in 1953, 10. (See CQ Almanacs: 1955, p. 387; 1954, p. 409; 1953, p. 310)

In three 1956 cases, Presidential vetoes were followed by passage of revised bills. President Eisenhower vetoed the farm bill (HR 12) April 16 because it was "contradictory and self-defeating." Congress passed a revised bill (HR 10875) which the President signed June 20. The President vetoed a bill for flood damage claims (HR 6421) April 9, but a revised measure (HR 11205) was approved June 27. A military construction bill (HR 9893) was vetoed by the President July 16, but a revised bill (HR 12270) was approved Aug. 3.

Of the vetoed measures, 14 originated in the House, nine in the Senate. Nine of the bills were private measures. Pocket vetoes killed eight House bills, six Senate bills.

The President pocket vetoes a bill by withholding his approval of it after Congress has adjourned. When Congress is in session, a bill becomes law without the President's signature if he does not act upon it within 10 days, excluding Sundays, from the time it is received by him. But if Congress adjourns within that 10-day period, the bill dies by pocket veto if the President fails to sign it.

Regular Vetoes -- House

HR 6645 -- To amend Natural Gas Act to exempt independent producers of natural gas from federal utility rate control. The President, alluding to the $2,500 offered Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) as a campaign contribution by the Superior Oil Co., said he deemed such efforts "so arrogant and so much in defiance of acceptable standards of propriety as to risk creating doubt among the American people concerning the integrity of governmental processes." The House passed the bill July 28, 1955, the Senate Feb. 6, 1956. President Eisenhower vetoed the bill Feb. 17. (See p. 469)

HR 6421 -- To provide payments to 28 individuals in settlement of flood damage claims resulting from activities of the Fish and Wildlife Service in establishing a refuge. The President said the bill failed to establish an adequate basis for appraising the claims and recommended new legislation conferring jurisdiction upon an appropriate court for damage determination. The House passed the bill Feb. 7, the Senate March 26. It was vetoed April 9. A revised bill (HR 11205) was passed by the House May 21, the Senate June 18, and approved June 27.

HR 12 -- Agricultural Act of 1956, providing for a return to rigid 90 percent of parity price supports and use of a dual parity formula, a soil bank program, surplus disposal, marketing quotas and acreage allotments. The President said passage of the bill, even as an emergency measure, "would lead to such serious consequences in additional surpluses and production controls as to further threaten the income and the welfare of our farm people" He said he vetoed it "with intense disappointment and regret." The House passed the bill May 5, 1955, the Senate March 19, 1956. Both chambers agreed to a conference report April 11. It was vetoed April 16. The veto was sustained in the House April 18 by a 202-211 roll-call vote. A revised bill (HR 10875) was passed by Congress May 23 and approved by the President May 28. (See p. 375)

HR 1835 -- To provide tax relief for the Board of Commissioners of Sedgwick County, Kan. In his veto message the President said legislation should be restricted to communities able to demonstrate financial hardship directly attributable to federal removal of real property from the tax rolls, and then only to properties removed from local tax rolls subsequent to June 30, 1950. The bill was passed by the House April 18, 1955, the Senate April 30, 1956. It was vetoed May 22.

HR 1866 -- To provide for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas V. Compton for loss of business and decline of property value through relocation of a highway. The President said payments for such a loss "would, in essence, make the government the guarantor of the stability of property or business values." The bill was passed by the House March 15, 1955, the Senate May 31, 1956. It was vetoed June 18.

HR 9893 -- To authorize construction at military installations. In vetoing the bill, President Eisenhower said while Congress could enact legislation governing the making of government contracts, "it may not constitutionally delegate to its Members or committees the power to make such contracts, either directly or by giving them the authority to approve or disapprove a contract which an executive officer proposes to make." The bill passed the House April 12, the Senate June 28. Both houses agreed to a conference report July 9. It was vetoed July 16. (See p. 567) A revised bill (HR 12270) was passed by the House July 17, the Senate July 26, and approved Aug. 3.

Regular Vetoes -- Senate

SJ Res 135 -- To authorize payments to the Crow Indian Tribe, Mont., for right-of-way for the Yellowtail Dam and Reservoir. In his veto message, the President said the proposed settlement of $5 million was of an "extravagant nature." He said if Congress wanted to provide for an extra payment, because of the land's value as a power site, "it should not be done under the claim that it is 'just compensation'." The bill was passed by the Senate March 16, the House May 7. A conference report was agreed to by the House May 24, the Senate May 25. It was vetoed June 7. (See p. 536)

S 2152 -- To provide relief for the estate of Mrs. Susie Lee Spencer for her death in a Norfolk Navy Yard accident. President Eisenhower, in vetoing the bill, said if Congress wanted to depart from the policy of the Federal Employees' Compensation Act in making a payment to a nondependent husband, "it should do so through general legislation rather than by making individual exceptions" to the Act. The bill was passed by the Senate March 26, the House June 19, and vetoed July 2.

S 2582 -- To confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to adjudicate a disability claim of Capt. William E. Stone arising from failure of the War Department to retire him for physical disability. In his veto, the President said the bill "would discriminate against the many hundreds of individuals whose disability claims were denied" without judicial review and set "an undesirable precedent." The bill was passed by the Senate May 9, the House June 19. It was vetoed July 2.

Pocket Vetoes -- House

HR 3963 -- To grant permanent residence immigration status to Ashot and Ophelia Mnatzakanian. In his veto, President Eisenhower said the value of the educational exchange programs, under which Mnatzakanian came to the United States, would be lost if the programs were used "as an avenue to immigration." He recommended that Congress "enact a clear statutory requirement" that exchange personnel return home and remain there for a minimum period before being eligible to reenter the United States for permanent residence. The bill was passed by the House July 30, 1955, the Senate March 19, 1956. It was pocket vetoed April 2.

HR 4993 -- To authorize the District of Columbia Board of Commissioners to permit certain improvements to two business properties. President Eisenhower, in his veto, said a study for complete revision of D.C. zoning regulations was under way and when completed probably would deal with such properties as those in question. Any earlier single benefits would "frustrate comprehensive planning." The bill was passed by the House June 11, the Senate July 16. It was pocket vetoed July 31.

HR 3210 -- To authorize a three-year test by the State of Illinois and Sanitary District of Chicago of increased diversion of water from Lake Michigan into the Illinois Waterway. President Eisenhower, in withholding his approval of the bill, said since a comprehensive report on the project by the Corps of Engineers was nearing completion, it would be "unwise" to proceed until the report was finished. He said objections had been registered by the Canadian government and the states of Wisconsin, Ohio and New York. The bill was passed by the House July 6, 1955, the Senate July 27, 1956. It was pocket vetoed Aug. 9. (See p. 570) (A similar bill, HR 3300, was pocket vetoed by the President Sept. 3, 1954 -- see 1954 Almanac, p. 519)

HR 7643 -- To amend the Internal Revenue Codes of 1939 and 1954 with respect to foreign tax credit for United Kingdom income tax paid on royalties. President Eisenhower pocket vetoed the bill because "the proposed change would single out for special relief a small group of taxpayers whose need for relief has not been demonstrated." The bill was passed by the House July 21, the Senate July 26. It was pocket vetoed Aug. 10.

HR 12080 -- To authorize appropriations of approximately $1.6 billion for river and harbor and flood-control projects. The President, in his veto, said 32 of the projects, involving over $530 million, had not met requirements for review. Other projects in the bill would be authorized on a basis which "would result in a lesser degree of local participation than was agreed to by the local interests and recommended by the executive branch," he said. The bill was passed by the House July 23, the Senate July 26. A conference report was agreed to by the House and Senate July 27. It was pocket vetoed Aug. 10. (see p. 574)

HR 4392 -- To amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to provide a special method of taxation for real estate investment trusts. In his veto, the President said although the bill was intended to apply only to a small number of trusts it "might well become available" to many real estate companies originally organized as fully taxable corporations. The bill was passed by the House July 23, the Senate July 26. It was pocket vetoed Aug. 10.

HR 10468 and 10662 -- To create Bridge Commissions in the cities of Lawrenceburg and Cannelton, Ind., respectively, and authorize construction of bridges and ferries in their communities. President Eisenhower, in his veto, said there apparently was no urgency demanding special legislation and that construction and operation of interstate bridges "has traditionally been a state rather than a federal responsibility." He said the bills lacked adequate provisions for supervising Bridge Commission activities, which could "lead to serious mismanagement and injury to the public interest." Both bills were passed by the House July 26, the Senate July 27. They were pocket vetoed Aug. 10.

Pocket Vetoes -- Senate

S 1384 -- To provide for the reconveyance to former owners of mineral interests in Mississippi acquired by the government for reservoir projects. The President said, in his veto, that a provision for payment to the United States of an amount equal to the purchase price was based on "the fallacious assumption" that a price had been determined for the mineral interests separate from other interests. Therefore, administration of the legislation would be "confusing and unsatisfactory," he said. The bill was passed by the Senate July 3, the House July 16. It was pocket vetoed July 31.

S 277 -- To provide relief for Mrs. Jean Pfeifer in the death of her son, John S. Inches. In his veto, President Eisenhower said private legislation for belatedly filed claims was "both burdensome and hazardous to the claimant and costly to the public." The President said the revised Social Security Act passed by the 84th Congress (HR 7225) included a provision affording persons in Mrs. Pfeifer's position an opportunity to receive payment upon showing good cause for the belated filing. The bill was passed by the Senate Jan. 16, the House July 17. It was pocket vetoed Aug. 1.

S 2182 -- To provide relief for the City of Elkins, W.Va., in repayment of a $75,000 Reconstruction Finance Corp. loan. President Eisenhower said in his veto that Elkins was the only one of over 500 municipalities building World War II airports to apply to the RFC for a loan. Enactment of the bill, he said, would set a precedent for other communities to urge cancellation of their obligations. The bill was passed by the Senate July 30, 1955, the House July 2, 1956. A conference report was agreed to by both House and Senate July 20. The bill was pocket vetoed Aug. 3.

S J Res 203 -- To set the date of meeting for the 85th Congress. A veto was requested by Congress Aug. 8 when it was discovered the resolution set a convening date which would not allow enough time to count the electoral vote. The vote count date had been set in an earlier resolution (H J Res 517) as 1 P.M., Jan. 7, 1957. S J Res 203 set convening time at noon, Jan. 7, and as it takes more than one hour for a new Congress to get organized, time would have "run out." The pocket veto meant convening time would revert to the Jan. 3 date set by law, which had been changed because it fell near the end of a week. The resolution was passed by the Senate and House July 27 and pocket vetoed Aug. 8.

S 3338 -- To bar electric power rate increases by the Southwestern Power Administration until July 1, 1957.

In his veto, President Eisenhower said the only purpose the bill would serve would be to prevent the Secretary of the Interior from fulfilling his obligations, under the 1944 Flood Control Act, to establish rate schedules. The bill would result in a revenue loss of $2,167,000 during the current fiscal year, he said. The bill was passed by the Senate April 19, the House July 27. It was pocket vetoed Aug. 9. (See p. 569)

S 3941 -- To provide additional time for the validation of mining claims held by persons in New Mexico and Wyoming. The President said in his veto that in some of the cases involved there appeared to be no justification for the delay in validating claims and in others the information was limited. The bill was passed by the Senate July 13, the House July 27. It was pocket vetoed Aug. 9.

Party Splits

President Eisenhower was the 11th chief executive since the Civil War to buck opposition control of one or both chambers of Congress. The accompanying chart shows that, despite his Democratic 84th Congress, the President did not find need for the veto as often as did some of his predecessors. None of his vetoes was overridden.

Grover Cleveland, who used the veto power 584 times against a Congress often dominated by the opposition party, was outdone only by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who refused to sign 631 bills in his 12 years in office.

Andrew Johnson had 15 vetoes overridden, more than any other President. Truman had 12 overridden; Roosevelt, nine; Cleveland, seven; and Wilson, six.

The chart below lists Presidents -- since the Civil War -- who bucked opposition control in Congress, the number of measures they vetoed during their term in office, and the number of those vetoes which were cast when the opposition party controlled one or both chambers of Congress, and the number cast when the President's party controlled Congress.

Legislation Acted On or Submitted in 1956

All public legislation introduced or acted upon during the second session of the 84th Congress is listed on the pages that follow. Private bills and parliamentary resolutions are not included. (For listing of Public Laws, by public law number, see page 230.)

Bills Acted On are listed first, followed by Bills Introduced. Within each section the bills are arranged in these categories:

AGRICULTURE

APPROPRIATIONS

- Housing and Schools
- Safety and Health
- Social Security
- Welfare

FOREIGN POLICY
- Administrative Policy
- Immigration and Naturalization
- International Relations

MILITARY AND VETERANS
- Defense Policy
- Veterans

- Civil Service
- Commemorative
- Congress
- Constitution, Civil Rights
- Crimes, Courts, Prisons
- District of Columbia
- Indian and Territorial Affairs
- Land and Land Transfers
- Post Office
- Presidential Policy
- General

TAXES AND ECONOMIC POLICY
- Business and Banking
- Commerce and Communications
- Natural Resources
- Public Works and Reclamation
- Taxes and Tariffs

Within each category and subcategory are Senate bills in numerical order, followed by House bills. Legislation is described as follows: Bill number, sponsor's name and brief description of provisions.

Bills Introduced show the date of introduction and committee to which each bill was assigned.

Bills sponsored by more than one Senator are listed under the first sponsor, with additional sponsors also listed.

In the House identical bills are sponsored by several Members, but each bill has only one sponsor and one number. In such cases only the first bill introduced -- that with the lowest bill number -- is described in full. Bills introduced subsequently during the year and identical in nature are cited back to the earliest bill.

Bills Acted On include action taken by committees, on the floor of either house, and the Public Law number and date of the President's signature, where applicable.

The pieces of legislation described are of four kinds -- bills and joint resolutions, which can become public law; concurrent resolutions, needing approval by both House and Senate; and simple resolutions, concerning only one chamber. Concurrent and simple resolutions do not become law.

Bills Acted On -- Agriculture

Agriculture bills and resolutions which were reported by committees to the floor of either house are listed below. Those that became public laws are listed first -- under ACTION COMPLETED -- and are followed by those on which Congress did not complete action -- listed under UNFINISHED BUSINESS.
